Supporting Miss Normand in "Suzanna," adapted to the screen by Mack Sennett from the historical novel of the same name by Linton Wells, are Walter McGrail, Leon Bary, George Nichols, Carl Stockdale, George Cooper, Lon Poff, Winifred Bryson, Evelyn Sherman, and many others of equal prominence. F. Richard Jones, director of former Mabel Normand successes, is the director of "Suzanna."

AT THE ROYAL.

"Sign of the Four," Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes' Mystery at the Royal To-night.

The special Holiday programme at the Royal commencing to-day, has for its main attraction Stoll's production of the greatest of all Sherlock Holmes' stories, "The Sign of the Four."

This film prodction is one of the most popular successul motion pictures that was ever exhibited on the other side. Everywhere in England, "The Sign of the Four" played to extended runs and repeat bookings and was met in all cases by a wave of popular enthusiasm and approval. The picture is a big super-production which takes the spectator from the magic land of India to the streets of London and plunges him into a mystery and adventure story, which is colorful, compelling and fascinating. The famous characters of the members of "The Sign of the Four" as so vividly pictured in the book are made to live by the steller actors who make up the cast, and "Sherlock Holmes," "Watson" and the girl in the case are interpreted by no less brilliant performers.

AT THE REGENT.

CHARLES JONES BREAKS SPEED RECORD IN HIS LATEST SCREEN SUCCESS

Fox Favorite Is Seen as Pugnacious Pugilist in "Big Dan."

Social peculiarities and fistic muscularities furnish Charles Jones' most recent William Fox production, "Big Dan," with a speedometer whose average register breaks even that lightning star's record for speed. It is announced as the feature attraction of the Regent Theatre today and Christmas.

Nothing seems more appropriate than a ringside background for Charles Jones. The tall, broad and square-jawed star seems to fit adequately a pugilistic setting. This is provided for him in "Big Dan," whose titular role he takes modestly.

Dan receives a patrimony of a gymnasium and a training camp, all the worldly possessions left behind by his famous pugilist father. Upon returning from service in France, Dan finds that his wife has deserted him. He transforms his country training camp into an outdoor school for boys. Tired of coaching prize-fighters, he remains at his training camp, drowning his sorrow in work. He does not hear from his wife, Nellie.

Through a gruesome tragedy he meets a young, distressed girl. He falls in love with her, but is prevented from declaring himself because of his unfortunate marital experience. "Cyclone," a typically hard-boiled lesser light in fightdom, prevails on Dan to train him for a big night. Dan assents and is furious, later, when he finds "Cyclone" making love to Dora, under whose love he lives. Dan and "Cyclone" finally meet in the ring and one of the fastest and most thrilling battles ever seen on the screen ensues.

The fuel of the ancient Romans was almost exclusively charcoal. This was burned in open pans, without grate or flue, and gave economical heat for living rooms and baths.

TWO WEEKS TERM FOR CAR DRIVER

Crashed With Buggy Last Night While Admittedly Drunk — Companion in Hospital.

"Two weeks with hard labor in the county jail," was the sentence given Frank Willison this morning by Magistrate O. A. Langley, on a charge of driving a car while intoxicated. Edward Cheevers, Willison's companion in the car, is in Nicholls Hospital, too seriously injured to appear. Magistrate Langley said he regretted being compelled to pass a jail sentence on the day before Christmas, but the law is clear and definite, no option being allowed in a case of this kind. The prisoner had no defence.

The police report on the case showed that Willison was driving the car which he owned south on George street at 5.40 last night on the left side of the road near Barnardo avenue when he struck a buggy driven by Thomas McManus on the right side of the road. Miss Allan, who was in the buggy, was thrown to the street and the left rear wheel of the buggy, the reach and the body were badly broken. The car, after the collision, ran over the sidewalk into a tree and stopped on a lawn 75 feet from where the buggy was struck. The car was badly smashed, the running board being torn off and the fender, wind shield and body broken.

Cheevers occupied the seat in front where the impact took place, and was badly cut about the face and hands. Dr. T. W. H. Young was called to the cells and administered aid, afterwards recommending that the man be removed to the hospital for surgical treatment. Cheevers was hurt internally, it was believed.

Police Sergeant Thomas searched the men and found a bottle of liquor in Cheevers' pocket. The car was taken to the police station by Constable G. Puffer, and Constable Welch also attended the scene of the accident.

Willison told the magistrate this morning his home is in Toronto, but he has been employed with Parkers' Dye Works since March. He had no excuse to offer and pleaded guilty.

Mr. Gilliam was then presented with a beautiful Oddfellows' ring.

PETERBORO NOT ABLE TO COUNT ON HARD WOOD

But Plentiful Supply of Mixed Wood is Available for Many Years, Rotary Told.

NOBLE KELLY'S TALK

A most enjoyable talk on the fuel situation was given before the Peterboro Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon to-day by Rotarian Noble Kelly, speaking on his classification Vice-President Reid Wrenn occupied the chair, and there was a fairly large attendance, with a number of visitors, including Rotarian H. F. Kennedy, of Toronto.

At the request of the chairman, Rotarian Rev. W. Harold Young recapitulated some of his points in his Christmas sermon, pointing out that the three essentials to a real celebration of Christmas were to follow a star or, in other words, to live up to an ideal, the giving of gifts and the keening of Christ as the centre of the Christmas celebration.

Rotarian Kelly, after relating some of the amusing features of a retail coal dealer's life, expressed the thanks of his firm to the other coal dealers and transfer men in the city for the splendid assistance given at the time of the fire which destroyed the firm's transportation facilities.

The speaker, referring to the wood situation, said that Peterboro could no longer count on a supply of straight body maple, because maple lumber had at last come into its own and was in demand at a good price. There was, however, an ample supply for many years to come of good mixed wood.

Dealing with the coal question, Rotarian Kelly, quoting a retail price of twenty years ago at $7 a ton, said that the present price of $16.50 was not unreasonable in view of the very heavy increase in the cost of production, caused by the demands of the miners. The wages of the anthracite miners had increased by 188 per cent. during the same period that the wages of industrial workers had only jumped 115 per cent. and railway workers 130 per cent. The cost of labor had been the biggest factor in the increased cost of coal and the operators claimed that they only made 35c a ton profit on their coal.

Rotarian Kelly pointed out that the retail coal dealer was a necessity in every community, because he took care of the smaller industries, the banks, stores, hotels, schools and private houses which had no facilities for storing coal by the ton lot.

In conclusion, the speaker pointed out the economic gain to Canada if it were possible to be independent of the United States so far as her fuel supply was concerned. Many millions of dollars would be kept at home for the benefit of Canadians generally.

Rotarian H. P. Kennedy of Toronto gave a very interesting resume of the live stock situation, which he said was very bad, the Western producers receiving a price much below the cost of production. The only solution, he thought, was that the Western farmer must settle down to mixed farming and to working twelve months in the year, instead of six.

NOMINATIONS IN NORTH MONAGHAN

Nominations for the Council and Reeve of the Township of North Monaghan took place this afternoon at May's school house. A petition quite largely signed by ratepayers of the township asked for a return of the entire personnel of the old council, the reeve and deputy-reeve by acclamation. Nominations, however, were entered for reeve, H. B. Rye (reeve for 1923) and John McIntosh.

The present deputy-reeve, T. E. Lillico, was also re-nominated for his position, and Fred Wilson.

Nominations for the present councillors, R. A. Dobbin, W. Fallis and G. Wood were put in, with a fourth name in Jordan Detlor.

STEAMER MADE A TRIP CHRISTMAS

Peterboro Had a Green Christmas Nearly Half a Century Ago.

It is nearly half a century since Peterboro has quite as "green" a Christmas as this promises to be. On Christmas day of the year 1882, according to several of the older citizens of Peterboro who participated in the event, the Steamer "Whistlewing" was requisitioned for an excursion down the river on the holiday. For three days before Christmas, rain fell heavily, and on the day itself lovers of the sport that was so popular then, croquet, enjoyed several games, played with coats off. The day was bright and quite warm and some adventurous spirits suggested the trip in the steamer which went over the lock and down the river for some distance.

POSTAL CLERKS BUSIEST WHILE SANTA UNLOADS

WERE INUNDATED.

The night before Christmas in the post office is filled with a bustling, feverish industry that shuts out the mystic, silvery tinkle of the bells of Santa Claus. Waves of mail inundate the post machine until its human and mechanical parts seem lost in the flood of letters and parcels that converge in this narrow channel to be distributed to the four winds bearing little messages and tokens of good will and affection that kindle the season's universal fire of love.

But there is no poetry where thousands of letters have to be sorted, and seeming thousands of packages, of variously assorted sizes have to be arranged for their delivery on the holiday. Of letters there had been more than 125,000 registered on the automatic stamper during the week that ended last night. Parcels were uncounted and practically countless. All around the clock, day after day, this rush of mail has been maintained with brief rests in the earlier period of the pre-holiday season, and with none whatever since Thursday.

Work Overtime.

The postal channel has been kept clear only by overtime effort and extra help. It seemed a desperate and hopeless labour, like that of Mrs. Partington attempting to sweep back the sea, as mountains of mail, collected from the city boxes, were piled up in the disordered jumble of their arrival and gradually reduced and swept as they were designated to their destinations and packed in their separate bags, when the outgoing mail hours struck.

Meanwhile these streams had passed in the local office the incoming currents for Peterborough and the neighboring towns. And these equally jumbled piles had to be disentangled or rather re-directed to the homes of Peterborough.

Happy tidings and expressions of joy, with personal remembrances, rub elbows in the mails and pass on in the shuffle, even as the thronging crowds on the last night of shopping elbow and bump each other and pass by, good humoredly perhaps, but strangers, impersonally polite and kind according to the scheme of conventions that determines these affairs.

When the letter carrier delivers your gifts to-morrow, if he has not already done so, you will probably be unaware of the intricate and withal simple system by which the postal service has functioned, on the inside where the clerks preside, with such speed and precision that leaves a visitor in wonder that mistakes are so few.

Propaganda's Results.

The public has apparently corresponded more generally than ever with the Post Office Department in mailing their letters and parcels early. Evidence of this co-operation is found in the wider distribution of the incoming and outgoing mails over the ten days preceding Christmas. It used to be a custom for most persons to despatch their missives for delivery on Christmas Day itself with consequences of congestion in the offices that may be imagined. Now, the packages are sent earlier with bright little stamps requesting the recipients not to open the parcels until Christmas. However, there has been such an increase in the quantity of mail that its expeditious handling has taxed the local staff with all their efficiency, requiring additional hands to lighten the load which may be indicated by the 140 bags that were unloaded from the C.P.R. midnight train Sunday night.

OBREGON CHARGED WITH DOCTORING WAR NEWS

BALLOON STILL MISSING WHILE HOPE RUNS LOW

Position of the French Dirigible Rendered More Uncertain By Doubtful News—No Late Information By Navy Department

REPORTS INCORRECT.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—Hope that the French dirigible balloon Dixmude, last reported floating out of control over the Tunisian coast, will be saved is apparently waning, judging from a communique issued by the Navy Department at seven o'clock last night.

The communique begins: "News this afternoon tends to increase the uncertainty of the Dixmude's position," and then says that information has shown it to be doubtful if the lights reported to have been seen between six and seven o'clock Sunday night could have been from the Dixmude. It is pointed out that the reports did not say the body of the dirigible had been seen Investigation has also shown that the reports from Bizerta and Sfax, on the Tunisian coast, Sunday afternoon, to the effect that the Dixmude was goingout to sea apparently in a damager condition, were incorrect the statement says. The statement adds:

"It results from these facts and the absence of news, which is partly due to the difficulty and slowness of communication, that the greatest uncertainty reigns as to the present situation of the Dixmude."

A wireless message received from Fort Flatters, in the Sahara, Sunday morning, reporting the Dixmude drifting towards the Gulf of Gabes and asking for help seems to have been the last reliable news from the dirigible.

The normal crew of the Dixmude numbers 33, including staff, but 52 men, of whom 17 were officers, started at six o'clock Tuesday of last week, several of them obtaining permission to make the voyage as they were only a few hours short of the fifteen hours flight which is necessary each month to secure a flight premium.

Destroyers Under Steam.

TOULON, France, Dec. 26.—Every torpedo boat destroyer in the harbor is being kept under steam in readiness for a dash to sea in case word is received of the definite location of the missing dirigible Dixmude.

STANWOOD CHEESE FACTORY MEETING

Severed Connection With Campbellford Cheese Board—Personals.

STANWOOD, December 26. — The cheese factory here, according to the report read by the officials at the annual meeting of the patrons, manufactured 84,675 pounds of cheese during the past season, the average pounds of milk required to make a pound of cheese being 11.31. The total receipts for the year were $16,376.56, and the expenses were $2,419.34. The sum of $13,951.57 were paid the 25 patrons of the factory. The number of pounds of butter manufactured was 1778, and the revenue from this source was $500.98.

D. T. Peterick was re-elected president and salesman for the coming year, and T. H. Rowe was re-elected secretary.

The Stanwood factory severed its connection with the Campbellford cheese board early last summer and cast in its lot with the Co-operative Ltd. The patrons figure that they lost in the neighborood of $800 by not adopting this course at the beginning of the season. The average price of the cheese sold here during 1923 was 18.7 cents a pound, about one cent less than was paid by the Co-operative Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McGregor of Campbellford, spent Christmas Day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. MacAlpine.

Canadians Drank Huge Dish of Tea

OTTAWA, December 26. — Canada imported 29,125,147 lbs. of tea during the twelve months ending November, which works out at around 4.4 pounds for every man, woman and child in the Dominion. But Canada's consumption of tea per capita is a long way behind that of Great Britain. There the annual consumption per head is about eight pounds.

EMPLOYMENT IN CANADA DROPS

OTTAWA, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press.)—Employment in all provinces was smaller at the beginning of the month than on November 1, according to official returns from 5,828 employers. These contractions in employment which involved the release of approximately 25,000 persons, caused the index number to decline from 98.8 on November 1 to 95.7 at the commencement of the present month. Employment during the greater part of the year, however, has shown a favorable tendency; the index number, therefore, is slightly higher than on Dec. 1, 1922 and 1921, when it stood at 95.1 and 87.2 respectively

Among provinces, the greatest decrease, of over 10,000 persons, or 4.6 per cent., was recorded during November in Quebec, while in the Prairie Provinces the employers reporting released only about 200 workers or .2 per cent. of their payrolls. Manufacturing and construction showed the largest losses in all districts, although the declines in water transportation in Quebec were very severe owing to the closing of the summer ports. Shipping and stevedoring in the eastern provinces, on the other hand, reported considerable improvement in preparation for the winter's work and coal mining in the same district recorded improvement.

UNBREAKABLE NUTS SOFTENED AT LAST.

Blacksmith's Hammer and Anvil Only Method That Availed--Now Made Over

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Dec. 26.—(Associated Press). — For many years the delicious bush nut of Australia, known variously as the Australian, Queensland and Polar nut, has baffled horticulturists. It had a rare and delicate flavor, was a dish for an epicure, but its shell was about the hardest known to mankind. The size of a small pigeon's egg, brown and shiny, one might jump on it and hammer it with one's heel without leaving the faintest impression, save on the heel. One might put it in the crevice of a door hinge, and it would be the fulcrum to break down the door. Something in the nature of a blacksmith's hammer and anvil was required to smash the shell.

After years of disappointed experiments in various parts of the world, official word comes now that J. S. Waldron, who lives on the north coast of New South Wales, has produced a thin-shelled bush nut. Several plant generations have demonstrated the success of the new nut, according to the Queensland Government botanist and the director of fruit culture, who inspected the Waldron farm.

The made-over bush nut is said to retain the flavor, and the indestructible shell has been replaced by one that may be opened with reasonable facility.

SCHOOL TEACHER WAS FOUND DEAD IN BED.

Miss Vera Langdon, twenty-one, a school teacher, and eldest daughter, came to Trenton on Friday from her school at English Valley, to join the family in the Christmas festivities.

That night with her family and friends she attended the High School commencement. She was in good spirits and enjoyed the performance and meeting her many friends. She retired, her family said, apparently in the best of health.

Next morning she was found dead in bed.

Dr. Farncombe, who was called, said she had been dead for some hours.

There were indications that she had had a recurrence of epileptic fits to which she had been subject in her early girlhood, but from which it had been thought she was now immune. She strangled or choked to death.

CHRISTMAS DAY FOUND GERMANS IN DEEP GLOOM

Chancellor Marx Broadcasts Lugubrious Greetings--Thousands Depend on Foreign Charity For Warm Meal — Admits Defeat.

MORE PRIVATION.

BERLIN, Dec. 26. — Christmas was a gloomy day in Germany. Chancellor Marx motored over to the broadcasting station late in the afternoon and dictated a lugubrious "political Christmas greeting" for the edification of several thousand radio listeners scattered over Germany and nearby states.

"We are an impoverished people —so poor that thousands of our fellow citizens are thankful that they are able to get a warm meal these Christmas days through the munificence of foreign charitable institutions," the Chancellor declared. He made cordial acknowledgement of Scandinavian, Swiss, United States and other outside relief work, and expressed appreciation for the understanding of and sympathy for German distress manifested in those quarters.

Listeners-in were reminded by the Chancellor that the Government's taxation programme and retrenchment policies were destined to bring additional individual privation, but that these were unavoidable if the nation's disrupted economics were to be saved from complete collapse.

Willing To Pay.

Reviewing the situation in the Ruhr and the Rhineland, Chancellor Marx said: "The German people and the German Government propose to meet their reparations obligations to the full extent of their abilities but this would be impossible if we were to be hindered from having full disposition of our most productive areas. Bayonets and oppression will never produce economic results."

He believed that once the people of the Ruhr and Rhineland were granted their freedom they would promptly show their old-time enthusiasm for work, despite their present state of under-nourishment and physical privation.

A Conquered Nation.

"We are a conquered nation," he continued, "but a proud people that demands to live, because it has the right to life, work and happiness. Let us grit our teeth and say that only he is lost who gives up the fight. Let us work and not despair."

Several of the Reichstag leaders also sent Christmas greetings and reflections on the situation over the radio to the listening nation.

PETERBORO WILL BE REPRESENTED

Trent Waterway Will Be Exploited at New York Motor Boat Show.

Through the efforts of Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., the exhibit on the Trent Waterway at the New York Motor Boat Show, has again been assured by the Dominion Government, through the Department of Railways and Canals.

The Motor Boat Show is being held in the Grand Central Palace, New York, between January 4th and 12th, and the New York Motor Show will be held at the same time in Madison Square Gardens.

It is expected that the exhibit will be more attractive than in previous year, and on account of the two shows being at the same time a greater number of Americans will be approached than on any previous occasion.

Mr. Alex Kay, of the Trent Canal Office of this city, will be in charge of the exhibit and will give out full information to the prospective tourist regarding the Trent Waterway. Mr. G. K. Fraser, President, and Mr. L. Frazer, Secretary of the Trent Waterway Development Association, will also assist at the Exhibit, and will also be prepared to give out full information to motor tourists.

Considerable success in the development of the tourist traffic to Central Ontario has followed the Exhibit in New York during the previous years, and it is hoped that this year's exhibit will more than ever justify the appearance of this Canadian exhibit in 1924.

Echo of $59,000 Rum Shipment in Court

SUDBURY, December 26. Canadian Press. — Another echo of the famous $59,000 shipment of illicit liquors to Northern Ontario, of which the provincial police have seized $30,000 worth so far, will be heard in the Sudbury division court on Thursday when the case of the Limousine Taxi Company against Meyer Silverman, for $132, alleged to be due for automobile hire, will come up. Silverman disputes the claim, and in answer says that if trips were made they were for transportation of intoxicating liquor belonging to a Copper Cliff man, who is named.

TEMPEST SWEPT PACIFIC COAST

Five Persons Dead and Damage Amounting to $200,000 Reported From Seattle.

SEATTLE, Dec. 26: — Five lives were taken and damage roughly estimated last night at $200,000, done by a tempest that accompanied Christmas Day to the north Pacific Ocean and the parts of Washington and British Columbia adjacent to Puget Sound and Gray's Harbor.

A tug and a steamer figured in the marine loss, while two ocean-going craft were in peril from which one escaped and from which the other to-night seemed to be gaining its way. Many small boats were wrecked.

80-Mile Wind.

The wind reached eighty miles an hour on Gray's harbour, 45 miles an hour at Port Angeles, on the south side of the Strait of Juan de Fuca, 50 miles at Tacoma, and 66 miles at Seattle. At Seattle and Tacoma these velocities broke the records kept by the United States Government.

The dead were: Gus Quarnstrom, Aberdeen, Wash., electrocuted by a fallen wire, and four members of the crew of the Canadian tug Tyee, which was swept upon the rocks at Pedler Bay, near Victoria, B.C.

STORE WINDOWS BROKEN.

One hundred telephone wires were broken throughout Seattle and twenty plate glass windows shattered by the gale. Street signs and newspaper and mail boats were upset.

A wireless message from the Str. Author adrift with machinery trouble off the Washington coast, said that she was well away from the shore and making 35 miles an hour.

The Nelson steamer Jacox, which was unable to handle the schooner Thistle, which she was towing through the Strait of Juan de Fuca, was proceeding under her own power and convoying the Thistle.

The Thistle, her sails spread, arrived at Port Angeles, on the Strait, later. The Coast Guard cutter Snohomish, joined the Jacox in the convoy.

TAMPER WITH MAIL ON WAY TO RUMANIA

BUCHAREST, Dec. 26.—(Associated Press).—The Rumanian Government is convinced, after a searching investigation, that thefts of currency and valuable documents from American and Canadian mail to persons in Rumania are committed before the mail reaches this country. The investigation resulted from the numerous complaints made by officials and individuals whose mail had been tampered with.

During the investigation a sack of registered mail, shipped on a British steamship from an American port, was opened in the presence of American officials. The sack apparently was in perfect condition, but it was found that a number of the registered letters had been opened in transit and some of the contents taken.

The Rumanian Government has asked the United States Government to start inquiries in that country and with the steamship companies.

BIG INCREASE IN TRADE IN ENGLAND AND IRELAND

LONDON, Dec. 26.—(Associated Press).—The imports from the Irish Free State into Great Britain for October showed an increase of 83 per cent., as compared with the average for the first nine months of the year. While the export trade with the Free State also showed an increase it amounts to only about half the value of the imports.

The total figures of both the imports and exports to this dominion are more than ten times greater than they were two years ago. The imports are principally cattle and swine, poultry, hides and wool.

VENIZELOS WILL RETURN TO ACT ONLY AS GUIDE

Persuaded By Petition From Newly Elected Members of Legislative Assembly—Stay Will Be Temporary.

SOLVE DIFFICULTIES

PARIS, Dec. 26.—Former Premier Venizelos has decided to return to Athens and is leaving Paris for Greece forthwith.

His decision was taken after a delegation which arrived from Athens Monday night had delivered to him Christmas morning a document signed by 270 members of the Legisative Assembly elected last week, urging him to resume charge of the Government and save the country.

Will Not Remain.

Intimation has been received here that Former Premier Venizelos will return to Athens by January 2, the date set for the first meeting of the newly elected National Assembly.

In informing the Government of his decision, Venizelos, however, clearly points out that his return will be only temporary, for the purpose of acting as a guide and adviser in regulating the situation, and that under no circumstances will he undertake the formation of a cabinet.

He will take ship at Marseilles December 29, according to his present plans and he begs that there shall be no public reception.

The former premier explains that his decision to yield to the appeal for his return to Greece was taken after mature reflection and that his only reason for coming for the time being is to help settle the complicated affairs of the Nation. He maintained his previous resolve to keep out of the political arena entirely.

EIGHT PERSONS IN A SUICIDE ATTEMPT

Christmas Cheer Was Too Much for Flock of New Yorkers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26—(Canadian Press). — Despondency, seemingly made more unbearable by scenes of Christmas cheer on all sides, caused eight persons to attempt suicide during the holiday.

Five men inhaled gas, one woman leaped from roof, another woman drank poison and an unidentified man threw himself beneath subway train, railroad officials state. Five died immediately and others are said to be in critical condition.

Those who left notes explaining care free spirit of people they saw on streets going to their Christmas dinners and said that this made them realize their own troubles more than ever before.

MANY GALLONS OF ALE EMPTIED INTO NIAGARA

BRIDGEBURG, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—While the fish in Niagara were regaled to a bath of Canadian ale last week-end, early yesterday they were said by an old riverman to be in a semi-paralyzed mood as over 500 gallons of moonshine whisky, seized by the American dry agents during the past week were consigned to the river. Observers who got a whiff of the stuff did not know who had cause to rejoice, those who were saved from consuming the liquor or the fish. The same observers were inclined to believe that the fish would not be happy.

JEFFERSON, Maine, Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press). — The body of John Snow was exhumed early yesterday from the solitary grave where it was buried on Monday and placed in the cottage where he killed his wife and two other women on Saturday. The house was then set on fire. The charred body was found in the ruins. County Attorney Weston M. Hilton has begun an investigation in an effort to determine who was responsible for this.

MEXICAN REVOLUTIONISTS CLAIM NEW ACCESSIONS OF CAVALRY AND CONTROL OF EXTENSIVE TERRITORY

The Federals Report 1,656 Rebel Soldiers and 28 Officers Captured and 72 Officers and 300 Men Killed in Puebla Engagement.

AMNESTY OFFERED.

MEXICO CITY, December 26 (Canadian Press). — The departure of a column of infantry, cavalry, artillery, and two airplanes, under the command of Generals Roberto Cruz and Fausto Topete toward Tehaucar is reported in Puebla specials received here.

More than 6,000 Federal troops remain in the recaptured city, it is said, with prospects of being sent shortly to Jalisco under the command of Generals Amaro and Escobar.

Publication of an Obregon manifesto granting fifteen days' amnesty to rebellious troops who renounce the rebel movement to reincorporate with the loyal forces is bringing hundreds of dispersed officers and men of the Maycotte-Caitro forces back into the Federal ranks.

Puebla Casualties.

An official report concerning the Puebla engagement from the commander-in-chief, General Eugenio Martinez, given out here, states that 1,656 rebel soldiers and 28 officers were captured, and 72 officers and 300 soldiers were killed.

The Federal losses were 7 officers and 103 soldiers killed.

General Anulfo Gomez, commander-in-chief of the Valley of Mexico, returned to the capital from Puente de Ixtla, in the State of Morelos, where he had led a Federal column against the rebellious General Romulo Figueroa, after a skirmish in which 28 rebels were killed.

Gomez stated that the Figueroa movement make of importance the camoaign which has been entrusted to General Genovevo Loa, Military Commander of Morelos.

Carranza Arrested.

Julio Carranza, brother of the ex-president, has been arrested at Nuevo Laredo with seventy followers, while he was attempting to start a revolt, according to Monterey specials.

Felipe Garrillo Puerto, Socialist Governor of Yucatan, is a refugee at Havana, according to unofficial reports which say that he fled to Havana after a revolt of the Yucatan forces, in which his two brothers Benjamin and Heroalio, were killed.

LEAGUE WANTS CODIFIED LAW.

Thirty Countries Have Signed the Convention For Simplification of Rules.

GENEVA, Dec. 26.—(Associated Press).—Some 30 countries have already signed the convention for the simplication of customs formalities which was recently elaborated at Geneva at an international conference, and copies of the treaty have been forwarded to the United States Government for its general information. An American delegation was present at the conference, though it took no active part and did not vote.

The convention marks progress in what League of Nations officials call the codification of international law, which is now being undertaken step by step by the league. Already about two score conventions have been drafted through the machinery of the league. Seventeen of these concern the protection of labor. Three touch the freedom of communications and transit, and others provide for the creation of the world court of justice, the inclusion of arbitration clauses in commercial contracts, the prevention of traffic in obscene publications and the suppression of traffic in women and children, commonly known as the white slave traffic.

In addition to these general conventions several specific instruments of far reaching importance have been negotiated through the league. The most notable of these is the document which provided for the financial reconstruction of Austria.

Publicity of all tariffs and customs formalities is the fundamental note of the customs convention. Of general interest is the engagement to simplify and make more uniform the rapid delivery of merchandise through customs houses, and the quick inspection of travellers' baggage. Furthermore, the contracting states promise to limit as far as possible the cases where certificates of origin are obligatory in connection with the importation of goods.

Americans Killed In Mexican Train Wrecked by Rebels

EL PASO, Texas, Dec. 26. —More than a dozen were killed, many of them United States citizens, and several injured, when a train was wrecked near Calaya, State of Guananjuato, Mexico, on Monday, according to reports brought here by travellers on the Mexico City-Juarez train late yesterday.

Calaya is about 250 miles north of Mexico City. As communications are interrupted between El Paso and Mexico City, no details of the tragedy have been learned. The spikes holding the rails to the ties were removed by rebel soldiers shortly before the passing of the fast limited train, according to the travellers' statements.

B.C. WILL PRESS FREIGHT CLAIM

Demand For Reduction in Rate Subject of Conference Between Premier Oliver and Hon. J. H. King.

VICTORIA, B. C., December 26.—To find out exactly where British Columbia stands in its long fight for the reduction of freight rates, Premier Oliver left for Victoria last night to confer on the mainland to-day with Hon. J. H. King, the Federal Minister of Public Works.

"We have got a great deal from our rate fight already, but I am not satisfied," said the Premier in announcing that he planned to confer on public matters with Dr. King. "I hope to find out from Dr. King just where we stand in this matter."

The premier will also discuss with Dr. King the removal of customs duties on freight shipped from Eastern Canada to this coast via the Panama Canal.

"The Federal Government has appointed a customs officer in New York at our request but the situation with regard to freight moving through the Panama Canal is not clear," he said.

THREE TIMES SAFER TO RIDE THAN WALK.

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—(United Press).—With nearly 700 automobiles fatalities recorded in Cook County since Jan. 1, a report issued by the county coroner shows it is three times safer to ride in automobiles than to walk.

Motor vehicles in Cook county have killed 539 pedestrians since Dec. 1, 1922. During the same period forty-eight drivers and 148 passengers in autos met death through automobile accidents, seventeen persons working on automobiles were fatally injured and twenty-two passengers in other vehicles were killed.

Forty persons were killed in street car and auto collisions, twice as many as were killed riding in machines struck by trains. The total number of fatalities was 740, as compared to 736 last year.

The report shows 383 "jay-walkers" were killed in accidents in the middle of the block and 304 pedestrians were killed at crossings.

Pleasure cars killed 458 persons. Collision between automobiles cause thirteen deaths, nine bicyclists weer killed and three motorcycle riders were fatally injured.

Fifteen accidents occurred when women were driving, sixty-three drivers were never indentified, four drunken drivers figured in deaths, and out of the drivers held to a coroner's inquest 126 were held criminally responsible.

Of the total killed 228 were children, 175 women and girls were victims, and the remainder men and boys.

S. O. S. CALL FROM SEA.

NEW YORK, December 25. — Government and private radio stations along the Atlantic coast tonight were informed of the receipt by stations here of an S.O.S. call from a ship at sea and were asked to watch for a second call which might give the vessel's position.

When the call was received at the Navy Yard here, the officials prepared several destroyers for a dash to sea should thes hip be found to be within reach of New York waters.

Private Telegrams Enumerate Mexican Provinces in the Hands of de la Huerta — Evacuation of Puebla By Rebels Was Prearranged Strategic Movement.

MARCH ON CAPITAL.

WASHINGON, Dec. 26. —Charges that President Obregon's Ministry of War has been publishing inaccurate reports of the situation in Mexico were contained in private telegrams received here yesterday outlining conditions from the standpoint of the Mexican revoltionary forces:

"Obregon's Minister of War," said a summary has been publishing news wholly inaccurate and cunningly and in a systematic manner has been suppressing the real facts regarding military events.

"He has said nothing up-to-date, for example, regarding our absolute control of the States of Yucatan, with his ex-Governor Carrillo Puerto, in prison Campeche; Quintana Roo, and Tabasco, excepting the city of Villa Hermosa, located in the last named state.

Obregon Loses Cavalry.

"Generals Cavaos and Payana, at the head of their cavalry, have incorporated their commands with our forces, and have already initiated a campaign against the imposition government.

"The evacuation of Puebla was ordered simply as a strategic measure, convenient for the development of a preceived plan adopted at a meeting of generals which recently took place at Esperanza. This evacuation was carried out in good order by our forces who maintained a vigorous exchange of musketry with the enemy forces attacking our cavalry which was protecting the movement

"General Estrada has taken possession of Yurecaro on the Guadalajare-Mexico Railroad, and continues his advance on the capital. General Romulo Figueroa with a column of nine thousand men, well organized continues his march against Mexico City.

Consuls Break Away.

"A sentiment of opposition has broken out in consular service and adhesions to the revolutionary cause by Consuls are continuing. The consuls at Bremen, Cologne, Glasgow, Nueremberg, Frankfort and Copenhagen have just communicated their adhesion to the cause. The consul at Belize, British Honduras, embraced the revolution three days ago.

"Revolutionary forces in Tamaulipas have begun military operations and have cut communication between Laredo and Tampico. General Manuel Char, in Chihushua at a point near Parral took several railway trains and will soon appear at the head of a large force composed of veterans who formerly served under General Villa"

FINANCIAL REGENERATION OF AUSTRIA PROGRESSES

GENEVA, Dec. 26.—(Associated Press).—The League of Nations has received an encouraging report from Vienna on the progress of the regeneration of Austria financially. One of the features of the regeneration was an international loan, secured by the Austrian customs receipts and the tobacco monopoly.

The league's Vienna representatives report that during October the receipts from customs and tobacco aggregated 276,000,000,000 paper crowns, an increase over the average monthly receipts of 87,000,000,000 crowns.

If this income is maintained the total of loans issued or arranged for will be thrice covered.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

The effect of fear on the physical condition of the body is different in the many types or characters of persons. There is, however, a direct psychologic and physiologic relation between fear and health.

Fear in man is caused by outside influences acting on the brain, spinal cord and nervous system. In many cases, it reduces the one afflicted to a condition of almost helplessness and loss of any real determining action in life's battle. Fear of his fellow men, fear of the loss of occupation and consequent poverty, fear of disease with partial or total loss of body efficiency, and fear of death, are some of the causes which determine your health condition.

Then there is the fear of some petty tyrant or loss in the business situation that oft-times, from continued nagging or spying supervision, almost drives one to distraction and a nervous wreck. And there is the fear of social disapproval in women.

Fear is also one of the determining factors in self-preservation, the first law of man. It is in this case not morbid. It is morbid only when inappropriate to the situation which provokes it.z Many impressions of fear are formed in early childhood and are retained and carried through life, greatly to the detriment of health and individual success. "We lose so oft by fearing to attempt."

In another case the foundation of fear may sometimes be the result of the psychologic state of the body. When there is phsycial exhaustion, the tissues respond inadequately to situations requiring powerful and rapid, reaction. The consciousness of this produces an unwillingness to face such situations, hence diffidence, disinterestedness of the "don't care" spirit. If this condition be oft repeated, the individual will become distrustful of himself. In this way, timorousness, diffidence and fear develop in ill-nourished children, underfed women and over-driven, exhausted men.

Do not try to overcome fear by direct opposition. Laugh your fear away or induce some other phase of activity to arouse interest. Don't depend on neighbors or others for opinions. Little as one may realize it, your actions are in this situation the product of fear.

Resolve to be thyself and know that he who finds himself loses his fear.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Peterboro, Dec. 26, 1923.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The elections that are to be held next week should be of great interest to all thoughtful citizens of Peterboro. While the candidature of the aldermen is of great civic importance, it seems to some of us, especially to those of us who work through and in the Local Council of Women, that a still more important thing is the election of the Board of Education. It is a trite and common-place saying, but one, nevertheless, which will bear repetition, that the assets of any city are not, as in our case, its cheap power; not its manifest advantages as the gateway to beautiful scenic travel by land and water; but in the children who go about our streets and grow up in our homes. It is Harry and Jack—yes, and Mary and Isabel, at present blissfully unconscious of care, who are the great, the essential assets of this or any city—those who will in in future govern it, and who will look back, perhaps, with wonder, at the indifference of their mothers especially, to the election of the Board of Education. It is the mother who should consider her vote seriously—it is the mother who pays the first cost.

We need at least one woman on the Board of Education—so much, at least is due us. Could anyone be found more suitable than Mrs. Morris, with her clear view of present conditions, her understanding of the teachers' problems, and her constant and unfailing interest in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the city? Because of the unselfish service she has already rendered, let us show that we appreciate and wish her to continue the same.—Yours truly,

C. T. T.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The religious war as it is called has begun. New York City and all the larger centres in the United States, especially the colleges, are full of the war between those who believe the Bible is not the inspired Word of God and those who do. It is not difficult to see what the outcome of this outbreak must be. It means the smashing of the foundations of evangelical Christianity on the one hand or the triumph of the old faith and its supporters on the other. Such a war is fraught with the direct consequences. It was begun many years ago in America by the people then called infidels and sceptics. Churchgoers will remember how scornfully ministers then spoke of those who did not believe the Bible to be the Word of God. Many years ago when in Scotland I noticed that German scepticism, now called High Criticism, was beginning to take hold of some ministers. It had not then reached America, or at any rate Canada. But very shortly afterwards ministerial scholarship in this country began to find flaws in the Bible. The Higher Criticism got a firm hold in denominational seminaries. Young men graduating from these colleges carried their first hints on how to scoff with them into their country charges. They began to imitate their leaders and to prepare the public mind for the gradual throwing aside of the old ideas that God ruled the world, the destinies of mankind and that He had revealed Himself and the requirements of a Christian life in the Bible. First of all, they taught the people that one fact was worth a dozen fancies and that one drunken man upset the whole theory of divine rule in the world. People carried away with enthusiasm resolved to prohibit what God had made. They poured hatred and contempt upon all things that led the weak and vicious astray. This meant of course that God was to blame for making these things, and once this insane idea took hold of their minds they were prepared to do to God in Nature what their ministers were preparing to do to Him in the Bible, and that was to throw out and trample under foot whatever they disapproved of. It did not take long to show what this must lead to. People set themselves and their ideas up in place of God and His creation and the Revealed Word. The very same things appealed to these "pious" sceptics that appealed to the old-time infidels. God could not be God or He would have prohibited all things which work evil, as if indeed those who did wrong had been led into it by God. The excuse for this super-heated fervour came to be the desire for social service, for communityism (which is the longer form of the word "Communism"). Social service begat collectivism and destroyed individualism until at present, no man is master of his own business, and must bow to the head of the organization which controls him. And as if to show what a farce this attack upon individualism is the head of collectivism must always be an individual. But contradictions do not count with people who are so good that they think themselves better than God and refuse to allow Him to work out the destiny of man as He sees fit. But some will say, does that mean that because God does a thing men may do likewise, that because God made these articles therefore men may trade in them? It does not. But it does mean that while a man may not turn the things of God to man's destruction, what God does with those things must not be interfered with, and therefore what lies between God and man is not the same as that which lies between man and man. We may pass what laws we like to govern public affairs, but the minute we step in between God and the individual in his private capacity we commit that sin which gives birth to all other sins and lands us in that slough of impudent scepticism in which we now are. The courts above are abolished in favor of the courts below. We are henceforth to decide not only for ourselves but what God has done or should do, what He has said and what He should have said. The folly of this Higher Criticism now becomes apparent. Judging the Bible to see if it measures up to our idea of what God should have said is judging God! How do we know (even if not a word of the Bible is true) what God would say? Is any man or woman fool enough to suppose that it requires his or her approval before a book can be pronounced the Word of God Has creation got to be approved of by certain people before it can pass muster? The infidelity of those who are doing these things (often, no doubt, with a good motive) is beyond belief. And then think of the heartbreak that it means to all those whose only hope is the consolation of their relationship to and communion with God through Christ.

J. H. BURNHAM.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—There is a whole lot in all the big papers these days about social service and I wanted to find out what was at the bottom of the new fad, and I found it was only painting up the old cart of charity and good will to make it serve as a band wagon for a lot of people out to advertise themselves, so I did. Now, Mr .Edtior, can't we all go on just as we always were doing, giving help and lots of it to them that need it and not handing out doles of stuff that, as the Salvation Army says in England, is making lazy paupers out of the people.

Whenever ye see people coming along with an organized business arrangement for doing good works now, look out for them. They have got a bug as sure as I'm telling you they've got a bug and what d'ye suppose all this criticising God as if He was writing dime novels and not knowing whether He should be let into the library or not. Now what d'ye suppose it is? A bug. Just as sure as I'm telling ye it's a bug. And when Mrs. Pinhead looks around the dirty world and says I'll clean this house the way it ought to be cleaned and holds the noses of the people and gives them castor oil and takes away their playthings so that they can't hurt themselves and sets herself up as boss, now what do you think that is? A bug. Nothin else. If we don't get rid of the bugs we're bust.

Among the selections rendered by the choir were Tovi's "Sing O'Heavens," The Hallelujah Chorus," and other selections from the Messiah. A Christmas Anthem by Sir John Strainer; Christ-Carols and other music. The pastor Rev. R. E. Stillman gave a message appropriate to the day and occasion.

St. Andrews Presbyterian.

At St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, the pastor Rev. D. A. Bremner took as his theme in the morning service, "The Child Jesus, the King of Kings," exalting the sovereignty of the Holy Babe, who on Christmas Day was born in Bethlehem's manger. In the evening, his subject was "The Song of the Angels," at Bethelhem." The choir under the direction of Mr. Wm. Duncan, the newly appointed organist, gave a good programme of Christmas music.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Holiday Visitors Were Numerous — County Gets a Grant-Personals

CAMPBELLFORD, December 26.—Every train that stopped at the depot here on Monday brought a crowd of visitors to town, and as many residents left on the same train to spend Christmas with friends in other places. Yesterday was a quiet day in town, but the Christmas spirit was in evidence everywhere.

The merchants did not suffer lack of patronage on account of the absence of snow, although the demand for the heavy goods usually handled at this season may have fallen off. One optimistic dealer said that the bare roads were really a blessing to the business men, as the automobiles can come to town from greater distances than can be travelled by cutters and sleighs.

It was certainly different from the Christmas of a year ago, when there was ice on the rinks, when the curlers opened the season, and skating was the chief pastime of the young people.

At the Baptist Church.

Christmas services were enjoyed by the congregation of the Campbellford Baptist Church both morning and evening on Sunday. In the morning the message of the pastor, Rev. H. S. Bennett was based on the work of Isaiah 42, 1: "Behold my servant whom I uphold; mine elect in whom my soul delighteth."

The choir rendered two splendid anthems, "Hark the Glad Sound" (F. C. Maker) and "Angels of Light" (Adam Geibel).

The large congregation gathered in the evening when Mr. Bennet's theme was "His name called Jesus," based on the words of the angel to Joseph in Matthew 1, 21.

During the offering the choir, under the leadership of R. C. Weston, very effectively rendered the anthem, "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," and at the close of the sermon, "Hear the Bells."

The general feeling among the worshippers was that the services would help very materially in fostering the true thought and spirit of Christmas.

Reeve Anderson has received another letter from Engineer Muir of the department of Highways in which he states that it has been decided to pay the United County of Northumberland and Durham, the $400 for the construction of a culvert on the County Provincial Highway within the town limits. The grant was held up on the report of the inspecting engineer that the work was not according to the required specification. The town was paid the money by the Counties Council but the latter was in danger of losing the amount until Reeve Anderson interested himself in the case.

Engineer Muir states that in future on work on these highways must be done according to the instructions of the department officials and failing this, all Government grants will be withheld.

EUROPE IS AWAKENING FROM HER NIGHTMARES

Several Times Alarmed During the Past Year, Europe Is Slowly Regaining Her Prestige and Complacency.

By J. W. T. MASON.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(United Press).—This year's New Year will find Europe in a more satisfactory condition than at any time since the ending of the World War. Europe is living ,lose; but Europe is living.

There is distress in many parts of Europe. There never was a time in European history when distress wasn't the common lot for a large part of the people. But also there never before has been a time like the present when there are such good reasons to believe that the reactionary causes of distress, due to selfish and idle wealthy may be made to vanish, in part permanently.

Europe, stripped by the war, is re-clothing itself and is insisting on a fairer division of what there is to go round than ever before. There has never been such hope for the masses of Europe before as exists this New Year. They have found that they have the strength to govern, at least as well as the privileged classes who heretofore have insisted that only themselves have the God-given right to control national destinies.

Failure of Communism.

The collapse of communistic theories in Russia, so apparent this New Year has had a stabilizing effect upon labor leaders generally throughout Europe. Rash experiments, based purely on theoretical book knowledge, are not likely to be pushed forward by labor. It is very significant that in this month's British general election, though the Labor Party came through with such success, every communistic candidate was defeated at the polls.

The Fascisti movement in Italy and its like organization, the Somatin, in Spain, have not only a large labor following, but are now moving away from their initial positions as strictly middle class protective associations. They are veering more and more in the direction of co-operation with labor, and, to continue to exist, must prove still further in the same way.

In Germany a saddlemaker continues to be president of the republic. H has handled the very delicate situations resulting from frequent cabinet resignations with such success as to demonstrate that German labor politicians, though trained in the extreme school of socialism become sobered by responsibility and trustworthy when they take office. President Ebert, this Yuletime, has deserved well of St. Nicholas and deserved better of his fellow followers.

Most Progressive State.

Czecho Slovakia has made the most progressive development since the war of any of the small nations which the war created. The Czecho-Slovakia government is entirely amenable to the demands of labor and has adopted far reaching legislation for improving the condition of the working people.

In France labor matters have been subordinated to the national fear of Germany and to reagating to the background by general consent all contentious domestic problems until the reparations issue is settled. Nevertheless, by the simple operation of post-war events the working people of France have never been so prosperous as they are now.

MILLBROOK SCHOOL HAD GOOD CONCERT

Editor of the School Paper Resigns — Millbrook News.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 26. — The closing exercises of the Continuation School, held on Friday afternoon, included the usual programme by the Litreary Society and a Christmas Tree with a gift for everyone. The two teachers, Miss H. Todd and Miss K. Sutton each received a large box of chocolates as their personal gift from the pupils of the school. Ernest Burnham, wearing the regulation bright red, fur-trimmed costume, with white wig and long beard, filled the role of Santa Claus when the tree was unloaded.

As each pupil had previously drawn a slip bearing the name of the one for whom they were to provide a gift, much merriment was caused as the various parcels were unwrapped and the donor's identity discovered. "Fits and Misfits" was the title suggested as most appropriate to the result.

After an opening chorus by the school, the minutes were read and business discussed, one important item being the resignation of Luella Shaw, editor of the M.C.S. paper, the "Fortnightly Star." No immediate action was taken. The remainder of the programme was:

Recitation, "The Awful Task" by Vera Weeks.
Reading, "The Ruggles' Dinner Party," by Jean Burnham.
Piano solo by Gladys Tucker.
Chorus, "The Merry Farmer Lad," by the school choir.
Reading of the "Fortnightly Star," by Luella Shaw.
Chorus, "With Sleds and Bells," by the choir.

Refreshments were served at the close and a dance enjoyed before the social hour was brought to a close. School will re-open on Monday, January 7th, 1924.

At Quay's School.

The pupils of Quay's school, of which Miss Olive Elson, of Millbrook, is the teacher, held their annual Christmas Tree and entertainment on Friday evening. ADVERTISING THE WATERWAY.

The announcement that the Dominion Government's display in connection with the Trent Waterway is to be shown again at the New York Motor Boat Show early next month is of much interest to Peterborough.

The further statement that Mr. Alex. Kay of the local Trent Canal office is to be in charge of the exhibit is even more welcome inasmuch as it ensures the presence of an official who is thoroughly familiar with every inch of the waterway and who is therefore in a position to give full and accurate information to the prospective tourists.

With Messrs. G. K. Fraser, President, and L. Frazer, Secretary, of the Trent Waterway Development Association also on hand to supply information, the exhibit should be of very material assistance in bringing the Trent Waterway before the very class of people it is most desired to interest in this route, and the result should be a very material increase in the number of smart motor craft plying these waters next summer.

Directly or indirectly, the tourist traffic benefits the whole district, and the enterprise of the association in securing this exhibit for the New York show is another proof of the usefulness of the organization and its capability for service.

The exhibit last January was responsible for a marked increased in tourist traffic, and there is every reason to expect even better results from next month's effort.

COST OF GOVERNMENT.

Seeing that Canada is saddled with exactly the same problem and that much of our heavy burden of taxation is due to the cost of government, Examiner readers should be interested in some findings of the National Industrial Conference Board of the United States, which has had a staff of experts engaged in the study of problems of taxation.

It has been discovered that the annual cost of salaries paid directly to active and inactive permanent employees is $91 for every person over ten years of age in the Republic, gainfully employed.

There are 2,700,000 public servants on the pay-roll of National, State and municipal Governments, and they receive annually $3,500,000,000, while pensioners and other inactive persons number 670,000, and draw annually $320,000,000.

The cost of the public pay-roll is $34 a year for every man, woman and child in the United States, and the total equals 46 per cent. of the amount paid in wages by all the factories in the country, producing goods annually in excess of $5,000.

One adult out of every twenty is on the pay-roll of county, city, State or Federal Governments.

Conditions in Canada may not be quite as bad as that, but there is no disputing the fact that we are suffering from too much government and too great an indulgence in law-making.

A GOOD OPPORTUNITY.

There is an opportunity offered by the election for the Board of Education to get a more or less accurate line upon the views of the ratepayers in regard to the Collegiate Institute and Technical School question.

This chance to test public opinion as to which course of action is more generally favoured, it is hoped will not be missed.

It, however, can only be taken advantage of if the ten candidates who are in the field will come out with a straightforward declaration of where they stand.

The division of the field into groups favouring one or other of the various policies possible will alone make it feasible to gauge the views of the public.

Otherwise nothing will be gained, for if the candidates indulge only in generalities and evade the main issue the verdict will be based on personalities rather than policies, and will be of little practical value so far as the question of additional school accomodation is concerned.

This is a question in which the public should be most deeply interested, and the aspirants for the Board of Education should feel it their duty under the circumstances to meet the issue squarely.

There should not be any side-stepping, and the candidate who attempts this form of electioneering should be left at home.

Mr. Ernest Reid, one of the new candidates to the board, is the only aspirant among those whose election cards were published on Monday to state his position definitely.

He declares himself in favour of technical education and a combined Collegiate Institute and Technical School extension, but expresses himself as opposed to any expenditure in building at present unless convinced that it is absolutely necessary.

That is straightforward and to the point.

The electors know what to expect from Mr. Reid; will the other candidates be as equally frank?

CHOOSING A MAYOR.

The thing that sometimes makes it difficut to secure the election of the best qualified candidates for municipal office is the tendency on the part of many electors to magnify the importance of trivial little personal matters in connection with the aspirants and to overlook altogether the duties of the position to be filled and the capabilities of the candidates so far as the discharge of such duties is concerned.

As a rule when a big business concern is looking for an executive they don't worry very much about a man's politics, or his church affiliations, or what lodge he belongs to, or even how he parts his hair and shakes hands.

They want a man big enough to handle his job, and they weed out the applicants with ability as the yard-stick.

If the electors of Peterborough could be induced to look at the mayoralty campaign in the same light it would be a very lucky thing for this city.

Here is Peterborough, a city of 22,000, with expenditures each year amounting to many thousands of dollars, a great big industry affecting the lives of every citizen, dealing with their problems, their living conditions, their protection against crooks and against fire, their health the sidewalks and roads over which they travel, the parks in which they spend their leisure time, spending the money of the people on every hand.

As a shareholder in such a business every ratepayer, you would imagine, would be hot-foot after the best brains and ability in the community to act as chief executive officer.

Every shareholder should be—and in the case of a private firm in which he was interested, would probably proclaim his indignation from the house-tops if a weakling by some miracle happened to be chosen as managing director.

But in the biggest industry of all and the one that affects him the most the average ratepayer is liable to overlook all these things and vote for an inefficient candidate merely on some unimportant grounds.

With three candidates in the running on this occasion the electors should exercise great care in making their choice, keeping in mind the main issue that Peterborough's problems require the best Mayor that is available.

OUT OF IT 30 YEARS.

A man passed through Hamilton a day or so ago; for the last 30 years he had been in a U. S. prison, placed there on a charge of murder. He went in at the age of 18—now he is 48.

To a reporter who found him he admitted that he was at a loss to know what to do, says the London Advertiser. He is free, yet afraid; he finds everything different to what it was when he went in to prison.

He has been shut in from the world since 1890, and a lot of water has gone under the mill since then. The automobile as an experiment then; in Canada they were unknown. Marconi may have been thinking of his invention then, but the wireless and the radio receivers have swept in in only the last few years. The South African war and the great World War have both been since then. President McKinley was shot while this man was in jail and Sir John A. Macdonald was nearing the end of his term of office at Ottawa. Since then Canada has had eight Premiers, Abbott, Thompson, Bowell, Tupper, Laurier, Borden, Meighen and King.

When the hand of the law put him behind the bars, a man making $1,000 a year was looked upon as quite well-to-do. The milkmen charged five cents a quart and the baker five cents a loaf. A mechanic got along on $1.50 to $2 a day.

In 1890 London was a city of 30,000 people and a tax rate of 12 4-10 mills on the dollar; its total school tax in that year was $61,395.

Yes, this man comes to a new and a strange world. He will see bobbed hair and think it strange; he will look in vain for the strip of copper on the toes of boys' boots; he will gaze at women wearing furs in summer and bare necks in winter; he will ask the young man what has become of the old paper collar, and he may inquire if they use vaseline or soft butter to keep their hair combed back so sleek. He may go into a hotel and look around for the old free lunch of crackers and cheese.

Taking 30 years out of a man's life and then turning him loose in a new and a much speeded-up world—well, you can't wonder at it when the ex-prisoner says he feels lost.

TROUBLE IN AFGHANISTAN.

After a year of comparative quiescence the Afghan is again growing restless on the border and the old marauding expeditions which for years past have troubled the British Government have once more become front page news.

The first official duty of the Prince of Wales during his tour in India was the conclusion of the treaty between Britain and the Amir which a British mission under Sir Henry Dobbs had brought to fruition after months of negotiations. This treaty recognized the essential community of interest between the British Empire and Afghanistan. The Amir agreed to the abolition of certain Russian consulates in their eastern territory which had been the centres of distribution of anti-British propaganda by the well paid Soviet emissaries. The subsidy which the British Government formerly paid to the Amir, but which he forfeited on his invasion of India in 1919, was not restored, but in exchange the complete independence of the country was recognized and four months later a representative of Afghanistan formally took his place at the Court of St. James.

By that treaty the Afghan Government was granted permission to import munitions of war through India, although a wise proviso was inserted that such importation might be held up if the arms were being turned against the British on delivery.

The relations between Afghanistan and Britain during the last century have been full of color and full of action, which too often has meant drama and sometimes stark tragedy. There have been at least three wars as well as scores of small punitive expeditions while these big and turbulent folk who claim descent from King Saul and whom the Amir holds only nominally in leash have done much to complicate the ever-restless conditions along India's border, which Kipling wrote of so entertainingly when he introduced to us in Kim and his lama Maahbub and the Babu.

In that rugged belt of tumbled hills and forbidding mountains which are flung around the north and west of that vast Empire over which Britain has held suzerain power since the day of John Company, the fierce clansmen defying all rules of order and civilization have intrigued with Russia. Never a year has passed without raids from the tribesmen which have varied in intensity according to the degree of want existing among their families. These sporadic outbreaks rarely take the form of murdering British residents, as they have done during the last month, and the violence of the present disturbance points to the fact that Bolshevik money and Bolshevik brains are directing the operations.

The Soviet Government knew where to strike at British power and British prestige most effectively. They can get a better run for their money in Afghanistan than anywhere else at a lower cost. They have noted the trend of events in Egypt and in India and that the British taxpayer is growing less and less inclined to issue law and furnish police in the far flung corners of the world. It is only when British officers are murdered and British lives endangered that the White Man's burden must be shouldered once more.—Montreal Star.

PARIS GREEN IS MADE IN PLANT NEAR MARMORA

Nearly 2,500 Tons a Year Produced By the Deloro Manufacturing Co. — Christmas Concert.

NEWS FROM EAST.

MARMORA, Dec. 25.—Few realize the importance of an industry which in the last few years has sprung up, almost at our very door. That is, the manufacturing of Paris Green, by the Deloro Manfacturing Co., Deloro, Ont. The company has a very large plant there, with a capacity of almost 2000 or 2500 tons of insecticides per year. The raw arsenic is obtained right on the spot from the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company which manufactures it as a by-product in the refining of silver ore from Northern Ontario.

A spacious warehouse was erected last summer to provide for the increasing business.

The plant has excellent railway connections as a spare line from the C. N. R. from Marmora station serves both the Deloro Manufacturing Co., and the Deloro Smelting and Refining Co.

This industry has a bright future in sight as the products are always in demand a great quantity being sold in the West and as an agitation is on foot to remove import duty on insecticides entering the United States, it is still more promising.

JURY DUTY DISLIKED BY SOME IRISH WOMEN

DUBLIN, Dec. 26.—(Associated Press).—Women are now liable to serve on juries in the Free State, but they do not all like their new responsibility. They say it interferes with their domestic duties, and is especially objectionable when it involves the trial of unpleasant sexual cases.

The sheriff of Dublin, Dr. Lorcan Sherlock, suggests that a bill be passed making optional the service of women on juries, only those serving who have notified the authorities of their desire to do so.

APPEAL HEARD COUNTY COURT

Assessment Disputes Disposed of By Judge Huycke

The following assessment appeals were disposed of by Judge Huycke in the County Court.

This is an appeal by John E. Hayes for reduction of assessment on certain land and buildings on the east side of Water Street or the River Road in the north part of the City.

The building is an uncompleted building, which was begun for what was known as the Red Arrow Tire Company, but discontinued. The assessment fixed by the Assessor was for the land $4,500.00, and the buildings $10,500., a total of $15,000.00. This was reduced by the Court of Revision to $4,500.00 for the land, and $5,500.00 for the buildings, a total of $10,000.00. From this Mr. Hayes appeals.

It was shown that something over a year ago this property was sold by public auction for $17,000.00. This particular property included some building material which is not now part of the assessed property, but up to what extent is not shown. It is further shown that the appellant has tried to sell the property, asking a large sum for it, and in this he is quite justified. There is no doubt that the inherent value of the property is much more than any of the sums mentioned. The only question is—What is its actual value at the present time, within the meaning of the Statute? If the whole thing has to be scrapped, it is possible it might be worth less than the assessment. It is not to my mind, however, conclusive that it must be so scrapper; so recent a sale as the auction sale spoken of would indicate the contrary. It is possible, perhaps probable, that in the near future some person, or company, might be found who could utilize the building in its present condition and complete it for valuable purposes. If this could be done the $10,000.00 would be a very low valuation. In any case the sale is so recent as to prohibit further reduction at present.

The appeal must be dismissed. No order as to costs.

DATED at Peterborough this 22nd. day of December, 1923.

JUDGE HUYCKE.

Canadian National Railway.

This is an appeal by the Canadian National Railway from the assessment for business tax on what was formerly the Canadian Express Company in the city.

Express Companies are liable to assessment, both for actual value of property and business tax. It is shown, however, that 13 and 14, Geo. V, 1913, Cap. 7, the Act respecting the Canadian National Railways, provides that the said Railway Company is authorized to carry on the Express Company business and make it a part of their business. This it is shown they are now doing, and the business formerly operated by the Canadian Express Company, is now part and parcel of the business of the Railway itself, as provided by the Statute.

Section 47 of the Assessment Act, and its various sub-sections, indicate the law providing for assessment and taxation of Railways, and by s.s. 5 it is expressely provided that a Railway Company assessed under this section shall be exempt from assessment in any other manner for municipad purposes except for local improvements. This prohibits, in my judgment, any assessment in the way of a business assessment for the alleged Express Company business.

The appeal must, therefore, be allowed. No order as to costs.

DATED at Peterborough this 22nd. day of December, 1923.

JUDGE HUYCKE.

The Barnardo Home.

This is an appeal from an assessment, which assessment was confirmed by the Court of Revision.

The Barnardo Home Management appeal to me on two grounds. One is that their property in Peterborough is wholly exempt, and, Secondly, if not exempt, that the assessment is too high.

Their appeal for total exemption is founded on the Assessment Act, Section 5, s.s 9. The Institution undoubtedly does come under that section, provided the property was used for the purpose mentioned. Unfortunately the Management left the Peterborough property something over a year ago and it is now vacant. That, I think, brings it within Section 9 of the Assessment Act. This property was used for a purpose which would entitle it to exemption under Section 5, and it has now ceased to be so used, therefore, the exemption ceases. The only attempt to indicate that it was still so used, was the fact that last year some little fruit was grown on the land, or garden, adjacent to the building in Peterborough, and this fruit was canned and sent to Toronto, the present headquarters of the Home. I cannot think that is a sufficient use to keep the property within the exempting clause. The appellant's remedy is to again use the property for its original purpose, which the Superintendent said was in contemplation, if that were done, of course the exemption would again operate automatically.

As to the second ground—I think the appellant must have some relief. The assessment is for $30,000.00, land $6,000.000 and buildings $24,000.00. Various valuations of the land were put in, varying from $6,000.00 to $10,000.00 No one placed the value at more than $10,000.00. The whole property stands in the books of the appellant's at $30,000. with contents, and these contents have been removed. The Superintendent, Mr. Hobday, too gave evidence that they have been trying to sell the property, but so far have received no offer, and he would recommend a sale at $20,000.00, if it could be obtained.

The weight of evidence before me indicates clearly that $20,000.00 would be a good sale for the whole property, and I have some doubt whether or not the value of the land is increased by the buildings to the extent of $14,000.00. I accept and adopt the evidence of Mr. O'Connell, and reduce the assessment to $20,000.00 in all. Of this $6,000.00 may remain on the land as fixed by the Assessor, and the balance, $14,000.00 on the buildings.

No order as to costs.

FORMAL TRIUMPH DECLARES SOVIET

Passage Quoted Which Started Controversy at Washington.

MOSCOW, Dec. 26.—M. Steklov, editor of the Soviet organ Izvestia, declared in yesterdays' issue of the paper that the American Secretary of State could claim only "a formal triumph" in his quotation of an article from Izvestia of Nov. 7, 1922, to substanate his charge that the Soviets conducted active revolutionary propaganda in the United States and that there was no real difference between the Communist International and the Soviet Government. M. Stoklov also accused Secretary Hughes of damaging the sense of the article.

"Mr. Hughes," writes the editor, "having extracted a few lines out of the general context of the article, added several lines of his own, thus changing the sense. Despite the external coincidence of the separate words, I still categorically declare that, by citing my words in the manner Mr. Hughes did, he consciously committed forgery."

Comparing extracts from the article of Nov .1922, with the wording cited by Secretary Hughes, M. Steklov attributed the following to Mr. Hughes' own authorship: "If even both sides would disavow their existing connection, the same is evident to anyone as an unrepudiable fact."

"(The passage in question as contained in a translation of the article made public in Washington by the State Department and also in a newspaper translation from the files of Izvestia in the New York Public Library was as follows:

"But, however, we may look upon the chronological succession of events and on their historical sequence, the close organic and spiritual bond between the Soviet Republic, product of the October revolution ,and the communist international cannot be doubted .And even if the connection had not been admitted many times by both sides, it would, nevertheless, be clear to all, and as an established fact. It is clear to us as to our enemies.")

FIRE DESTROYED KITCHENER MILL

KITCHENER, Dec .24.—(Canadian Press.) —Fire completely destroyed the city mills of the Master Milling Company Ltd., shortly after three o'clock this morning. The loss which is partially covered by insurance, is estimated at $50,000. The cause of the blaze is not definitely known, but it is believed it started in the electric wiring in the vicinity of the fly wheel. Flames spread rapidly, barely giving the employees who were working on the night shift, time to escape from the building. The structure was of frame construction and only the walls are left standing. The interior is completely gutted. Tons of bran and feed and the basement supports of the building are still smouldering this morning. The fire department remains on the scene with three streams of water playing on the ruins.

Mrs. Ryley in a few well chosen words thanked the class for the gift, not so much for its value, but as a reminder of the pleasant connections existing between class and teacher and trusted the same pleasant conditions would continue for the coming year.

SCHOOL PROBLEMS ENGAGE HASTINGS

High School Impracticable and Children Are Compelled to Go a Long Distance--Continuatiou School Suggested.

HASTINGS, Dec. 26.—Twenty boys and girls leave this village on the morning train to attend the High School at Campbellford, returning in the evening. Fifteen leave on the stage for the Norwood High School, a cold winter ride of six miles there and six back every day. The students who go to Campbellford reach the school at about 10 o'clock and are obliged to remain in that town after the school is dismissed, until the train leaves at 7 o'clock for their home village. That fact is regarded as the greatest hardship which they are called upon to endure.

Naturally the parents of these children are not satisfied with existing conditions. The expense of the daily trip is considerable, but what is worse is to have the young boys and girls at large in a town, even if that town is Campbellford, for three hours every evening, practically without supervision. These parents would like to see a high school in Hastings, but the law says that no such institution can be established in a municipality that has a population less than 1,000.

Hastings, however, can, if the ratepayers so elect, have a continuation school, and this subject has been recently revived by the School Board. A high school could be established providing a district with the required population could be formed by taking in several of the adjoining sections, but this plan is not regarded as feasible.

New Building Needed.

The Hastings Public School now has 103 pupils on the roll, and for these there are only two teachers, T. W. Chaplin, the teacher, who is President of the Teachers' Association, and Miss A. M. Spiers, in charge of the primary department. The regulations set 35 as the maximum number of pupils for a teacher. The building is antiquated, poorly ventilated and indifferently lighted and several outbreaks of scarlet fever have been traced to this source.

The lower story of the Public School was put up in 1863, and another story was added when the growing school population of the village made an addition necessary.

There is also a Separate School in Hastings, with one teacher and 30 pupils, and its supporters are as much in favor of local facilities for secondary education as are any of the residents who have a practical interest in the question.

Some Favor Consolidation.

Some of the rural schools in the vicinity of this village are sparsely attended. In one case there are only 10 pupils registered, and the teacher is paid a salary of $1,000 a year. There are ratepayers who believe that a consolidated school in Hastings would solve the educational problem.

What the Board Did.

The Hastings School Board is composed of C. R. Fowlds, Chairman; H. B. Wilson, Secretary-Treasurer; A. E. Spooner, W. A. Baker, Harry Dodd and George Whitred. Early in the autumn the members planned a tour of inspection of the school buildings, all new and up to date, in Belleville, Brighton and Trenton, but for some reason, due, it is said, to unfavorable weather, this plan was not carried out.

Matter Still In Obeyance.

In every community there are always vigorous opponents to school extension as involving needless expense, and Hastings is no exception to the rule. The board wrote Major Belford, M.L.A., asking what the village might expect from the Department of Education in the way of grants for a continuation school, and the Major turned the communication over to the Minister of Education, who furnished the desired information. That is the status of the school question in Hastings today.

If the School Board decided to put up a new building with rooms for a continuation school and asked the Village Council to issue the necessary debentures the Council could concur in or refuse the request. In the latter event the board could compel the Council to submit the question to a vote of the ratepayers, as authorities on the school law hold that in this regard high and continuation schools are in the same class.

Village Has Little Debt.

If there is any municipality in Ontario able to undertake public works Hastings certainly is. The only debenture debt of the village is $480. The rate of taxation for Separate School supporters is 33 mills, and for Public School supporters 38 mills, and these figures are based on an assessment that is regarded as less than 50 per cent. of the property.

In spite of the handicap under which they are working, the teachers manage to keep the Hastings school well to the front. Principal Chaplin has 19 in the entrance class. Last summer all but one of his pupils who wrote at the entrance was successful, and the one who failed had been absent from school for a considerable portion of the term.

Special Services.

The services at the Methodist Church on Sunday were suitable to the Christmas season, and good congregations were in attendance. In the morning the pastor, Rev. W. Elliott, spoke on the "Angel Song," Luke 2:14. The birth of Christ put the angels singing and they came to earth to sing their song. The earth took up the song and has been singing it ever since, for since that day the earth has had something to sing about. The first part of the song was an angelic ascription of praise to God; even angels were full of praise at the thought of His coming and His prospective missions. But this also seemed to be a prediction that God was to be glorified by the coming of Jesus into the world. And He surely has been, and will continue to be. He has been glorified by the successful working of a plan to enlighten and save the world. He will be glorified by the ascending praise through Jesus Christ. He will be worshipped by the lowly and by the great assembled congregations. He will be worshipped and glorified by hearts and voices in every land and nation, and then, finally, in the heavenly temple by the assembled hosts, He will be glorified through unending ages. But the song contains another prediction, that of peace on earth. Praise shall ascend to heaven from earth and peace shall descend to earth from heaven. A distinctive feature of Christ's kingdom is peace. It will be peace between God and man, between man and man, and between nation and nation. Christ and Christianity are the hope of the world. Peace will come to earth when the nations become Christ-like in spirit and are governed by the Christ principles.

The musical programme for the morning was:

Organ voluntaries — "Pastoral Symphony" (Handel).
"Fantasia on Ancient Carols" (Messiah)—Terlius Noble.
"And the Glory" (Handel).
Anthem—"Christians, Awake!" J. H. Maunder, (solo by Mrs. Fred. Smith).
Anthem—"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings", Norman Churchill, (solo by Mr. W. Collison).

In the evening the pastor spoke upon Luke 2:7. "No Room."

The firmament sent a star to guide the Wise Men to Bethlehem, heaven sent a choir to sing the first Christmas song. The beasts shared with the Christ-child their space in the stable, but humanity made no room for Him. We would bespeak room for Christ. He ought to have room in the business world, room in the world of politics and statesmanship, room in the domestic world, room in the heart and life, and room among all nations. But "pre-occupied" stands over many a door. Let us swing open the gates of the world and of life and the King of Glory will come in.

Organ voluntaries—"Noel Ecossais" (A. Guilmant). "Weihnachts Pastorale" (G. Merkel). "Hallelujah Chorus," Messiah, (Handel).

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made and saves easily $2. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

WETS LAUNCH FIGHT IN DRY STRONGHOLD

Ontario Faces Its Most Desperate Clash in Prohibition Fight--Ferguson Favors Reasonable Attitude.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 26. —Ontario, the historic battlefield of the prohibition camel and the demon rum, faces its most desperate clash.

Whether it is to follow Quebec, British Columbia and the other wet provinces away from its dry traditions will be settled, almost beyond question, next year. Its loss by the drys would be crushing. Its capture by the wets would dwarf their recent western victories into mere skirmishes.

Each camp is arming— the Moderation League, aggressive and confident; the Dominion Alliance, aroused and determined. Each reveals its anxiety by bitter stories of the other's unfair tactics.

Drys Fight Election.

The wets, it appears from here, have at least a good fighting chance.

To prevent a vote on the prohibition issue is the first objective of the Dominion Alliance. Yet that is almost certain to fail. Insistent demands will be made and Premier George Howard Ferguson declares:

"If there appears to be a pronounced desire upon the part of the people for an opportnity to express their views, the government will be bound to give it to them.'

Premier Ferguson himself is the spotlight figure in the impending battle. He went into power last summer after defeating the intensely dry forcs of former Premier E. C. Drury. Yet prohibition was not an issue in the election'

Premier Ferguson said he favored a more "reasonable" attitude toward alcohol, but he has appointed an attorney general approved by the drys and has ordered strict enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act.

The Feguson Government will have entire power of decision upon calling an election; it will set the date and phrase the questions submitted. If amendments to the act are attempted, government influence will shape them.

Dry Leader Confident.

The vote in favor of the O. T. A. probably will be smaller than last time,' admits the Rev. John Bailey, secretary of the Dominion Alliance.

"But the act will be upheld, never fear. We'll win. Just note these three reasons.

"Temperance in the first place is making good. It has improved conditions in Ontario. Second, the advantages of prohibition are being brought home to the voters. Our forces are pointing them out clearly Finally, our effort never has been relaxed here as in some of the provinces which slipped away."

So Is Wet Chief.

On the contrary part, Cyril D. Boyce, secretary of the Moderation League, has this to say: "If the vote were taken tomorrow, we'd defeat the temperance act. Sentiment is moving away from prohibition, and it already has crossed the line and made us a majority."

Ontario is the prize in the Dominion contest not only because it leads in population but because it has long been the center and stronghold of dry agitation. At the same time it is flanked by wet territory Across its frontier is smuggled probably more liquor to the United States than from any other province, and it has more distilleries than any other.

Its greatest vote was cast in October, 1919, when a referendum was taken on the war-time Ontario Temperance Act. A pluarality of 423,508 voted against repeal. At the same time a pluaralty of 243,154 a reduction and yet decisive, voted against government sale of liquor and beer. A still smaller pluarality voted two years ago to stop importation from wet territory.

Changing Sentimen.

Many substantial citizens who oppose the general sale of alcohol dislike the act because it has stopped them from bringing in stock for their own cellars. Reputable physicians by the hundreds resent the prescription clause which places them in the role of bartenders. Reports of Quebec's profit of $4,000,000 a year from its liquor commission sound good to taxpayers.

Bootleggers, with their frequent brawls and disrespect for law, make unpopular the system which gives excuse for their trade. In the recent Alberta campaign, the story was used of finding a moonshine still in the basement of a Calgary church. But the incident encouraged the sentiment that "anything is better than boolegging."

The O. T. A. police are highly unpopular in many communitiets. nA eye-witness tells of seeing an attempt of the officers to raid a citizen's private stock. The owner called the city police and the O. T. A. men were ejected.

The cities in Ontario generally are against the Temperance Act. The farmer vote is hard to estimate. In the prairie provinces it turned out wet.

Hon. G. H. Ferguson, Premier of Ontario.

THE CAMPAIGN NOW ON

Friends and supporters of Mr. J. J. Turner, the candidate for election as Mayor of the city will have a gathering at the Turner building this evening, at seven-thirty o'clock, to talk things over and arrange for the activities of polling day. Come along if interested, and show it. There will be plenty to do as the number of polls has been about doubled. About eighty men and women are needed to man the polls, as inside and outside scrutineers, and you may give valuable assistance. Your interest in your city demands that you should help to elect the best man for Mayor.

MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

The third year of a new business is likely to be the hardest.

The average man starts into business expecting to make a profit in a reasonably quick time. He works hard and enthusiastically but usually for some reason those alluring profits, which seemed so sure, don't materialize.

His capital will probably see him through the first year. Credit is more or less easily available the second year, if he can show a small profit on his business, so he manages to get through that year satisfactorily.

The third year may prove the heardest one of all. He is becoming discouraged, his creditors are beginning to push him, and new lines of credit are curtailed. He must show a good profit in that third year, or his creditors will get disrusted and close him out.

When everything is considered, it is not surprising that so many business men fail in their third year.

THE NEW PSYCHOLOGY

By REV. M. C. MACKINNON

In introducing his subject, Mr. Mackinnon stated that he was about to present a viewpoint, not necessarily his own except insofar as he would make it so in order that it might be presented fairly, but a viewpoint which today challenges the attention of all who are alive to the trend of thought in the educational world.

In the past education has perhaps confined itself too closely to the child's intellect, to the neglect of his emotional nature, in spite of the fact that emotions have obviously more to do with our conduct than has intellect. Our likes and our dislikes are very largely emotionally determined. This may be seen in our attitude toward certain foods, certain kinds of people and certain subjects. Few people will admit the extent to which their friendships are based upon blind emotional reasons. Ask yourself how much intellect enters into the shaping of your attitudes in life. You may be surprised to find that often the chief part your intellect plays is in making you think that your emotionally-determined conduct is the right conduct. It is the belief of the new psychology that the springs of conduct are often hidden even from the individual himself, that it is possible to discover them, and that education is lamentably incomplete if it ignores these springs and their discovery.

For the purpose of this lecture the terms used by the leading exponents of the new school are accepted. It is not argued that the "New Psychology" is a complete departure from the old psychology. The thing to be kept in mind is the new emphasis upon the 'unconscious' mental life and its potent influence upon conscious attitude and behaviour.

For the benefit of those not familiar with the terminology of the new psychology, the following notes are here included. In speaking of the "Unconscious" reference is had to the psychological processes in us that are active outside the focus of our awareness or consciousness. These processes affect our conscious behaviour. The unconscious is dynamic. A "complex" is an automatic reaction or attitude to a given stimulus.

The new or analytical psychology, unlike the old psychology, treats not only or mainly with the "content of consciousness," but also with the unconscious mental life. Tansley says of the human mind that "its most fundamental activities are nonrational and largely unconscious activities." It is from this fact that there spring certain important implications for education, and central in our study is the recognition of the emotions as the great dynamic force in life and in education.

H. Crichlow Miller, in a recent article on "Psychoanalysis and the School" (Mental Hygiene, Jan., 1923) indicates that the new psychology has introduced a new era in education. He says: "The first stage in education may be described as that in which the teacher was expected only to know Latin, if he was to be regarded as competent to teach John Latin. About half a century ago, the idea began to dawn—very gradually, of course—that it would be a good thing to know, not only Latin, but also John, and now we come to the third era—the most challenging of the three—when you are expected to know not only Latin and John, but also yourselves." There is a serious omission in this statement, In the first era it was necessary to know Latin; in the second it was necessary to know Latin and John's conscious mental life; in the new era it is necessary to understand Latin, John's conscious mental life, and the unconscious mental life of John and of oneself. It is important for the teacher to understand the "hidden springs" of his own conduct and of John's conduct as well, and to wisely lead John to understand to some extent the hidden reasons for his own conduct or reactions to his environment. It will at once be seen, therefore, that volumes might be written on "The New Psychology and Education," but for this lecture only a few outstanding implications can be mentioned.

Before going on to study the unconscious in relation to education, we may pause to notice the "discovery" of the "unconscious" itself, and the contributions made by Freud and others. Conceiving that the apparently meaningless symptoms of neurotics and the so-called eccentricities of other people who are not usually included under the heading of neurotic, were determined by forces of which the subjects were but dimly aware, Freud went on to establish the knowledge of the unconscious as a living reality, a reality which will make nugatory all methods of education which do not take it into account. His main thesis as to the nature of the unconscious is that it is the sum of all those instinctive tendencies, chiefly of a sexual nature, which have not been outgrown in the course of human development. The Freudism school has thus shown that a primitive impulse does not necessarily cease to exist when it is driven out of consciousness. It may continue to influence thought and conduct, from below the threshold of consciousness, surreptitiously distorting judgments and making for inefficiency and for mental and moral ill-health. Its influence may be altogether unsuspected, even while it is modifying opinions and conduct and interfering with sound judgment. Frend's great mistake was his gross exaggeration of the role of sex. For him the great primary impulse is sexuality. Rivers, in "Instinct and the Unconscious," refers to "the exclusive pre-occupation of the Freudism school with the problem of sex" as an obstruction in the path of knowledge, and this was earlier recognized by Jung, who broke with Freud on this very point. Jung has divided the unconscious into the personal and the impersonal, or collective. The former contains those elements whose origin is in our personal past; the latter contains elements which are implicit in man's racial history. Jung's "collective unconscious" contains those instinctive, popularly considered demonacial impulses of Freud, the "will to power" of Adler, and also all those religious and higher impulses, which, in contrast to the demoniacal, the popular mind would call angelic. That is to say, among the primitive dynamic forces of the mind there are egoistic and altruistic as well as sex impulses.

The repression of any of the three types of primitive impulses—egoistic, sexual, or altruistic—may result in disaster and certainly does result in some degree of mental and moral instability. "Libido" is no term applied to the vital dynamic force through which alone the conscious ego is able to effect things and advance on its evolutionary course. That is to say, the unconscious is dynamic. There is a driving force seeking expression through each person; it is what Bargoon calls Elan vital. Libido is the interest for life, the interest in keeping alive, in using such and such a function, in following such and such a line of action. It is held that each person has a constant amount of libido, but different persons vary greatly in the amount possessed.

For the satisfactory achievement of our life task we need our libido free, in current circulation as it were, and not tied up in unprofitable investments. It can become locked in the unconscious and associated with various repressed complexes and undifferentiated functions, which the individual concerned has been unable to face and understand or express. Such imprisoned libido may show itself in pathological symptoms or undesirable habits, and the amount of libido which the conscious ego has at his disposal is lessened according to the extent of the repression. To such extent the person is in bondage to his unconscious and unable to make satisfactory and rational adjustments in life. Whenever we repress an unsolved problem or an unassimilated experience, that problem or experience takes with it into the unconscious, perhaps beyond our memory or kin, the energy which was attached to it when it figured in our consciousness. Nothing exists isolated in consciousness, hence with every such primary repression of a problem or experience there are inevitably other secondary repressions of things which were associated with the primary object. When the associated factors are such as cannot be entirely repressed—for instance, things that are constantly met in everyday life—we are apt to get a feeling of dislike for them; we may even have such a strong feeling that they are dangerous, owing to this relation to the repressed subject, that we develop a phobia or fear of them.

As repressions carry vital energy with them, it follows that if we have many unsolved problems, or many experiences to which we have not adopted ourselves, the drain on our vital energy may be very severe. It may amount to virtual bankruptcy. Result, a complete breakdown, and perhaps insanity or suicide.

In such a case the person is suffering from nervous exhaustion or breakdown. But there are many degrees of poverty short of bankruptcy, and these may be the cause of much difficulty in school, both to pupil and to teacher. A knowledge of this fact will prepare the way for a better understanding of the pupils' difficulties, with a view to remedying them. In extreme cases a specialist in the new psychology should be consulted. Every city should have a psychiatrist.

Everybody has free libido which is always seeking objects on which it may expend itself. If it cannot find desirable and useful objects, it will seize upon undesirable and useless objects, or finding no external objects sufficiently satisfying it may start to regress into the unconscious and so produce a disordered psyche. In other words, Satan finds some mischief still for idle libido to do. Libido cannot be idle; it must be doing something, either good or bad.

What a flood of light this information throws upon the "mischievous behaviour" of many boys and girls. It shows the reason for one type of naughtiness. If a child has more free libido than the other members of his class, and his teacher does not realize what is the trouble, he will be continually doing something tiresome, or will fail in attention because he can find some other more absorbing interest elsewhere. The remedy lies in providing work that is more difficult and more interesting or more congenial. The practical outcome is that everyone who wishes to be psychologically healthy must have some real external interest into which can be poured the free libido, for a stagnant, apathetic life will lead to more neurosis and ill-health. This means that a very important factor in producing a healthy individual and group life is provision for recreation and higher rational interest in abundance.

Thus far we have been employed mainly with a study, necessarily brief, of the special characteristics of the new psychology, though in passing we have got glimpses of certain implications for education. We shall proceed now to notice more specifically these latter. It is well to remember that there is one psychology for youth and adult. The new psychology applies equally to the teacher, the parent and the child.

First, the teacher: self-knowledge on his or her part is made more important than ever by the new study. It is a first essential that the teacher seek to understand his own psychology, thoroughly, not superficially, if he wishes to understand the psychology of the child and to help him. The reason is this, that if a teacher is repressing some element in himself, he cannot possibly recognize in another what he refuses to see in himself. If he is unconscious of his own actual attitude towards life, he cannot possibly be a sound judge of another person's attitude. It is a psychological law. If he is full of authority reactions himself, he will not understand the reactions of his pupils. On the contrary, his complexes will drive him to force his psychology upon the class, and he will grow bad-tempered and snappy. Or he will find himself inhibited by his conflict over such reactions, and will fall into melancholy. The danget is that he will inflict great damage upon his pupils, not consciously or willingly, yet with disastrous results to his pupils. Crichlow Miller says: "The chief gain which the teacher may look for from his study of the subject (the unconscious) is this kind of illumination of his own mind, a new power of self-knowledge which will give him a clearer sight and a greater freedom of action in helping the child." "The first service that analytical psychology can render is—the freeing of the teacher's own mental and emotional life from bias and repression." This is not as simple a matter as it might seem, for "what appears from without as bias, prejudice and bigotry, appears from within as rational and well-founded conviction." Nevertheless an acquaintance with the methods and findings of analytical psychology will point the way and help the teacher to prevent his own unhealthy adjustments—influencing the child with evil results. Of course, obviously it is extremely important that no person of neurotic temperament be allowed to teach. From the view, point of education for character this should be perhaps the first consideration in selecting a teacher.

The new psychology and the parents. The importance of the home life in education is emphasized by the new psychology and a new day is suggested wherein more than ever the educational system will be considered as including the home, with the parents the special teachers in that sphere.

It is interesting to notice that in England today nursery schools are being provided for children from two to six years of age whose development is found to be defective and unwholesome.

The same observations made above regarding the teacher apply equally in regard to the parents. Many a child born normal becomes inharmonious owing to his home environment. Hence the absolute necessity for all those who are in close contact with children being themselves as far as possible free from disharmonies and repressions. It is certain that the home or school with inharmonious conditions will turn out neurotic and repressed children. Thus the new psychology places new emphasis on the importance of environment as a factor in education. Jung considers that the influence of the parents is so supreme that if a neurotic child living with its family is brought to him to analyze, he always considers his chief work to be with the parents, and that the detailed analysis of the child is really unnecessary. In any case he considers the analysis of children very difficult, because children have very little psychology of their own. They repeat and even dream about their parent's conflicts. What a startling discovery, that the faults of children may after all really be in large measure the faults of their parents and adult friends, faults not accepted consciously by the children but virtually forced upon them by their contact with these adults! "The fathers have eaten sour grapes and their children's teeth are set on edge."

And yet we must remember that this tradgety happens without intent on the part of the adults, as far as the children are concerned. It is to be hoped that many parents would remedy the destructive situation did they realize the seriousness of its effects upon the young. The conclusion is that our educational system should provide for parents simple instruction in the principles and meaning of the new psychology, and that an expert in the subject should be available to offer counsel in cases of special need where children are suffering grievous harm.

The Child and the New Psychology

Here a word of caution may be necessary. Teachers should understand the new psychology, but they should also understand the unwisdom and even danger of dabbling in amateur attempts at analysis or other form of psychological treatment of the child. They should realize that an analysis is as serious to the mind of an individual as is an operation to the body. It should, therefore, be undertaken only when necessary and then by experts who have received special training and who are in other ways thoroughly qualified for the work. No one would dream of suggesting that teachers should operate, say, for adenoids. Yet they should be able to recognize the symptoms, in order that they may call in the expert when this is necessary. And they can certainly do something to prevent the growth of adenoids by giving the children under their care breathing exercises in good air. So with mental and moral defects. In some few case the aid of the expert may be needed but in many more cases the teacher can prevent the appearance of the mental kinks by providing the necessary conditions for the free expression of the dynamic forces that are within.

Dr. Miller, in his article on psychoanalysis and the School" (Mental Hygiene, Jan. 1923) says: "The more experience I have of analytical work, the more chary do I become of the partial analysis without reasonable assurance of its being carried to completion. The teacher who begins to make a child think analytically is taking upon himself a serious responsibility, and may well find himself in a very awkward position with regard to the pupils' parents, who generally constitute the fous et origo mali, but have rarely commissioned the teacher to embark on this enterprise. It seems to me that the teacher's analytical function is to observe and understand his pupil and, when necessary, to recommend formal analytical treatment, i.e., by skilful and experienced specialists.

With a sympathetic understanding of the pupil from the viewpoint of analytical psychology, the teacher, as has already been hinted, will find an explanation of the so-called "naughty child." It may be that the naughty one is simply a specimen of the supernormal child, who has a superabundant amount of energy and who has not been given the opportunity of directing it along useful and profitable lines. In consequence, being repressed, the libido finds an outlet in manifestations of so-called naughtiness and insubordination. We must realize more and more that "naughtiness" is not a manifestation of innate depravity, as our grandmothers believed, but is generally an outward and visible sign that something is wrong with our management of the child.

The first thing to recognize about any child is that its libido is dynamic and demands expression. We may react towards the child in three ways. We may be inhuman and ignore it. Then its life energy will find haphazard expression most probably in wrong ways. We may be human and bully it into repression—"little boys should be seen and not heard." Then a disabling complex will develope in the child's life. We may finally be human and do our best to educate the child's modes of expression. If a child is to grow in health he must be provided with adequate opportunities for self-expression. The new psychology has reinforced the view that education "rather exists in opening out a way whence the imprisoned splendours may escape than in effecting entry for a light supposed to be without," and consequently it has emphasized the need for less repressive methods of discipline, and for more creative methods of teaching than have been usual in the past. This leads to the principle of self-determination in school life.

After the Feasts and Excitements of Christmas, then comes ENO's

CHRISTMAS is the festival of happiness. But it brings a departure from our regular habits of diet. It is a time of excusable over-indulgence—sometimes for the old—for the young invariably! ENO'S is so indispensable in the home 'round Christmas time, that those who know it would not be without the guardianship of this world-famed laxative health-drink.

Remember, too, that Summer vitality, the power of Nature to resist disease, is on the wane after Christmas, and the custom of "fresh air and exercise" is difficult to maintain in the long winter months. The result is greater susceptibility to many minor ailments which impair health. ENO'S "Fruit Salt" by its cleansing, purifying effect on the digestive organs and the blood, prevents these disorders.

To guard the health of your family this winter—establish in your household the custom of starting the day right with

GERMAN WORKERS FIGHT DECREASE

Extremity of Unemployed and Frightened Workers is Being Exploited.

BERLIN, Dec. 26. — (United Press).—There are today at least 3,200,000 totally unemployed workers in Germany and 2,000,000 others who were on short time, Theodore Leipart, the Samuel Gompers of Germany, told the United Press in an exclusive interview.

Moreover, Leipart pointed out that those who were fortunate enough to have work are paid less than in pre-war times, while prices are more than one-half more than in 1913.

Leipart, who is undisputed leader of organized labor in Germany, warned that some are exploiting the workers extremely and endeavoring to depress wages even further. This will eventually affect wages of workers in other lands, he said, for employers will say to their men, "We, too, must reduce because Germany's low wages create serious competition."

German labor unions will fight the industrialists to the bitter end to prevent their members from starving and the employers from lowering wages abroad, Leipart said.

Nineteen per cent. of all Germany's workers are idle, with 47 per cent. on short time, according to union figures, which make it appear that less than one-third the country's man-power has full employment.

"I'm on a review for the Yale now; and the new Century has asked me for a psychological analysis of the Younger Generation. I'm going to compare our post-war product with all that is known of young people and their manifestations straight back to the Stone Age. I've made a specialty of the subject. Witt has helped me a lot in research. D'you think he's gone off?"

"Gone off? Certainly not. Every columnist in town has something to say about that last installment of his novel. Best thing he's ever done, and that's saying all. He's strong as an ox, too. Why in heaven's name should he go off?"

"Well, baby's teething and won't let any one else hold her when she gets a fretting spell. He's been up a lot lately."

Clavering burst into a loud delighted laugh. He had forgotten his personal affairs completely, as he always did when talking to this remarkable little paradox. "Gad! That's good! And his public visualizes him as a sort of Buddha, brooding cross-legged in his library, receiving direct advice from the god of fiction. . . . But I wouldn't have you otherwise. The nineteenth century bluestocking with twentieth century trimmings. . . . What now?"

Rollo Landers Todd, the "Poet of Manhattan," had stalked in with a Prussian helmet on his head, his girth draped in a rich blue shawl embroidered and fringed with white, a bitter frown on his jovial round face; and in his hand a long rod with a large blue bow on the metal point designed to shut refractory windows. Helen Vane Baker, a contribution from Society to the art of fiction, with flowing hair and arrayed in a long nightgown over her dress, fortunately white, was assisted to the top of the bookcase on the west wall. Henry Church, a famous satirist, muffled in a fur cloak, a small black silk handkerchief pinned about his lively face, stumped heavily into the room, fell in a heap on the floor against the opposite wall, and in a magnificent bass growled out the resentment of Ortrud, while a rising but not yet prosilient pianist, with a long blonde wig from Miss Dwight's property chest, threw his head back, shook his hands, adjusted a cigarette in the corner of his mouth, and banged out the prelude to Lohengrin with amazing variations. Elsa, with her profile against the wall and he hands folded across her breast, sang what of Elsa's prayer she could remember and with no apparent effort improvised the rest. Lohengrin pranced up and down the room barking out German phonetics (he did not know a word of the language, but his accent was as Teutonic as his helmet), demanding vengeance and threatening annihilation. He brandished his pole in the face of Ortrud, stamping and roaring, then bending his knees waddled across the room and prodded Elsa, who winced perceptibly by continued to mingle her light soprano with the rolling bass of Mr. Church and the vociferations of the poet. Finally, at the staccato command of Mr. Todd's hoarsening voice, she toppled over into his arms and they both fell on Ortrud. The nonsense was over.

No one applauded more spontaneously than Madame Zattiany, and she even drank a cocktail. By this time every one in the room had been chatting as if she hadn't a care in the world. As far as Clavering could see, she had every intention of making a Sophisitcate night of it.

The pianist, after a brief interval for recuperation, played with deafening vehemence and then with excruciating sweetness. Once more cocktails were passed, and then there was a charade by Todd, Suzan Forbes and the handsome young English sculptress, which Madame Zattiany followed with puzzled interest; and was so delighted with herself for guessing the word before the climax that she clapped her hands and laughed like a child.

More music, more cocktails, a brief impromptu play full of witty nonsense, caricaturing several of the distinguished company, whose appreciation was somewhat dubious, and Miss Dwight led the way down to supper. Clavering watched Madame Zattiant go out with the good-looking editor of one of the staid old fiction magazines which he had recently levered out of its rut by the wayside, cranked up and driven with a magnificent gesture into the front rank of 'outh. She was talking with the greatest aniationm. He hardly recognized her and it wa apparent that she had entered into the spirit of the evening, quite reconciled to any dearth of intellectual refreshment.

The supper of hot oysters, chicken salad, every known variety of sandwich, ices and cakes was taken standing for the most part, Madame Zattiany, however, once more enthroned at the head of the room, women as well as men dancing attendance upon her. Prohibition, a dead letter to all who could afford to patronize the underground mart, had but added to the spice of life, and it was patent that Miss Dwight had a cellar. More cocktails, highballs, sherry, were passed continuously, and two enthusiastic guests made a punch. Fashionable young actors and actresses began to arrive, Hilarity waxed, impromptu speeches were made, songs rose on every key. Then suddenly some one ran up to the victrola and turned on the jazz; and in a twinkling the dining-room was deserted, furniture in the large room upstairs was pushed to the wall and the night entered on its last phase.

Then only did Madame Zattiany signify her intention of retiring, and Clavering, to whom such entertainments were too familiar to banish for more than a moment his heavy disquiet, hastened to her side with a sigh of relief and a sinking sensation behind his ribs. Madame Zattiany made her farewells not only with graciousness but with unmistakable sincerity in her protestations of having passed her "most interesting evening in New York."

Miss Dwight went up to the dressing-room with her, and Clavering, retrieving hat and top-coat, waited for her at the front door. She came down radiant and talking animatedly to her hostess; but when they had parted and she was alone with Clavering her face seemed suddenly to turn to stone and her lids drooped. As she was about to pass him she shrank back, and then raised her eyes to his. In that fleeting moment they looked as when he had met them first: inconceivably old, wise, disillusioned.

"Now for it," he thought grimly as he closed the door and followed her out to the pavement. "The Lord have mercy——" And then he made a sudden resolution.

XXIX.

Madame Zattianty did not utter a word during the short walk to her house. It was evident that she had dismissed the merry evening from her mind and was brooding on the coming hour. At the top of the steps she handed him the latchkey, but still lingered outside for a moment. As he took her hand and drew her gently into the house he felt that she was trembling.

"Come," he said, his own voice shaking. "Remember that you need tell me nothing unless you wish. This idea of confession before marriage is infernal rot. I have not the least intention of making one of my own."

"Oh!" She gave a short harsh laugh. "I should never dream of asking for any man's confession. They are all alike. And I must tell you. I cannot leave you to hear it from others."

He helped her out of her wrap and she threw the lace scarf on a chair and preceded him slowly down the hall.

"I am a coward. A coward," she thought heavily. "Have I ever felt moral cowardice before? I don't remember. Not toward any other man who loved me. But——! Oh, God! And I shall never see him again. How shall I begin?"

She was totally unprepared for the beginning. She heard him shut the library door, and then it seemed to her that her entire body was encircled by flexible hot bars of iron and her face, her mouth, were being flagellated. If he hadn't held he in that vise-like grip she would have fallen. She lay back on his arm and he kissed her and for the moment she forgot the past and the future and was happy, although she felt dimly that life was being drained out of her. She was passive in that fierce possessive embrace. She had lost all sense of separateness.

"I won't listen to your story," he muttered. "This is no time for talk."

His voice, hoarse and shaking as it was, broke the spell, with a sudden lithe movement she twisted herself out of his arms. Before he realized what was happening she had run across the room, snatched the key from the door and locked it on the other side. He heard her run up the stairs.

Clavering did and said most of the things men do and say when balked in mid-fight, but in a moment he took the little key from the drawer in the table and poured himself out a whiskey and soda—he had taken almost nothing at the party—lit a cigarette and threw himself into a chair. He had no desire to stride up and down; he felt as if all the strength had gone out of him. But he felt no apprehension that she had left him for the night. Nor should he take possession of her again until she had told her story; h3 reflected with what humor was left in him that when a woman had something to say and was determined to say it, the only thing to do was to let her talk. Words to a woman were as steam to a boiler, and no man could control her mind until she had talked off the lid.

She was giving him time to cool off, he reflected grimly, as he glanced at the clock. Well, he felt heavy and inert enough—hideous reaction! He was in a condition to listen to anything. If she was determined to work her will on him, at least he had worked his on her for a brief moment. She knew now that in the future she might as well try to resist death itself. Let her have her last fling.

He rose as she entered, and for the moment his heart failed him. He had never seen even her look more like marble, and she did not meet his eyes as she crossed the room and seated herself so that her profile would be toward him as she talked. As she had chosen the large high-backed chair, Clavering, knowing her love of comfort, hoped that her discourse was to be brief.

"When I finish," she said in her low vital voice, "I shall leave the room immediately and I must have your word that you will make no attempt to detain me, and that you will go at once and not return until Monday afternoon. I shall not wish to see you again until you have had time to deliberate caimly on what I shall tell you. I do not want any embarrassed protests from a gallant gentleman—whose confusion of mind is second only to his chivalrous dismay. Have I your word?"

"It never takes me long to make up my mind——"

"That may be, but I intend to save you from an embarrassing situation. You need not come on Monday unless you wish. You may write—or, for that matter, if I do not hear from you on Monday by four I shall understand——"

"I—for God's sake, Mary——"

"You must do as I say—this time. And—and—you could not overcome me again tonight. I can turn myself to stone when I choose."

"Oh!" He ground his teeth. His own nerves might be lulled for the moment, but he had anticipated reaction when she finished her story. "Very well—but it is for the last time, my dear. And why Monday? Why not this afternoon?"

"You must sleep and write your column, is it not so? Moreover—and deliberately—I am lunching with Mrs. Ruyler and dining at the Lawrences'."

"Very well. Monday, then. You have set the stage. If I must be a puppet for once in my life, so be it. But, I repeat, it is for the last time. Now, for heaven's sake, go ahead and get it off your chest."

"And you will let me go without a word? Otherwise I shall not speak—and I'll leave the room again and not return."

"Very well. I promise."

"I told part of it the other day at Mrs. Oglethorpe's luncheon—I had told her before. But there's so much else. I hardly know how to begin with you, and I have not the habit of talking about myself. But I suppose I should begin at the beginning."

"It is one of the formulæ."

"It is the most difficult of all—that beginning." And although she had announced the torpidity of her nerves, her hands clenched and her voice shook slightly.

EXPERTS WILL SOON START TO FUNCTION

Reparations Committee Approves Boards of Experts--First Meeting January 14.

PARIS, December 26. Canadian Prss. — The Reparation Committee to-day formally approved the nominations of two expert committees which are to investigate Germany's finacial situation, and issued an invitation to Henry M. Robinson, Los Angeles, a lawyer and banker, to be the third United States member.

The first committee, that on the budget, will met here on Januray 14, and the second, which will consider German capital abroad, on January 21st.

One of the British nominations was changed. Sir Robert Kindersley, a director of the Bank of England, replaces Montague Norman, the governor of the bank.

The other British delegates will be as previously announced: Reginald McKenna, former Chancellor of the exchequer and Sir Josiah Stamp, the noted economist.

MADE AN ATTACK ON BOAT CAPTAIN

Then Jumped Overboard and Was Lost in the Sea

BOSTON, Mass., December 26 (Canadian Press). — A tale of a murderous attack on Captain Kamezohuro Waikanabe, of the Ohio Maru, by the ship's botsfain, Tonneryo Masu, who afterward jumped overboard and was drowned, was related when the Japanese steamer arrived to-day from Fowey, England.

The captain's face and neck were swathed in bandages, and he was taken to the hospital.

The boaswain had been acting strangely for several days.

On 18th December he entered the captain's cabin, and after a few minutes' conversation, suddenly drew a razor and slashed the captain's face and neck.

The captain managed to wrest the razor from him, cutting his hands badly, and called for help.

Before members of the crew could seize Masu, he ran to the rail and leaped into the sea.

EXEMPT ARTICLES FROM SALES TAX

Newsprint May Be Included in Amended List

OTTAWA, Dec. 26.—(Special.)—While there will be no suspension of the Sales Tax Act which is designed to get into force on January 1, it is anticipated here that as the result of numerous representations made to the Government there will be certain modifications which will remove much of the present objection against the Act. It is in the power of the Department of Customs by order-in-council also to add to the list of exemptions and it is rumored that certain commodities not now exempt will be relieved from the incidence of the impost. Notable among the commodities for which exemption is sought is newsprint. Should the tax continue on this commodity American publishers who do not have to pay sales tax on the exported Canadian article would have a handicap over the Canadian publishers. It is stated also that insulin, which is being distributed free, may be relieved from the tax.

A simplification of the inventory regulations is also anticipated owing to the difficulties in making a correct valuation of such raw materials as are in the process of manufacture when the new tax comes into force or have actually been manufactured but not been sold. Cost figures may be allowed as a basis for computation.

It has also been urged that credit for raw materials on hand, and on which tax has already been paid shll be paid, not as used, but in monthly payments covering, say six months. This may be done.

A statement on the subject will be issued before the New Year.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

DADDY GANDER

When the Twins got to the Fairy Queen's palace, who should be waiting for them but a fat, jolly looking person in a green suit.

The most remarkable thing about him was a dustpan that he kept tucked under one arm.

"Nancy, Nick!" said the Fairy Queen lovingly, for she had become very fond of her little Twin children, "I want you to meet one of my oldest friends, Mother Goose's husband, Daddy Gander. Daddy Gander, Nancy and Nick! Nancy and Nick, Daddy Gander!"

Nancy bowed and Nick bowed and Daddy Gander bowed and everybody bowed. And after they had finished bowing and saying how glad everybody was to meet everybody else, the Fairy Queen went on:

"Daddy Gander wants you to go home with him. He lives in a place named after him called 'Daddy Gander Land.'"

"Mother Goose lives in Mother Goose Land, doesn't she?" inquired Nancy. "And if you are her husband, sir, how can you live in Daddy Gander Land?"

Mister Daddy Gander laid a finger beside his funny nose and winked one of his funny eyes.

"How?" he remarked. "Easy as pie. I just turn the sign around. When Missez Goose is coming home, and while she's home, I put out the sign that says, 'Mother Goose, Her Land.'

"But when she's off on one of her trips, I get Tom Tinker and we take down the sign and turn it around and hang it up again. And it says, 'Daddy Gander, His Land!'"

"Oh, I see!" laughed Nick. "It's all one and the same place.

"Surest thing you know," laughed Daddy Gander winking again. And he looked so funny they all laughed. And then they went on laughing until it looked as though there wasn't going to be another Twin adventure to write about, except a laughing party, for days to come.

It was Nancy who sobered up first. "What's so funny about it?" she asked suddenly.

"Why, why, why—" panted Daddy Gander, who was as fat as his wife was thin, and round as she was sharp, "why, I don't remember. But it just seems that every time I open my mouth everybody laughs."

"What is your dustpan for, please, sir?" asked Nick.

"Oh, that!" exclaimed Daddy Gander is a surprised voice, as though he didn't know he had it. "Why, that is, you see, I always carry it for fear Missez Goose might return unexpectedly and ask me where it is. I use it to gather up her sweepings and she's always sweeping. But say, do you want to go home with me? We can all get on my magic dustpan and be there in a jiffy."

"We'd love to go!" cried the Twins. Instantly the dustpan spread out until it was as big as a carpet.

"Jump on!" said Daddy Gander.

And all three of them squatted down on it like Arabs.

Today's Quotations and Opinion and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Dec. 26. — (United Press.)— A cheerful spirit prevailed at the opening of the stock market to-day and the initial quotations were generally higher, industrials recording gains of from 1-4 to a full point and more. American Can, which sold off last week after the dividend declaration, opened at 1 1-8 up, at 104 1-4. Bethlehem Steel opened unchanged at 51 3-4, but quickly advanced to 52, while United States' Steel was quoted at 95 3-8, up 3-8. Bethlehem has been taking a large number of structural steel contracts recently and this, together with general improvement in other lines, should help to maintain the earnings and to insure a continuance of the $5 annual dividend.

The rails were irregular. There was no let up in the demand for stocks in the early trading and the whole list worked toward higher levels. The Steels seemed to be favorites, United States' Steel going to 96, up 1, Bethlehem to 53, up 1 1-4, and Gulf States to 82, up 1.

The steel producers have come through eight months of declining business with substantial profits and without material price concessions and reports from the industrial centres in the past ten days have indicated that the trade is definitely turning for the better.

Leaders are of the opinion that the first half of 1924 at least will be highly profitable and where steel price declines were feared a few weeks ago, suggestions of possible higher prices are now being made.

Davison Chemical displayed considerable strength, advancing over two points to 75 3-4, under the stimulus of an active demand.

Pacific Oil advanced to 50 1-2, up 5-8. National Lead, which advanced 5 3-4 points Monday, continued to move upwards, selling at 146, up 2 1-2 points. The market in the second hour held the gains scored in the earlier trading. The Oils advanced further, helped by the 25 cent advance in the price of Pennsylvania crude. The oil industry continued to show improvement with the declining production.

Standard Oil of California moved about 64, against its last close of 63 1-4, while Standard of New Jersey sold at 37 7-8, up 1-2. Pan. American B, Sinclair, Texas Company and others weer up fractionally. An improved demand was also needed in the lower priced Rails. Erie, which appears to have been well supported for some time, sold at 22 1-2.

ROMANTIC AIRMAN IS SEEKING NEW YOUTH

LONDON, Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press). — Gabrielle D'Annunzio, Italy's romantic poet-airman, is reliably reported to be seeking a new youth. D'Annunzio, who last week presented his estate at Gardone, together with his library and art treasurer, to the Italian State, is now reported to be indisposed.

The indisposition follows a visit of seevral days of Professor Vorefoff, celebrated Paris gland specialist, who lectured at Turin a few hours from D'Annunzio's villa, last week. Professor Vorefoff spent two days at Salo, on Lake Garda, near Gardome, and visited the poet, according to reliable information.

FEDERALS FOUGHT ON CHRISTMAS DAY

All Prisoners Taken Wete Given Fifteen Days or Decide What is Best.

(By Frederick G. Neumeir, United Press Staff Correspondent).

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 26. — Mexico's latest war of the rebellion abated while the capital and the country generally celebrated Christmas.

Government reports, which were published while crowds kept cabarets merry and fire crackers made as much din as a Mexican battle announced that on the various fronts the Federal troops held the insurgents in check.

The rebels taken prisoners at Puebla or driven in flight when Obregon captured the city have been given 15 days in which to turn back to the existing Government. If they do so within that time, they will be released and not punished.

A rumor is growing here that in some way the United States is going to aid Obregon. Many believe that both Calles and De La Huerta are to be eliminated from the Presidential race, after which the United States will back Obregon "to the limit."

General Angelo Flores, loyal to Obregon, is considered as the strongest candidate of Calles and De La Huerta are eliminated.

YOUNG MAN MAKES WALL STREET PAY

Makes Nearly a Million Dollars in Speculation by Cable—Father Stopped Practice.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Lieut. Osborne Cutler Wood, 26 year old son of Governor General Wood of the Philippines, has admitted making between seven hundred thousand and eight hundred thousand dollars in speculation in Wall Street securities conducted by cable from Manila, where he is an aide to his father says a copyright despatch to the New York Times to-day.

Young Wood's streak of good fortune, says the depatch, began in September last year, when he bought stock of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, just prior to its sensational rise of about sixty points His profits placed him in a position to make investments on a large scale.

The Times says that Lieut. Wood will return to the United States soon with the intention of resigning his commission and entering diplomatic service. His father put an end to his financial investments when he heard of them. In the course of circulation, the story sometimes took the phase that large sums had been sent from the Philippines by Gen. Wood for deposit in New York, but this is denied. Lieut. Wood declared according to the Times that none of his transactions had anything to do with the Philippines.

MANY CONCERTS IN JANETVILLE

Schools and Churches Vie in Christmas Entertainments --Reading Circle Formed.

JANETVILLE, Dec. 26. — Great interest is being manifested in the Reading Circles which have been organized in the village. There are three Circles in all, comprising about 45 or 50 persons. None but the most recent and best books are chosen, and those chosen are under the supervision of the most competent judges of literature. The books are purchased by the individual members of each Circle, changed every two weeks, and each person retains the book he or she purchased when the season is over. Very great intellectual profit is being derived from the adoption of the circulating library. It can easily be seen the number of books of a high character are being read during the winter by each member of each Circle. In the first Circle there are 13 members, in the second 14 members, and 18 members in the third. This literary work is a most excellent tonic for the young people during the winter months.

Shooting Match.

The shooting match held here last week was very successful in every way. The rules were such that the affair was absolutely free from gambling. No more than eight shots could be fired for one duck. These shots cost the gunmen 25 cents each, and the owner of the fowl paid for the ammunition. About fifty men were present and all were pleased with the afternoon's sport.

School Concert.

Miss Gray, of Millbrook, and Miss Bone, of Wingham, teachers of the Public and Continuation Schools of Janetville South, put their forces together and held a school concert in the Foresters' Hall, which was the largest attended event ever held in connection with the school. About 300 people attended, and were delighted with the proceedings.

The chair was occupied by the Rev. G. E. Ross, and after a brief address, called for the following programme:

An address by Hilda Paul.
Chorus—"What's the Meaning of Christmas?" by the School.
Drill—"Rule Britannia."
"Soup Song."
Dialogue—"Christmas Lesson."
"Game of Letters."
Solo—Miss Leona McGill.
Drill—"Hard Times."
"Pantomime."
Recitation—Edward Jenkins.
Play—"Our Awful Aunt."
Pantomime—'On Christmas Eve.'
"A Merry Christmas to All," in chorus.

Great credit is due the teachers for the way the children were trained.

Manvers Concert.

Mr. Cawood, of Warkworth, is the school teacher on the 14th Line of Manvers, and has endeared nimself to both parents and scholars since his coming in September last.

On Thursday night last his school concert was held, which was largely attended. The people report an excellent programme by the school. Mr. Cawood left for his Christmas holidays on Friday evening last.

CHRISTMAS PANSIES.

OTTAWA, Dec. 26.— (Canadian Press.) — Picking pansies in full bloom on Christmas morning was one of the experiences of G. Thompson, Westboro. Mr. Thompson stated that there had been pansies on the north side of his house all year, but that yesterday morning they had been in full bloom and that he had worn a buttonhole bouquet of fresh pansies to celebrate the day.

INDESCRIBABLE PALLOR ON BONAR LAW'S FACE

Scenes on Lord Beaverbrook's Tennis Courts and in the Abbey Recalled by Beverley Baxter

A YOUNG Canadian has given some vivid recollections of the inherent simplicity and humanity of the late Mr. Bonar Law. Under the title of "Memories" in the London Sunday Express, of which he is literary editor, A. Beverley Baxter, the young Toronto journalist, tells of the occasions he met the Canadian premier of England at Lord Beaverbrook's, principally on the tennis courts.

Bonar Law

"I like to think of him the first time I saw him.

"It was in 1920. The Coalition was tottering to what seemed an immediate catastrophe. Mr. Lloyd George was dazzling the world somewhere in Europe. On the storm-swept bridge Mr. Bonar Law was keeping the ship away from the rocks, tireless, skilful, powerful. At the height of the crisis, the House adjourned as usual on Friday. On Saturday I motored out to Lord Beaverbrook's country house and found that every one was on the tennis courts.

"When I reached the courts I caught my first glimpse of Mr. Bonar Law. He was engaged in an energetic but restrained argument at the net (the restraint being mostly on his side) with his host. I hesitated to interrupt them, because obviously the discussion was important, and presumably political. At last Bonar Law brought the debate to a close with a finality that could not be questioned.

"'It was out,' he said, suavely but firmly. 'The ball was distinctly out. There is no use your making a case to the contrary because there is the mark, and I abide by it.'

"Trivial, I know, but I like to remember him for his vigorous health then, his zest for the game, and also because it was my first intimation that statesmen, even at moments of crisis, are not very different from the rest of us.

He played tennis as one would have expected him to play—cautiously, with never a double fault, without any fancy serves or killing strokes, but with a most exasperating patience and an unerring instinct for placing the ball in a spot most awkward to his opponent.

"Some months went by; then, almost imperceptibly at first, the parliamentary strain began to tell on him. One Saturday in March, 1921, he seemed to have recovered his vitality. He won three sets, and those playing with him were delighted to see him as he had been before. It seemed as if the streams of energy were re-awakening within him. At the end of the game he walked down to the house for tea, and half an hour or so later I saw him there.

"A dreadful change had come over him. He was sitting by the window, and his face had a grey pallor about it that spoke of the breaking point. Sorrow and suffering and indescribable fatigue were written there. After tea he went alone into the library with his host. When they emerged they both walked silently to the motor car, and without a word Mr. Bonar Law drove away.

Four days later he sent his resignation as leader of the Conservative wing of the Coalition.

"The streets were placarded with only one newsbill. The political clubs were hot with rumor. Every possible interpretation was put on the resignation. Intrigues and counter-intrigues sprang up like mushrooms. The political pot boiled over. The consensus of opinion was that it was the culmination of a Conservative plot to wreck the Coalition.

"And at No. 11 Downing street, a weary, wistful figure sat oblivious to it all. "I am quite worn out," he had written to the prime minister.

"That was all."

"Perhaps I may be excused if I tell another tennis anecdote which may bring out the strange unpretentiousness of his personality.

"One Sunday, about a month after the meeting I have just described, I was playing tennis on Lord Beaverbrook's court in town. My opponent was a young chap, and we had just started our second set when Mr. Bonar Law, with his daughter Catherine, his son Anthony, and his son-in-law, Sir Frederick Sykes, arrived in tennis costume.

"I at once went over and offered the court to the prime minister.

"'No, no,' he said, with that soft persuasive Scottish voice that was so soon to leave him completely. 'I wouldn't think of taking the court from you. Go on and finish your set. Do.'

"He was so concerned about interrupting our games, and so self-effacing that actually I returned to the court and was about to serve when, fortunately, I came to my senses.

"This man," I said to myself, "is the prime minister of Great Britain. He has probably only a half-hour or so free. And I have the effrontery to make him wait while I finish a set with a boy."

"We left the court at once. It seems incredible that we could have contemplated anything else. Yet those who knew 'Bonar' will perhaps understand.

"When we were going away that day I noticed that he looked grey and fatigued. And when he smiled in saying good-bye there was a wistfulness that suddenly made me say something which I had not intended.

"I suppose, sir," I said, "you know how proud we are, those of us who come from Canada."

"He looked at me and smiled. 'I am glad of that,' he said simply.

"You are very close to our hearts," I said.

"'I am glad of that, too,' he repeated, and his face grew strangely pensive.

"'I need the good wishes of my friends.'

"Less than a month afterwards he sat in the House of Commons unable to answer questions. His voice had become inaudible, yet party dissension had left his government so ill equipped that he did not dare to leave the front bench, directing his forces through his lieutenants—even in his silence the greatest political strategist of many years.

Sorel Flouts the King, Refuses English Trip

Famous French Actress Creates Sensation When She Keeps Her Name From an Advertising Stunt

NOT many people can afford to flout the wishes of the King and Queen. Yet, according to the reports, a French actress has done it.

Rather than lend her name and reputation to what she considered an advertising stunt, France's greatest actress, Cecile Sorel, star of the Comedie Francaise, France's state theatre, created a sensation the other day by refusing pointblank to appear before the King and Queen of England.

Cecile Sorel

The occasion was the presentation of the film of Citroen's caterpillar cars' expedition across the Sahara before the British court at the request of King George. Sorel was to recite the accompanying poetry by Jean Richepin. So much importance seemed to be attached to Sorel's presence that the court refused to accept as a substitute Madeleine Roch, another Comedie Francaise star, whom the director suggested when it was discovered that Sorel happened to be billed to play in Paris on the appointed day. The minister of fine arts personally intervened and tried to persuade Sorel to go to London, but she refused even to please George V.

TOO MUCH ARGUMENT

A GOOD story was told the other day by the premier of Western Australia, Sir Francis Newdegate, as typifying the silence and loneliness bred of life in the vast unpeopled spaces of the interior.

Two men, it appears, were camping together, but rarely exchanged a word. One morning one of the men remarked at breakfast:

Nothing further was said, and they went about their business for the rest of the day.

Twenty-four hours later, once more at breakfast, the second man said:

"How d'ye know it wasn't a bull?"

Again a pause of twenty-four hours.

"Going?" inquired the other.

"Yes."

"Why?"

TOO MANY TRAIN STOPS, AUTHORESS HAS CURE

ISABEL ECCLESTONE MACKAY, well-known Canadian authoress, was one of a party traveling to Lake Windermere, B. C., in August of last year, to attend the David Thompson Memorial celebration. As the railway from the golden south to Windermere is only a branch line, the train made frequent stops—in fact, so frequent as to be irritating. At length the train halted at a station called Briscoe.

"Too bad it isn't a Briscoe car instead of a station," said someone. "We might get there some time."

"Better still if it were Crisco," said Miss Mackay, referring to a commodity well known to housewives. "It might shorten the journey."

THE WRONG INSTRUMENT

THERE is no satisfactory reason for believing that a woman who is always "harping" will make a good angel.

Church Doorman in Livery

THIS is George La Mond, the doorman in livery at the West End Presbyterian church in New York. He has been engaged by Rev. A. Kelgwin, the pastor, to help his church members in and out of their automobiles. He also hails taxi-cabs and watches over the cars parked outside the church. On accepting the position La Mond is said to have quoted the verse: "It is better to be a doorkeeper in the House of the Lord than to dwell in the tents of wickedness."

Never Had a Wakeful Night, Lloyd George Sleeps at Will

Can Go to Sleep in Three or Four Minutes—Wakes in Half An Hour As Fresh as Ever—Never Walked Floor Even in Worst Days of the War.

CAN you sleep when you like?

Can you, instantly and at any time, free yourself from the worries and distractions of your day and sink into dreamless slumber?

He who can do these things is a happy man. Able to tap at will an unfailing source of fresh energy, he is fitted to direct great affairs in great emergencies. Because he can always draw across his tired eyes the soft veil of sleep he can front responsibilities too vast for another man. He is in one important respect at least another Napoleon, another Edison.

Lloyd George

He is also another Lloyd George. The faculty of instant sleep is one which the statesman of modern times shares with the great soldier of the past. Napoleon could snatch his four hours amid the thunder of hostile guns. Lloyd George can sleep when he wills. It is questionable whether history can produce men who bore the tremendous responsibility of the world's affairs so long as did these two. The post-armistice years have been strewn with the wreckage of other great men, slain by the strain of the war as surely as, if more slowly than, those who died on the battlefield.

Mr. Lloyd George carried a burden as heavy as any of them, and has thrown it off only to address himself to the more prosaic but equally difficult problems of peace. No other politician has half his vitality. Just returned from an exhausting tour of Canada and the United States, the delivery of scores of speeches, the traveling of thousands of miles, the shaking of millions of hands, he plunged into the British election campaign.

Why can Mr. Lloyd George, at middle age, do these things which would break a younger man? This is his own explanation, as tendered to an interviewer from the American Magazine:

"I never had a wakeful night. That was my salvation. I could go over to a couch now and lie down—as I often do during hard days—and I would be asleep in two or three minutes. Fifteen minutes or half an hour later I would wake up, fresh and ready for work again. It is partly a gift, but there is a decided element of self-training about it. You can school yourself so that when the body is in repose the nerve will carry the message to the brain that this is the time for sleep, and that nothing else matters. To form that habit requires a definite exercise of the will."

"Did you never walk the floor all night, even in the most critical period?" he was asked.

"Never! The most critical period was the month in which the Germans sank eight hundred thousand tons of shipping. If the destruction had continued at that rate we should have been whipped before America could make her power felt. I made a quick re-survey of our resources and formulated decisions. In war rapid decisions are almost as valuable as right decisions. Then, having done everything that could be done, I finished the day and went to sleep."

That was how Mr. Lloyd George carried a nation through a world-war and remained fresher at the end of it than many a man tired out only by the petty routine of his little life.

Geyser of Plaster from the Bathtub Marked End of Amundsen's Life Mask

For Sixteen Years Sculptor Persisted for Permission to Smear Arctic Explorer's Face With Plaster of Paris—Lure of the North Lasts for Life—Amundsen Wants to See "Places Like Mongolia and Tibet"

ONLY once—with disastrous results—did Roald Amundsen, the man who won the race to the South Pole and who plans to fly over the North, sit for a sculptor.

Never again will a mask be taken of Amundsen—except his death mask.

The rugged Norse explorer journeyed down from the north for Christmas and slipped into New York the other day. It was in a little room in the Ritz that he sat for his portrait to Cesare, the celebrated artist of the New York Times. It was during the process that he told the story of the sculptor and the disastrous results.

Roald Amundsen

"A long, long time ago I promised to sit for him," Amundsen explained, "but whenever I came to this country upon a lecture tour I had not the time to keep my word. Sixteen years this went on. Every time I came to New York the sculptor telephoned me. Never did I have the time. But he was never put out with me—just sad; he had a patient, Christian voice. I liked the voice, so one day I told the sculptor when he telephoned me that there was no hope of my sitting for him.

"'Captain Amundsen, there is always hope,' came that patient voice over the telephone.

"What could I say to that? It was very complicated. When he came I thought a plasterer was there to plaster the room. He wanted me to sit in the bathtub while he made a life mask of me. I didn't want to do that, but, still, he was very patient.

"Well, I sat there while he smeared my face and covered my mouth with plaster of paris. He had almost finished when I couldn't hold my breath any longer, and plaster flew all over the sculptor and the bathroom walls.

"That was all. Never will a mask be taken of me, except a death mask. But 'this,' and he nodded at the sketching board, 'should be painless.'"

While the springs protested but did their duty, Captain Amundsen seated himself on a pink-quilted bed. The explorer faced a window opening on a small court. A shaft of sunlight fell upon the sitter's head. His features would have given many difficulties for a sculptor, because they cannot be described except in such geographical terms as promontories, crags, ridges and valleys. His blue eyes and prow-like nose characterized the man of the sea, the captain and indomitable leader of expeditions, but there were softer lines around the mouth, which became understood when the explorer told of his men and ships and dogs.

"What a wonderful hold the north has!" he mused. "It is simply overpowering for me. I am never quite tranquil in my heart until I am back again in the Arctic—or somewhere away from this."

Amundsen's palm swept the little room, and the faraway look that was in his eyes while he talked of evergreens and birds and snow scenes vanished when he became conscious of the fluffy hangings and the subdued pinks and greys.

"What more have I to see in the polar regions? Oh, well, we shall see, we shall see. You cannot tell what you may find up there. There is a whole lot of space up there, nearly a million square miles, and I must have a little look around. The only rest I seem to find is in my work, and when I have succeeded then I feel rewarded. I have much work to do yet. There is my ship, the Maud. She is somewhere around 'seventy-six.' Some time during the next three years we'll see her from the sky. She is my drifting home. Eight of my good men are aboard, and I'll never rest until I have rejoined her and them.

"Then I may take a little look around. You know, in my work I get very little chance really to see the world. I want to see places like Manchuria, Mongolia and Tibet."

And the polar explorer, whose idea of travel for recreation is to see "places like Mongolia and Tibet," places that still furnish ambition for other explorers, approved and autographed his portrait and was left in his little pink and grey room.

Roman Catholic Priest Told Miss Montgomery How He Obtained Special Dispensation From the Pope

FOLLOWING the publication of her first novels, Miss L. M. Montgomery, author of "Anne of Green Gables" and subsequent "Anne" books, received reams of letters from all sorts of admirers in various parts of the world.

One of these letters was from a Roman Catholic priest living in England, who wrote that he was going down to a retreat for nuns in the south of England, and that he was taking "Anne of Green Gables" with him. He explained that the nuns were not supposed to read secular books, but thinking they would enjoy "Anne" he had secured a special dispensation from the pope in order that he might give it to them.

L. M. Montgomery

Another letter was from an old man, seventy years of age, who lived in Australia, and who wrote that he had walked twenty miles to get the sequel to "Anne".

Numbers of the letters from young girls which found their way to Miss Montgomery, were addressed simply "Anne Shirley, Green Gables, Prince Edward Island.

On a return visit to her native Prince Edward Island, some time after Miss Montgomery had changed her name to Mrs. Macdonald, a local paper announced in its social columns that Miss L. M. Montgomery and infant son were spending a few weeks in the old house.

LOVE FOR A GERMAN MADE FRENCH ACTRESS RETIRE

Correspondence With a German Banker During the War Drove Beautiful Lavalliere to Convent

ONE of the loveliest and most renowned actresses in Paris before the war was Eve Lavalliere. One day five years ago she disappeared, and later the story was circulated that she had renounced the world and entered a convent in the Savoy Mountains. Photographs appeared showing her in demure costume behind high walls, but, it seems now, these walls were only a small way removed from Paris, and the former beauty, now shrunken and white-haired, did not leave the stage because of religious fervor.

She was compelled to abandon acting by members of her profession, who discovered that she had continued to correspond with a prominent German banker throughout the world conflict. At one moment the case might have taken a more serious turn, but, according to the information circulating now, honor was declared satisfied provided Mlle. Eve left the stage forever.

Sometimes she comes to Paris, veiled, unobserved, to visit theatres where once she triumphed, but generally her old and still loyal friends who refuse to believe her guilty of the terrible sin of corresponding with a German journey out and visit her at a villa buried in the Saint Germain forest.

DRY-AS-DUST LAW BOOKS DROVE DEACON TO FICTION

Tried Manifold Number of Jobs Before He Budded Forth as an Author

WILLIAM A. DEACON, generally known as "Candide" of "Saturday Night," whose new book, "Pens and Pirates," is one of the most talked of books in Canadian literary circles, was not always a writing man. In fact his ability to hammer out thoughts on a typewriter is of comparatively recent date.

He was in business for five years, attended three universities intermittently, decided suddenly to take a three year law course in one year at the University of Manitoba, from which he graduated with the degree of LL.B.; served nine years at law and put in three seasons as fire ranger in the Temagami district.

W. A. Deacon

While practising law in Winnipeg he contributed to the Manitoba Free Press literary supplement the Literary Review of The New York Evening Post, and The New York Times Book Review Supplement. In the spring of 1922 he was invited to fill the chair vacated by Peter O'Donovan in the Saturday Night office, and this year he budded forth as an author of two volumes. The first volume, "Pens and Pirates," has received much favorable mention.

Deacon tells his friends that he tried almost every other way of making a living before he tackled literature. He claims that the experience he gained in the business world has helped him considerably in interpreting fiction, while his days and nights spent in Temagami helped him to more readily distinguish the nature fakir from the real thing. So far as the law is concerned, he declares reading Coke and Selden and the Principles of Roman Law developed in him an ardent desire for livelier reading. This is probably the reason why he prefers fiction to anything else.

THE TIME PRINCESS PAT LAUGHED IN PUBLIC

Lady Patricia May Have Looked Sad, She Could Laugh Heartily About a Black Eye

WHEN Lady Patricia Ramsay was the reigning beauty of Ottawa society, as the Princess Patricia of Connaught, she was by no means a social butterfly.

Ottawa remembers the Princess both for her personal charm and for an habitual sadness of appearance, and those of romantic mind delight to attribute the melancholy of the princess to pining for her absent sweetheart, the stalwart naval officer with whom she has now effected a happy union. For a long time, say these people there was little reason to hope that differences in rank could be overcome so as to enable the princess to marry the husband of her choice. Ottawa likes to think it had a peek into a popular novel in real life.

Princess Pat

But there was one occasion on which Princess Patricia enjoyed a hearty fit of laughter, and not without some reason.

A certain prominent Ottawa civil servant, now deceased, was something of a Bohemian and was fond of expressing pronounced Socialistic views. He was a friend and crony of a number of Socialists at the Capital. One day this civil servant received notice that he had been awarded a "C. M. G." And shortly afterwards, he was commanded to appear at a dinner party at Government House for the formal bestowal of the honor by the Duke of Connaught.

On the morning of the day of his visit to Government House, the man who had been honored called into a bar, either in Ottawa or Hull, to get a "bracer" and there he encountered one of his Socialistic friends whose enthusiasm for "the cause" was very pronounced. The real Socialist, who had been bracing himself for some time, became violently enraged when he heard that his civil servant friend had accepted the "C. M. G."

"Traitor," he cried, and leaning over he struck the other a severe blow with his fist in the right eye.

The injured man hurried home and, securing a piece of beefsteak, applied it to the damaged optic. He had to appear at the Government House function on the same night, nevertheless, with his eye bearing the mark of the encounter.

As luck would have it, the civil servant found himself seated at dinner beside the Princess Patricia. He felt somewhat uncomfortable.

"You men of the civil service must have some very interesting experiences," remarked the princess.

"One of the most interesting I have had came just this morning," replied the guest with the black eye, deciding to make a clean breast of the whole matter. He showed the princess his eye and told the whole story.

They say at Ottawa that the Princess Patricia never laughed so heartily in public as she did on hearing how the new "C. M. G." secured his black eye.

WEARS A RED NECKTIE, HAS KNOCKOUT SPEECH

Ontario Agricultural President Offered Brief Wisdom to a Young Married Man

PROF. J. B. REYNOLDS, B.A., president of the Ontario Agricultural College, is as well known by his dry sense of humor and the habitual wearing of a red tie as by his precise and emphatic speech.

A senior who had failed to win his degree appealed to the professor for sympathy and advice. He wrote to the extent that immediately on completing the final exams he had married the "finest" little girl in the world, but now he was embarrassed by not having received his degree. What would he do?

LORD CURZON WAS STUMPED ONCE BY LI HUNG CHANG

LORD CURZON acknowledges one time when he was properly stumped by the great Chinese statesman, Li Hung Chang. In his recent book, "Tales of Travel," the British foreign secretary relates the incident.

"While we (Lord Curzon and Li Hung Chang) "were being photographed, he suddenly asked me once again how old I was; and upon my replying that I was 36—'Dear me,' he said, 'you are exactly the same age as the German emperor. I acknowledged the impeachment, whereupon he continued as follows:

"'The German emperor, however, has six sons. How many have you?'"

Curzon: I have only recently been married, and I regret that so far I have none.

Li Hung Chang: Then what have you been doing all this time?

"To this question I admit that I could not find, nor even now can I suggest, an appropriate answer."

A THRILLING INCIDENT

THE most dramatic incident in the course of his life, according to Sir Homewood Crawford, the city of London's solicitor, who is retiring after occupying the post for thirty-eight years, occurred at an execution at Newgate, when he was under-sheriff.

Just before the execution a reprieve arrived. Although it was written on home office paper, it was enclosed in a board of trade envelope, and Sir Homewood was afraid it was a forgery.

"It was a trying position," Sir Homewood declares, "for to postpone the execution unnecessarily would have been cruel to the murderer. I decided to go on with it, and in an hour or so I found that the reprieve was a forgery."

CALGARY WON HOLIDAY GAME

"Newsy" Lalonde's Team Defeated Saskatoon 3 to 2 on Christmas Day.

CALGARY, December 26 (Canadian Press). — Newsy Lalonde and his Saskatoon Crescents played the part of Santa Claus here on Monday afternoon, and made Calgary's Christmas holiday a merry one, as they slipped a victory into the Tigers' stocking, the final score of the Western Canada Hockey League fixture being: Calgary 3, Saskatoon 2.

The Crescents came here heralded as a great team of puck artists, and they certainly lived up to all advance notices.

Two goals by Oliver in the first three minutes of the second period paved the way for the Tigers' win.

The first hit about three feet in front of Hainsworth, and bounded over his skate. The second was shot from the blue line, when Hainsworth's view was obscured by his defence men.

Lalonde's goal was a solo rush, in which he pulled Reid out of the net.

Morris scored the Tigers' third goal in the last period, the puck being too hot, and glancing off Hainsworth's pad, nestled in the net.

Reid came out to secure the puck from a scrimmage, and Scott "goliedd" it into the net for the second Saskatoon tally.

WILL ENTER TEAM

HASTINGS, Dec. 26.—Manager Clapper received word on Saturday from Campbellford that they would be glad to enter a team in a league with Warkworth, Hastings and Keene.

This would make a good group as all the other towns have covered rinks except Hastings.

A meeting of the four towns will be called right away to draw a schedule and get ready for the season.

Hastings boys have had a couple of night's practice on the frog pond at the Cobourg Roard Corners and are waiting patiently for the weatherman to send along the ice.

Manager Scriver is busy getting the rink in shape and has extended the fences so as to give a large ice space and give more room for the spectators.

With the addition of Keene the spectators of the Trent district will be treated to some good hockey as such stars as Bowie and Kietel, who have lined up with Keene in former years, are available.

REBELS IN MEXICO STILL ON RAMPAGE

(By Frederick N. Neumer, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

MEXICO CITY, December 24. — Fearing a rebel thrust from the south, President Obregon to-day despatched General Annulfo Gomez, military commander of the capital, with 15,000 men to Cuernavaca, in the State of Morelos.

In the east the Federals were busy consolidating their victory at Puebla, which they captured on Saturday afternoon, not earlier as erroneously reported.

Two hundred rebel dead were left behind when the De la Huerta force was driven from Puebla, and 100 prisoners were taken.

Airplanes and artillery were used in the attack before the city was captured.

Latest reports indicated that the effort had been unsuccessful.

Jack Taylor of Omaha Awarded Decision in Ten-Round Bout.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., December 26 (Canadian Press). — Jack Taylor, Omaha, Neb., negro heavyweight, was given the decision over Battling Siki, the Senegalese heavyweight, in a ten-round bout here yesterday.

Siki, who apparently was not in the best of condition, forced the fighting in the first five rounds, and there were numerous stiff mixups in which wicked punches were exchanged.

Then Siki's lack of condition began to tell, and he was forced to hold frequently during the remainder of the contest.

At the end of the bout one of Siki's eyes was closed, and blood was flowing from his mouth and nose.

MURCHISON.

Two of the fastest sprint men in America, both outstanding reliances for the Olympic events, are laid up with injuries. What effect these injuries will have on the strength of the American invading team depends entirely on future developments.

The two illustrious cripples are Charley Paddock of California and Loren Murchison of New York. Paddock sprained his ankle in a recent basketball game, and is now on crutches. He will be out of training for a month, possibly longer.

Murchison is suffering from a form of spinal trouble, and no one seems able to forecast his future so far as the Olympiad is concerned.

It is needless to add that America's chances in the sprints without Paddock and Murchison, or with either missing, will be greatly reduced.

BASEBALL HAD BIG MONEY YEAR

By HENRY L. FARRELL.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(United Press).—Arrival of the predicted and patiently awaited "million dollar" world's series was, without doubt, the big event of 1923 in baseball.

Records for attendance and receipts at the post-season battles between the major league pennant winners were made possible by the opening of the two-million dollar Yankee Stadium, another event of record for the year.

With a capacity of 70,000 and a plan of construction which will permit its extension so that it will accommodate 100,000 when the need requires, the Yankee Stadium is the finest baseball structure in the world.

Another victory by the New York Giants and the Yankees in the pennant races and their subsequent participation in the world's series removed novel features for the season, although the two teams made a new record by staging the series between themselves for the third successive time.

Considering that the Giants were almost unanimously picked to beat the Yankees in the series, the feat of the American League champions in winning the world's championship might have been a surprise. The success of the Yankees also made a new record in that it was the first time that the world's championship had been won by a New York American League team.

Many new minor records were made on the playing field during the minor and major league seasons, but sensational performances, such as were provided when Babe Ruth was running wild several years ago, were missing.

Babe Ruth did not make a new slugging record, but the all-around improvement of baseball's greatest player was perhaps the biggest feature of the season and aroused the most interest.

Ruth lived up to his promise to settle down and play baseball. He came within ten points of taking the batting championship of the American League from Harry Heilman, the Detroit star. He finished in a tie for first place in batting in runs. He made a new record for the number of passes received during a season. He was third in base running, and he was the best right fielder in the league.

To make his comeback all the more glorious, the Babe had the honor of being named the most valuable player in the American League by the largest vote possible. His selection was unanimous.

It was Ruth's willingness to subordinate his own interests to those of the team that was largely responsible for the victory of the Yankees in the American League pennant race and in the world's series.

* * *

One of the biggest disappointments of the season resulted from the disability which made it necessary for George Sisler the "perfect ball player," to remain out of the game all season.

Disabled with eye trouble Sisler could not even get into a uniform and he didn't make an attempt to play all season. Without him the St. Louis Browns were wrecked before the season started. Sisler was appointed manager of the St. Louis club at the end of the season, but it is doubtful that he will ever be able to play again.

Prosperity was enjoyed generally all through the major and the minor leagues. Many teams made money for the first time in several years.

Failure of high priced beauties from the minors to deliver during the season caused general discussions throughout the year, and it came to be accepted generally among wise baseball men that the major league magnates will not be as extravagant in the future.

Of all the fancy priced minor league stars who came up to the big league only Willie Kamm, the $100,000 White Sox third baseman, delivered.

Jimmy O'Connell, the $75,000 outfielder, was a big disappointment with the Giants. O'Connell, however, was not well all season and there is every reason to believe that he will come through eventually.

The National League ran almost exactly according to form and the teams finished in precisely the same positions that the experts predicted before the season started.

* * *

The Chicago White Sox were a big disappointment in the American League and the Cleveland Indians turned out to be the big surprise of the year. The Detroit Tigers started poorly, but they finished strong and landed in second place. The Philadelphia Athletics looked fine up to mid-season, but they hit the bumps from there to the finish.

Retirement of Kid Gleason as the manager of the White Sox and the release of Donie Bush as manager of the Washington Senators after he had landed the team in the first division caused the greatest surprise.

The purchase of the Boston Red Sox by a syndicate, with Bobby Quinn, former business manager of the Browns, as president, and the sale of the Boston Braves to a syndicate headed by Christy Mathewson were also events of importance.

The intercollegiate season was also a great success. Observers noted a marked improvement of the game as played by the college stars.

Yale, coached by Joe Wood, the former Cleveland pitcher and outfielder, won the intercollegiate championship.

PLAYERS' UNION HEAD ACQUITTED

Charged With Offering Attorney a Case of Champagne.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press.)—Two indictments returned by the County Grand Jury last spring against Attorney Raymond J. Cannon, organizer of the Baseball Players' Union, charging him with obtaining money by false pretences and bribery, were dismissed in municipal court Monday on request of Francis E. McGovern, special prosecutor.

Cannon was accused in one indictment of bribing former District Attorney Winfred C. Zazel with a case of imported champagne.

Cannon was charged in another indictment with obtaining $400 from each of two men charged with statutory offences. He was accused of obtaining the money by representations which were said to be false.

Attorney Cannon, when asked about the case last night, said:

"The case against me was backed by the National and American Leagues. Charles A. Comiskey's private attorney acted as special prosecutor. They had the information and evidence on which the indictments were based as far back as September of 1922, but indictments were not sought or secured until February of 1923. The action was brought with the view of jeopardizing and killing any efforts in behalf of the Baseball Players' Union."

WILLIAM PHILLIPS STILL IN DEMAND

Hockey Player Could Not Be Located Yesterday at the Soo.

TORONTO, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—St. Patrick's yesterday tried to get into communication with Bill Phillips, star centre player of Sault Ste. Marie team, but there was no answering call from the northern town. Phillips could not be located in the Soo, perhaps for the very good reason that he is probably spending his Christmas holidays at Thessalon, his home town. Local owners are determined to go the limit in their efforts to secure the services of the Soo player, but his close friends say that he will not take the leap this season. Phillips has set his heart on playing for an Allan Cup winner before he joins the professionals."

Percy Hambly, St. Patrick's owner, is doing his best in the matter. He believes that the Irish have as good a chance to get Phillips as Hamilton had to secure the Green brothers, and both the latter are now playing in the National League. Some of these star amateurs are open to argument when the salary is suitable. Harold Cotton has decided not to turn professional this season unless St. Patrick's give him $3,000 a year. He is satisfied to remain in the amateur ranks until he is convinced that he will not have to sit on the bench as a professional.

STILL SEARCHING FOR AERIAL LINER

French Ministry Abandoned Hope Today for Safety of the Dixmude

(By Webb Miller, United Press Staff Correspondent).

PARIS, Dec. 26. — Hope for the missing French air liner Dixmude was virtually abandoned to-day by the Ministry of Marine. The most that remains to the officials is the hope that the dirigible's crew, or part of it, may escape alive.

Nothing definite has been heard from the Dixmude, which has been gone from her base at Cuers-Pierre-Feu, France, for more than eight days, since wireless messages from the airship were picked up on Saturday.

The Dixmude's rations gave out four days ago. Her fuel supply, consisting of 19 tons of gasoline, was exhausted last Saturday. Caught in the grip of a terrific Mediterranean storm, she drifted waith-like in an areal prison, unable to land or to make headway to her base.

Since that time, however, the winds have changed, and the last to make the Dixmude its plaything was driving the helpless dirigible inland. Cavalry garrisons throughout Tunis and Algiers were ordered out to-day by the French War Department for a search.

The troops were ordered to pass the word along to the natives, who would spread it rapidly from mouth to mouth, because the Dixmude is regarded as a supernatural sky monster by the tribesmen of Northern Africa.

Christmas Eve brought reports that various stations in Tunis had seen "the airship's searchlights" in the night sky, but as these were sometimes reported pointing to one direction and in another and were not otherwise identified as belonging to the Dixmude, the Ministry of Marine now doubts if it was the dirigible which was seen.

Moreover, the positions and times reported do not check when the wind directions are taken into account.

Technical advisers in the Aeronautic Department of the French Navy, declared it impossible for the Dixmude to be aloft unprovisioned for a week. They believe the airship landed some days ago, if in the sea with the loss of all lives, if in the desert or among the rough hills of Northern Africa, perhaps with some lives saved.

The Ministry of Marine reiterated an announcement that the Dixmude carried parachutes and expressed the inability to comprehend why the ship's young commander, Comm, Du Plessy De Grenedan, had not ordered some member of the crew to drop overboard with messages, if the dirigible actually hovered over or near towns as reported.

RAILWAY WRECK HALIBURTON LINE

Injured Are Recovering From the Shock

HALIBURTON, December 26. — A serious railway accident, which, fortunately, was not attended with any fatalities, occurred on Monday evening on the Haliburton line, just one mile and a half this side of the village, when the 2.40 o'clock train left the track.

The accident occurred about 6.05 o'clock, and when the train was rounding a curve after leaving Gould's Crossing.

The rails are believed to have spread, allowing the baggage car, two day coaches and the mail car to leave the track.

The engine remained on the rails.

The baggage car contained Baggageman Jack Brennan, Expressman Dick Snider, Brakeman Reid, and Engineer Wallace Craighead, who was riding on leave, turned turtle, and commenced to burn immediately.

The men jumped through the car and made their escape, although when the car turned Mr. Craighead was thrown on his back, and is at present confined to his home with a severely wrenched back.

Mr. Snider received cuts about the head.

The one truck of the mail coach left the track, but it remained upright.

The mail was all saved, but the Christmas express was all consumed by the flames.

The train was in charge of Conductor Shaw and Engineer King.

Conductor Fred Shaw, severe cuts about the head, which required several stitches.

Expressman Snider, cuts about the head.

Mrs. Wid. Kellett, of Donald, injuries to the side and head and one leg fractured.

Mrs. Percy Tripp, of Donald, severe neck, head and arm bruises.

Mr. and Mrs. Schaeffee nee Myrtle Howe), badly cut and shaken up. Mrs. Schaeffee also sustained a broken collar bone while trying to protect her baby in the fall.

Miss Hazel Curry, injuries about the head and arms.

Coach on Fire.

When the passenger coaches toppled over on their sides, the scene was indescribable. The women passengers screamed in terror.

To add to the seriousness of the situation, the fumes of the gas became oppressive, and some of the passengers were well nigh suffocated when they were released.

Great credit is due the staff on the express coach, as well as the engineer and fireman, for their heroic work in rescuing the passengers who were taken out through the windows.

O bucket brigade was also formed, the members working like Trojans in extinguishing the flames before further property was consumed.

No time was lost in getting the injured into the village of Haliburton, where excitement reigned supreme, especially among those who had relatives and friends on the train.

Word was immediately despatched to Lindsay, and the auxiliary was despatched with all possible speed.

The track was cleared in good time and the debris removed.

Information received from Haliburton this morning is to the effect that the injured were progressing satisfactorily, although some of them are suffering from the shock.

MOTIONS ARRIVE FOR PARLIAMENT

Although No Summons Has Been Issued--Laborite Demands Special Investigation of Home Bank.

OTTAWA, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press). — Parliament has not yet been summoned but notices of motion are already arriving, two—the only ones so far—are in hand, both of them from Wm. Irvine, Labour Member of East Calgary. In one, Mr. Irvine asks for the appointment of a special committee to investigate the failure of the Home Bank with a view to "discover any weakness in the Bank Act which may be amended to prevent a similar occurrence" and to devise some means of protecting depositors. The other asks for instructions to the Banking committee to continue its investigation into credit in accordance with that committee's recommendations last session.

The child's vital energy, bent on asserting itself, is confronted with arbitrary and conflicting codes of living. He is extremely suggestible. Now suggestibility, as Miller points out (New Psychology and the Teacher), is of genetic value in that it affords the possibility of transmitting rapidly to a child a great amount of racial experience, while he is still incapable of fully apprehending the rational basis of it. It is made necessary because of his inexperience of causal relations, and his inability to apprehend the claims of the community. But suggestibility tends to persist on into mature life and herein lies the danger which education must take cognizance of. Because of the "snare of patronage," or of "jealousy," the "instinct of the potter," or the teacher's own experience of authority, he may be led to an unwise use of authority, and this in turn leads to the pupil becoming either permanently suggestible or a rebel against all authority. Just as it is possible to distort and even stunt the growth of a plant, so it is possible, even with the best intentions in the world, to maim the child mind in its growth. The result of distortion and repression may vary from expressing the most harmless eccentricity to embodying itself in any form of insanity. For when a child is really inhibited or repressed, there results that form of psychological disablement known as authority-complex. This complex may begin as a protest against the particular repressing circumstance, and end as a protest against life itself.

The danger of unwise use of authority may be seen where a small boy is shut in a room for a given period of time, and told that he must learn arithmetic. If during that time the boy's heart interest remains in the garden outside, the danger is the setting up a dissociation in the boy. You, as teacher, are causing him so much psychic irritation that he will weave an authority-complex round you, and develop a strong dislike for mathematics and for you and the school. The repression may stunt his mathematical powers, which are an integral part of his intellectual function.

Closely associated with suggestibility is phantasy, which also is a primary factor in educability and likewise capable of abuse by educators. As Miller points out, it, too, should gradually diminish as the person matures. It is a withdrawal and retreat from reality. "Unsatisfied curiosity is responsible for much phantasy-weaving." It follows that the child's questions should not be ignored by the teacher. In fact tendencies in pupils toward a too unquestioning obedience should warn the teacher to make his pupils think for themselves. There are certain docile children who are perpetually asking: "Shall I do this now?" or "Shall I do that?" and it is so much easier to say: "Do this," or "Do that," than to make the child think it out for himself, but it is in such little things that character is built. Beware of unquestioning docility or unthinking obedience in the child, unless your aim is to produce a pliant tool for the hands of the political boss, a virtual slave in some cave-prison of modern industry, or a handy medium for the perpetuation of superstition, prejudice or ignorance at the bidding of an unscrupulous hierarchy.

The value of the phantasy tendency depends upon the closeness of its relation to actual life. The phantasy should have a stimulating effect on one's immediate living. Say, in "The Child's Unconscious Mind," has a chapter on "Turning the Child from Reality," in which he strikingly refers to the term "school" as derived from "Schola," meaning "leisure" or "absence of real work," and to the high school graduation motto, "Ex scholea vita in scholam vitea, meaning out from the life of school into the school of life." The conception of the school which is herein indicated has seriously crippled education by its divorcing the school from real living. Certainly the school that separates pupils from real living is a poor agency for fitting them for life. The new psychology will lead to a new type of school where real living will be the enjoyment of real life by the pupils and where phantasy will consequently be as it ought to be, a real handmaid to education. Such schools are needed, where authority is not made too hard, lest the pupil become ultra-suggestible or a rebel; where reality is found, but not made too hard, lest the child yield to it in a way that is comparable to the action of the ultra-suggestible, or else resist it, and so become the materialist, comparable to the rebel.

In the new school the value of creative work will be realized. The good of self-realization will be realized through self-activity, achievement by the pupils. Adequate and appropriate opportunities for achievement will exclude sensation-mongering, the alternative to achievement. "The boy who from his earliest years has been surrounded by opportunities for achievement, who has been neither crushed nor adored at home, who has never known what it is to have his interest dammed back, and to feel shut in upon himself, to whom work and play have much the same value as possibilities for achievement; such a boy rarely if ever, "needs to find his level," and be taught to think less of himself. The arid but wholesome experience of being ignored need not be associated with the soul-destroying process of being bored, from which spring many of the most catastrophic outbursts of naughtiness and undesirable self-assertion." In the new school the force of spontaneous interest will replace enforced attention, as, set free to work on suitable material, it encounters its own experience of discipline while it makes its way along the road to achievement. "The new psychology has taken us back towards the conception of happiness as 'unimpeded energy,' and has shown that our belief in enforced control is largely the projection of the distrust of our own unconscious energies." However, as Miller further indicates, "the mere removal of discipline may have a negative effect unless it is associated with a really infectious spirit of achievement, which automatically brings in its train a reconciliation to self-mastery.

Furthermore, there is "the danger of exaggerating the importance of individual achievement at the expense of developing loyalty and co-operation." As criteria of the child's achievement, the expression of the creative impulse, and social value must go hand in hand. Thus our ideal of self-expression in education is clarified, and we are saved from the mistake that Rousseau made, that of imagining that the individual will ever develop freely if his egoistic impulses alone are considered. The child needs opportunities for the expression of his altruistic impulses, for social cooperation and fellowship, just as much as he needs opportunities for creative work. The spoiled, selfish child is often cited as an instance of the dangers of too much freedom; but the truth is that he is not free at all, nor is he even being prepared for freedom. Certain sides of his nature are being consistently repressed, and consequently he is being warped. The impulse towards the protection of others of his own kind who are perhaps weaker than himself is as much a part of his real nature as is his instinct of self-assertion: and if there are no opportunities for its expression, if the school is run on competitive and not co-operative lines, he will never attain to full development. Membership in a vitally organized group is therefore essential to the individual, for it alone brings him opportunities to create in its service, and consequently to express both individualistic and social impulses. The implications of this fact, for school organization, are obvious. This is what Tansley had in mind when he wrote: "The hardest and greatest task of all is the education of the herd mind itself." (The New Psychology, p. 293.)

Thus it will be seen that the new psychology will lead to the new school, or a transformation of the old school, with a tendency to greater freedom for pupils and teachers Those who will cry out in protest that such a school leads to anarchy the new psychology will point to autocratic Russia, the breeding-ground of anarchism and the home of Bolshevism. Was it too much freedom or too much repression that led to anarchy and Bolshevism there? Man is not born a "Red"; he is made such in homes, schools and nations where tyranny holds sway. Let the old stern and harsh disciplinarian with his rod of iron philosophy have the candour and honesty to acknowledge his own progeny. He will find them in plenty among the anti-social inmates of prisons and the army of destructive radicals still at large in society.

MISS MARGERY WILSON, who appears in person in the picture, "Insinuation," at the Grand this Friday and Saturday.

THEATRES

"CHEATING CHEATERS."

Local theatre patrons have their last chance to-night of seeing the Rex Stock Company in one of the best bills they have offered in Peterboro, a sparkling presentation of Max Marcin's clever and amusing "crook" play, "Cheating Cheaters," a vehicle that gives every member of the organization a chance to shine. "Cheating Cheaters" has a most intriguing plot in which two gangs of crooks work at cross purposes. One is led by Rex as Tom Palmer, the other by Zana Vaughn as Ruth Brockton. She afterwards turns out to be quite another person, but it would be unfair to those who have yet to see the play to say anything more on this point. It is sufficient to say that "Cheating Cheaters" contains humor, plotting, mystery, a strong love interest and a series of surprises, and there is not a dull moment. It is well acted by the Rex Company, and elaborately staged, the scenic effects being prepared by the company's own artist, Larry Lawrence.

Rex makes his usual good job of his part as Tom Palmer, and Zana Vaughn is very effective as Ruth. Fred. Dampier gives an especially clever performance as the crook lawyer, Ire Lazarre; Billy Seymour and Wm. Yule are two realistic crooks; Herbert Lewis does good work as the fake music teacher, and Ethel Van Orden and Berty Leslie and Hazel Williams all score in important parts. "Cheating Cheaters" should attract a capacity audience to-night.

AT THE GRAND.

Miss Margery Wilson, producer, director and star of "Insinuation," was born in Kentucky, but is now living in California.

Her first important part in pictures was in Griffith's masterpiece "intolerance," taking the part of "Brown eyes" in the French period. D. W. Griffith still calls her the prodigy of pictures. Since then she has co-starred with Douglas Fairbanks, William S. Hart, Charles Ray, Frank Keenan and several others.

"Insinuation," a seven reel feature, is her own story, and is the first feature length picture that she has directed.

During Miss Wilson's appearances at the Modern and Beacon Theatres, Boston, she was given the key of the city by the mayor and many similar welcomes were given her during her personal appearances thrcugh the New England States.

AT THE CAPITOL.

GREAT WESTERN STORY IS "THE CALL OF THE CANYON"

Notable Players Featured in Superb Zane Grey Paramount Picture Production.

The bigness of the west and the nobility of its people, described as only Zane Grey can describe them, are shown in "The Call of the Canyon," Paramount's second Zane Grey production, which will be the big feature at the Capitol theatre for three days beginning next Saturday.

The story is the latest written by this popular author. It treats of a phase of American life when the love of gayety and extravagance followed in the wake of the great war. The part which the west and western people played in bringing America to a greater love of wholesome prosperity and life in the out-of-doors, is admirably shown in this excellent picture.

"The Call of the Canyon" is said to be one of the best stories ever written by Zane Grey and in the production of the picture, the spirit of the original has been faithfully retained. Mr. Grey personally assisted in the search for locations as a background for the picture.

The photoplay opens with the arrival from France of Glenn Kilbourne, played by Richard Dix, who finds his sweetheart Carley Burch, portrayed by Lois Wilson, engrossed in a gay life in New York. Disgusted with after-war extravagance he leaves for Arizona to regain his health and his faith in mankind. Here he meets Flo Hutter, a role played by Marjorie Daw. Flo falls in love with Glenn, and feeling that Carley will never consent to live in the west, he is one the point of marrying Flo.

Carley Burch unexpectedly arrives in Arizona and a series of dramatic scenes follow in which Carley wages a battle of wits against Flo for the affection of Glenn. The bigness of the spirit of westerners iss hown in the final dramatic sscenes which are filled with suspense up to the climax of the picture.

"The Call of the Caynon," it is stated, will eclipse the former high standard set by "To the Last Man," Paramount's first Zane Grey production which was heralded by critics as one of the best western pictures produced during the year.

A moving picture that provides a real, honest-to-goodness thrill! Something new and original in situations, a sudden turn to a drama that seems to be moving along just in the ordinary way, a startling denouement that brings the audience up to its toes for the last reel of a bewitching production. That's what "Suzanna" offers, the latest 'movie' starring the popular Mabel Normand.

There were good holiday crowds at the Capitol yesterday, for the dark curled star's characterization of the young Spanish-American girl, against a background of Californian life in the "roaring forties." As the daughter of a peon, the bond servant of the irritable Don Ferando, the little star has a unique setting for her alluring ways and the quibs and cranks that made her so fascinating in "Mickey. the old courts, the haciendas the finestas where the tom boy girl dances in a swirl of flashing skirts, the costumes and manners and customs of a romantic period in southern Californian history, offer a splendid atmosphere for the gay little lady.

It is one of the most interesting pictures seen here in some time. The interest centres about the half-ragged Suzanna, with her dark eyes, her smiles and her fascination. She captures the heart of the young Ramon, the son of the haughty Spanish-American house, but his father has decreed that he shall marry the high-born Senorita Dolores, daughter of Don Lie s Rodriguez. The haughty Dolores loves Pancho, the philanderer, the toreador of the bull ring, who flirts with the little Suzanna. Matters progress until the revelation to the peon girl that she is the rightful daughter of the old Don, but she gives up Ramon and conceals her true identity promising to marry Pancho, who knows the secret, if he will keep unknown the circumstances of her birth. The two couples kneel before the priest, the high born lady and her unwilling suitor at the altar within the chapel, the little peon girl and the toreador beneath a tree outside. It looks like a sad ending to a charming story, and then comes the surprise, the odd decision on the part of the hitherto docile Ramon, that gives a new twist to the finale. Another odd bit is the episode in which Pancho figures. If for nothing else than the unexpected atmosphere injected into its story, the picture would be very worth while, but it is fascinating throughout, with its langu , romantic atmosphere, its unique setting, and the art of the little star who makes it a charming and entertaining production, with the comedy element predominating.

AT THE ROYAL.

CELEBRATED SCREEN STARS IN GIBSON'S STUDIO FILM

"The Thrill Chaser," coming to the Royal Theatre tomorrow is the latest Universal-Hoot Gibson special production directed by Edward Sedgwick.

Sedgwick is the director who made "Blinky," the picture which brought this star into the new class. He also is responsible for "Out of Luck," "The Ramblin' Kid" and other Gibson successes.

"The Thrill Chaser" was written by Sedgwick in collaboration with Raymond L. Schrock. This team of writers were responsible for "The Gentleman from America," one of the most popular Gibson pictures.

"The Thrill Chaser" is about a cowboy who rode his way into the land of romance, fought his way into the movies and out-chanced his rivals in the game of love. Studio life, reflected as it is seen every day at Universal City, California, with many celebrities appearing in amusing incidents, is the material of important sequences.

Fans who have wondered where King Baggot went when he ceased to be an actor and who have wished that he would quit directing and come back on the screen in his "old line," will gain their wish when this Gibson picture come to town. Baggot is one of the Universal City directors shown in the actual work of picture making.

Hobart Henley, director of Jewel productions, like "A Lady of Quality" and now making "The Turmoil" for Universal, returns to the old art of acting in a satirical scene wherein he directs an imaginery production of "The Last Days of Pompeii."

Besides the directors, the famous stars who appear include Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry of "Merry-Go-Round," Reginald Denny and Laura La Plante. Hundreds of lesser lights, actors and extras who are around the big studio, pass through the sets in their work.

EXCELLENT PROGRAM AT ROYAL.

"The Sign of the Four", Conan Doyle's famous story now at the Royal is a mystic melodramatic and colorful romance which transports the spectator to the magic realm of adventure fiction. The streets of London, the land of India, trapdoors, mystery and through it all the character made famous by Conan Doyle, 'Sherlock Holmes.' It is out of the beaten track of photoplays and is well worth seeing. The comedy "Pat's Patent" with Charlie Murray is very funny. The Western is full of life. It was voted a good performance by the large holiday crowds yesterday.

CELEBRATIONS IN GREECE OVER VENIZELOS' RETURN

ATHENS, Dec. 26. — (United Press). — Celebrations throughout Greece followed announcement of Venizelous impending return.

The former Premiers hesitation fostered by fears of his bride, is believed to have been overcome by an urgent cabled invitation signed by 300 deputies.

Venizelos cabled that he did not desire a republic reception and urged the Liberals to elect a definite leader, as he was not disposed to assume leadership.

Decision of former Premier Venizelos to pay a visit to Greece without, however, returning to political arena, as he says in his telegram announcing his prospective return, is variously commented upon in political circles.

Liberals naturally are highly gratified, believing Venizelos can be induced to take up once more reins of government. Republicans are perplexed, for they do not yet know real purpose of his return.

They say political situation in Greece has not been correctly reported to former Premier and they express satisfaction at fact that he is to study the situation at first had and make sure of relative strength of parties.

SOLVED WALL STREET RIDDLE BY CABLE

"TIPSTER" SERVICE WAS STOCK MARKET GUIDE IN WOOD'S BIG KILLING

Copies of Hundreds of Cablegrams Forwarded Daily By the Head of the Service Voluntarily Shown to Newspapermen.

BOUGHT INFORMATION

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Lieutenant Osborne C. Wood, son of Governor-General Leonard Wood, of the Philippines, who is reported to have accumulated a fortune of between $700,000 and $800,000 in Wall Street, received the information on which he acted through a Wall Street "tipster" service, which sent him nightly cablegrams and for which he is reported to have paid $1,000 a month, including cable charges.

This information was disclosed yesterday by the head of the service, who exhibited to newspapermen copies of hundreds of messages sent to Lieutenant Wood, urging him to buy or sell stocks and giving analyses of stocks on which information was requested. These cablegrams ranged from three to several hundred words and were written in plain English and not in code, the daily charges running from a few dollars to nearly $100.

Never Met Wood.

This man, who said he had never met Lieutenant Wood and wouldn't know him if he saw him, received an inquiry from the young army officer shortly after Wood's arrival in the Philippines. After a exchange of messages, he agreed to supply the information wanted and cablegrams were sent to Manila every week-day night thereafter. It was learned that Lieutenant Wood had received a cablegram from the service as late as December 19.

From other sources, details of Lieutenant Wood's operations came to light. Contrary to some reports, Lieutenant Wood's amazing success was not entirely the result of "pyramiding," that is the purchase of additional stocks with the paper profits of a previous purchase.

Big Oil Profit.

The army officer's first big "killing" was in Standard Oil of New Jersey, which he was advised to buy in the fall of 1922 around $180 a share and which rose almost perpendicularly to $250.50 without a "break" of any consequence. Lieutenant Wood is reported to have admitted a profit of 60 points on that stock, but no information is available as to the extent of his original purchase.

Professional Wall Street speculators frankly confessed that Lieut. Wood's success was extraordinary, especially when it is considered that he is 6,000 miles from Wall Street.

All of the army officer's operations were not profitable, however, one instance being known where he took a loss of at least ten points in American Hide and Leather stock, which had a sharp break shortly after he purchased it on the publication of an unfavorable earnings report.

Switched to Selling.

It was learned on good authority that last July and August, Lieutenant Wood was "long" of $35,000 shares of stock, which probably required a "margin" of nearly $500,000 for a man in his position. Less than five weeks later he was "short" of 37,000 shares, having disposed of most of his "long" stock at a profit of $75,000 in the interval and going "short" of stocks in which he previously had made a profit on the long side.

A Personal Matter.

NEWTON, Mass., Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Secretary of War John W. Weeks, who is spending the holiday season at his home in West Newton, admitted last night that he had taken official notice of reports that Lieutenant Osborn C. Wood, son and military aide of General Leonard Wood, Governor-General of the Philippines, had been engaged in investments on a large scale.

Secretary Weeks said that some months ago it was brought to his attention that large checks were coming through United States banks to the credit of Lieutenant Wood, who is stationed at Manila. Secretary Weeks said he directed that these operations should cease and that the order was complied with once.

Mr. Weeks said that he considered the financial operations entirely personal to Lieutenant Wood and "did not think the subject one that warranted department action."

Crowd at Auction Boycott Sheriff

SASKATOON, Sask., Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press)— Angered by the action of the sheriff in seizing the livestock, implements and household furniture of J. E. Butterworth, a pioneer farmer living 24 miles northeast of Kindersley, a hostile crowd gathered at the sheriff's auction sale and instituted a boycott which was effective. The auctioneer attempted to sell the effects but was hissed and hooted so vigorously, he postponed the sale. One set of harness was bought for $1.50 and was immediately handed back to Butterworth by the purchaser.

CONFERRED ON CHURCH UNION

No Progress Resulted From Meetings of the Anglicans and Roman Catholics.

LONDON, December 27. Canadian Press. — The question of the reunion of the churches, especially the Anglican and the Roman Catholic, which was advocated in resolutions at the famous Lambeth Conference in 1920, has made only the smallest headway, according to a Christmas letter which the Archbishop of Canterbury has isued from Lambeth Palace to the dignitaries of the Anglican communion.

Reviewing all that has happened since that conference, the Archbishop disclosed that three private conferences have since been held, at Malines, initiated by Cardinal Mercier and some few Anglicans, with the object of discussing "the outstanding and familiar barriers between the Church of England and the Church of Rome."

The third of these essentially private and unofficial conferences was held only a few weeks ago, and the Archbishop says that, although he himself accepts personal responsibility, he does not desire to involve others in that responsibility. He explains that the conferences cannot properly be described as negotiations since the Anglicans participating were in no sense delegates of the whole church.

The movement has merely sought some restatement of controverted questions and the elucidation of perplexities. He believes that further conversations must follow, but in conclusion, says:

"The difficulties are immense you know them as clearly as I do. They may prove for some time to come insuperable. Paul may plant and Apollos water—it is God who giveth the increase."

NERVE ELEVATES SINGER TO FAME.

Nerve Made Elizabeth Kerr One of the Greatest Singers in America.

By GEORGE BRITT.

Because of that quality she is in the class with only two or three singers in America who have leaped the great gulf separating opera choristers from the artists. As yet she is only on the threshold, taking lesser parts with the Chicago company. But she has left the ensemble, risen from the ranks and has youth, a voice, good looks and courage as guarantees for the future.

Auditions aren't so easy for choristers to get, especially before Giorgio Polacco, director and first conductor. Miss Kerr happened into the Auditorium one afternoon last year and found one in progress.

"Let me sing," she begged impulsively. "Haven't you time for me?"

Polacco nodded. She sang an aria from La Boheme, on which she had just practiced before her teacher. There was no comment and the singer went back to the routine of being a villager, a slave, a court page, or whatever the chorus had to represent.

Several months later in Boston a soprano became ill. Polacco remembered and called for Miss Kerr. After that, a contract; and this season she is classed as an "artist."

DUG UP CORPSE TO LAY GHOSTS ATTORNEY SAYS

Maine Official Indicts So-Called Civilized People of Superstition in Explaining Ghoulish Deed.

WILL GO THE LIMIT.

DAMARISCOTTA, Maine, Dec. 27.— County Attorney Weston M. Hilton said yesterday that he would ask the State for assistance and would "go the limit" in an effort to discover who dug up John Snow's body on Tuesday and burned it in the cottage in Jefferson, where Snow killed three women and sent a bullet into his own body on Saturday. If the persons responsible for what he characterized as one of the most disgraceful things Lincoln County had ever known were identified, he said, he would be prosecuted.

Referring to Snow as a "poor, insane man" the County Attorney expressed the belief that superstition played a part in yesterday's affair. He said that he had learned that some of the residents of that section of the county held to the belief that if the body of a murderer was burned the ghosts of his victims would not be uneasy. One man, he said, told him that he spent part of Monday night in the vicinity of the cottage watching to see if the ghosts of the three women were walking there.

OSHAWA'S THREE FOR MAYORALTY

Mayor Trick Opposed By Ex-Mayor Stacey and Roland M. Moffatt — Announced For Race.

OSHAWA, Dec. 26.—Oshawa is to have one of the hottest Mayoralty fights at the January elections with three candidates definitely in the race: the present Mayor W. J. Trick ex-Mayor John Stacey and Roland M. Moffatt. The nomination proceedings promise a wordy battle with last year's defeated candidate leading the attack. With an application for city charter before the Railway and Municipal Board which will be heard the latter part of January and if approved, the Reeve, 1st 2nd and 3rd Deputy Reeve ships will be done away with, these offices will likely go by acclamation, although one new face will be seen occupying the second depty-reeveship as Frank L. Mason after thirteen years of continuous service as municipal legislator has decided to retire.

The Council as it now stands has two representatives from each of the five wards, are Northwest Ward loses one representative from this year's council, Thos. Hawkes, who is ocean-bound for Australia where he will take up residence; Brewer Brown drops out in the south west ward, he having been appointed Relief Officer; O. R. Burns from the South east Ward is on an extended trip to California, but while he will not be present to conduct a personal campaign, his friends in the ward will look after his nomination.

There is an agitation on foot, providing the cityhood charter is received to divide the town into six wards with two or three members for each, the wards to run east and west instead of at present being divided with boundaries marked by Simcoe and King streets and Base Line. The main difficulty with the new arrangement will be in the southern portion of the town where through streets are not as numerous as in the north, while a division to give each ward an equal population as regards voting powers will entail a great amount of work and thought by the council elected in January.

Work Resumed on Tomb of Pharaoh

LUXOR, Egypt, Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Work was resumed on Tutenkhamen's tomb yesterday morning after the customary break for the weekly market day, which also this time happened to be Christmas.

Howard Carter, having dismantled the first section of the roof of the canopy, or outer shrine over Tutenkhamen's scarcophagus, tackled the great wooden rack that supports the line pall over the second shrine. During the course of the morning's operations two alabaster tablets bearing the King's cartouche were discovered.

PAID HOMAGE TO MME. CURIE

PARIS, Dec. 27.—The discovery of radium twenty-five years ago yesterday by Mme. Marie Curie and her late husband, Professor Pierre Curie, was celebrated at the Sorbonne with many notables in attendance, including members of the Cabinet, the diplomatic corps and prominent scientists.

President Millerand, in an address emphasized the gratitude of the world to the modest woman scientist largely responsible for it.

Mme. Curie, in a brief but emotional reply, expressed regret that her husband had not lived to receive the honors due him. She said that the primitiveness of their laboratory and the difficulties under which they worked gave an air of romance to the discovery, but that this romantic element had not been an advantage.

"It exhausted our strength and delayed our success," she declared. Their five years of experimentation might have been accomplished in two under proper conditions, she added.

Last Grain Boat Runs Into Storm

FORT WILLIAM, Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—The grain carrier C. E. Jenkins which left Monday afternoon with the last wheat cargo of the season was detained outside the harbor by a lowering of the glass, an indication of rough or threatening weather on the lakes. She was still seen in the shelter of the bay this afternoon and no news of her departure yesterday has been received at the local marine offices.

UNITED STATES MEAT PRODUCTION GREATEST IN HISTORY THIS YEAR

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Production of meat in the United States this year was the greatest in history, exceeding last year's figures by one and a half billion pounds, according to estimates by the Institute of American Meat Packers. A big jump in pork production was largely responsible for the increase, ten million more hogs being bought by the packers than in 1922.

Charles E. Herrick, president of the Institute, said virtually all of the increased production has moved into consumption either here or abroad.

Live stock producers, he said, received more for their cattle, sheep and lambs, than they did ten years ago, but, in keeping with lower prices of pork products, prices for hogs were lower.

Wholesale meat prices, he asserted, were the lowest of a decade or more. Declines from peak prices, he declared, ranged from 20 per cent. to more than 70 per cent.

DISBAND GREEK FORCES HAVING OUSTED GEORGE

MORE APPEALS.

LONDON, December 27. — Canadian Press. — The military organizations in Greece which agitated for the departure of King George, says an agency despatch from Athens, have been dissolved voluntarily, in view of former Premier Venizelos' decision to return to Greece. The organizations have notified M. Venizelos that having fulfilled their aims they would leave the future confidently in his hands.

The services organized by Col. Plastiras as leader of the military revolution will also be dispersed on January 1, the despatch adds. The newly elected national assembly will be opened the following day with a speech by Colonel Plastiras and then adjourned until the third week in January after the Greek fetes, thus giving M. Venizelos time to consider the situation.

VENIZELOS RETICENT.

PARIS, Dec. 27. — Former Premier Venizelos of Greece, who is in Paris, continues to receive personal and collective appeals from Greeks to take charge of the destinies of the country. His only remark concerning his recently announced intention to return his native country is that he is going to Athens to consult friends and important public men as to the political situation.

The latest appeal received is from a military league asking him to head a new government.

INSANE PATIENTS BURNED TO DEATH

Seventeen Lose Their Lives and Three Are Missing --3,500 Inmates in Hospital.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.— (Canadian Press.)—Fourteen patients and three attendants at the State Hospital for the Insane at Dunning, were burned to death and three others are missing, as the result of a fire which destroyed the old tuberculosis pavilion early last night.

More than 500 patients were led to safety through the smoke and rain, under brilliant illumination, to the main assembly hall, half a mile away. There was no panic among the 3,500 inmates.

The bodies of the dead patients were found in the ruins of Ward 3, while the firemen were removing the debris.

The fire, which started shortly before six o'clock, from an unknown cause, was confined to a one-storey pavilion. Between 500 and 600 men were housed there. Nearly all were at dinner. The clang of bells brought quick organization and action from Dr. S. Mintek and his 20 assistants in the building, in which returned "escapes," parole men and paresis victims were confined. The wards were searched as rapidly as possible an dseveral men who were sleeping or who were violent, were carried out.

A line was formed and the march through the rain began.

The police from nearby stations were stationed around the grounds to prevent general escape and other squads of police entered the buildings to aid attendants in the wards.

OPENING DATE MAY BE FIXED THIS EVENING

Probable That Parliamentary Opening Will Not Be Until Middle of February--Supreme Court Appointment.

GORDON NAMED

OTTAWA, December 27. — The date of the opening of Parliament may be determined at a meeting of the cabinet which will be held late this afternoon. It is certain that the House will not meet before February, probably about the middle of the month.

Another important matter which will it is believed, be decided to-day, is the filling of the vacancy on the bench of the Supreme Court of Canada.

There is a persistent rumour that Hon. Rodelph Lemieux, Speaker of the House, will be appointed to the position, but official confirmation is lacking.

Should this appointment go through, the assumption is that Deputy Speaker Gordon would be elevated to the Speakership, and that one of the French-speaking supporters of the Government would be given the post of Deputy.

A number of other appointments remain to be made. The vacancy of longest standing is in the office of the Auditor-General. Last session the Opposition leaders protested that the Government should fill this office without delay, and it seems likely that an appointment will be made before Parliament meets again.

A vacancy exists on the directorate of the Canadian National Railways, which will be filled by the appointment of an Ontario man, probably from Toronto.

There are two Senatorial vacancies and one or two vacant Judgeships to be filled.

Rt. Hon. W. S. Fielding, Finance Minister, had a good night, and continues to progress favorably, it was announced at his home this morning.

Coastguard Battled Storm in Open Launch.

NEWPORT, Ore., December 27 (Canadian Press). — Eight members of the Yaquina Bay Coastguard life-saving crew, who battled with one of the worst storms of the year, while exposed in an open launch for more than forty hours, arrived in port yesterday after they had been assisted by a tug which went out across the rough bar on Wednesday morning with supplies for the men and fuel for the launch.

The life-savers, who started from here late Monday on a rescue mission, were unable to return to port owing to the violence of the seas.

VOTERS' GUIDE FOR ELECTION NEXT TUESDAY

Changes in Voters' List Necessitated by Addition of 16 Polling Places --Electors May Save Themselves Trouble.

POLLING BOOTHS

The increase in the number of voters this year, and the consequent increase in the number of polling subdivisions and polling places from 22 to 38, has necessitated a change in all the sub-divisions.

It will save trouble on election day if the electors ascertain what polling sub-division they are in, and where they will have to go to vote.

Another change in the voters list is that the names are arranged by streets instead of alphabetically, so that upon going to vote electors will give to the polling officials their streets and numbers as well as their names.

The following are the polling subdivisions and the polling places for the municipal elections, the boundaries in each case being in the centre of the street named:

No. 1. — South of Crescent street, and east of Lock street to Princess street, and east of Maude street south of Princess street, at H. Allen's store, 112 Gladstone avenue.

CHRISTMAS DAY ENDED IN RACE FROM BULLETS

POSTAL RECORD.

CAMPBELLFORD, December 27 —There was an attempt at a hold-up in this district on the night of Christmas Day, the first case of the kind reported in years. The attempt failed through what the intended victim regards as nothing short of a miracle.

Thomas J. Barrie, who resides on Frout Street, accompanied by his wife and daughter, spent the holiday at the home of his married daughter near Warkworth, driving out with a horse and buggy. They were returning by way of the Grand Road and passed through Meyersburg about 8 o'clock in the evening.

When they got as far as the old lime kilns a short distance from Meyersburg, Mr. Barrie slowed his horse down to a walk, as there is a hill at that point. There are trees and bushes on the roadside, the place being an ideal one for highwaymen.

While Mr. Barrie was making his way up the hill an automobile passed him, and the light from the lamps made everything bright. The car was no sooner past than Mr. Barrie and the other occupants of the buggy heard a man's voice from the bushes calling upon him to stop.

Instead of doing this he whipped up his horse and then a revolver shot was heard, the bullet striking the running gear of the buggy.

Mr. Barrie used his whip again and another shot was fired. This went wild, the bullet whistling over the heads of Mr. Barrie and his relatives.

The party then made their way to town at the best of speed of which the horse was capable.

Evidently there were at least two men in the bushes, as Mr. Barrie says he distinctly heard one shouting directions to the man with the revolver. There was no attempt at pursuit.

Mr. Barrie is convinced that it was the timely arrival of the automobile that saved him. It passed him opposite the spot where the highwaymen were concealed, and on account of the light they were afraid to come out on to the roadway. But for this he is convinced that they would have stopped his horse by force and succeeded in their plan.

Mr. Barrie had considerable money with him at the time. He is treasurer of the Sons of Scotland Society, and before he left home put in his pocket funds belonging to that organisation, believing that the money would be safer on his person than if left in his desk at home.

His wife and daughter were considerably upset by their unusual experience, but Mr. Barrie was all for organising a posse and starting out to look for the highwaymen.

Big Postal Business.

Postmaster Owen reports a record Christmas trade at the local Post Office. On the two days days before the holiday one hundred sacks of mail were handled. One hundred sacks of parcels were received, and sixty sent out, showing that absent friends were still mindful of each other.

This heavy mail again emphasised the fact that the post office accommodation here is utterly inadequate to the amount of business transacted even on ordinary occasions. There is a lack of sufficient room in which the staff can work, and in the event of a rush the waiting room is far too small for the patrons. This room was crowded during the day on the arrival of every mail, and Mr. Owen and his busy staff of assistants gave the public prompt service, even while working under a handicap.

He's Capt. Kelly Now.

At the recent re-union of the Northumberland Regiment at Cobourg, one of the officers who successfully passed the test for promotion was Lieut. P. J. Kelly of Campbellford, who has been officially notified that the rank of captain has been conferred upon him, a fact which will be pleasing to his military comrades and to his host of friends in the town. Capt. Kelly is now second in command, under Major Bygott, of the Campbellford company of the regiment.

Lady For School Trustee.

The various womens' organizations in town are in favor of having representation on the Board of Education and it is expected that one of their number will be in the field at the coming election. There are plenty of ladies in Campbellford qualified for this important position, as they are just as well versed in parliamentary law as the majority of men now in public office, besides being more deeply interested in the educational affairs of the town.

There will be five vacancies on the board this year. The terms of Chairman D. W. Douglas, J. A. Irwin and J. C. Birmingham, all of whom were elected by the people, expire at the end of the school year. The two first mentioned will be candidates for re-election if they comply with the wishes of their friends, but Mr. Birmingham is definitely out of the field as he has announced himself as a candidate for the council.

D. J. Lynch who has served on the board for over 20 years, the appointee of the town council, retires this year. George O'Sullivan, appointed by the counties council, serving ten years, also retires this year. Whether they are re-appointed or not, both gentlemen have the satisfaction of knowing that the object they had in view and for which, with other matters, they strove so hard all these years, has been achieved, the building of a new High school.

The lady who appears to be the popular choice for a position on the board is out of town at present, so that it is impossible to make any announcement as to her intentions.

All Trustees Re-elected.

The annual meeting of the supporters of St. Mary's Separate school was held at noon yesterday in the school building. The usual routine business was transacted and the eight trustees who have managed the affairs since the school was organized will continue to look after its interests.

Services at St. Mary's.

Midnight services were held on Christmas eve in St. Mary's church. High mass was celebrated by Rev. C. J. Phelan, pastor of the church and an inspiring Christmas sermon was preached by Rev. Father Cunerty, C.S.S.R. of Toronto. There were three masses on Christmas Day, children's mass at 8 o'clock, followed by two low masses. The church was beautifully decorated and all the services were well attended. A splendid programme of music was furnished by the choir.

An Advance in Salary.

Roy Brown has been re-engaged for the season of 1924 as cheese maker in the Stanwood factory. His compensation has been set at two cents a pound, an advance over his pay for this year.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U.S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odour, smoke, or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% kerosene (coil oil).

The inventor, F. S. CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 27. — The following is the programme for the concert to be given Sunday evening at 8.30 in the Regent Theatre by the Northumberland Regiment Band:

An excellent entertainment is assured as the members of the Band under the leadership of R. T. Cowell have put in many hard hours of practice in preparation for this, the second concert of the series which it is proposed to hold during the winter. Capt. Hyland gives the Band the use of the theatre Sunday evenings absolutely free of charge.

At The Regent

There will be no pictures shown at the Regent Theatres this evening as the house has been secured for a dance which will be given under the auspices of the Bemersyde Chapter of the I.O.D.E. the proceeds of which will be added to the fund that is being raised for the soldiers' memorial.

The Regent did a land office business during the holiday and a Christmas night the crowd was the largest that has attended since Capt. Hyland took over the management of the house. There was another large audience last night when the feature picture was the stirring racing story of "The Finish of Bobby Garrison" dealing with the ups and downs of a jockey who refused to be bribed and exposing some of the shady tricks of the men who are in the racing game for the money they can win by fair means or foul and not for the love of the sport of things. The picture is full of thrills and the audience showed their ability to appreciate what is good by their hearty applause of every triumph of the right is unfolded in the story.

The vaudeville performance early in the week of Frank Bedell proved so popular that this class of entertainment will be made a feature of the weekly programme.

The ceremony was conducted under an arch of evergreens, trimmed with white ribbon and carnations. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a white gown of beaded crepe romaine, and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lily of the valley.

The wedding march was played by Miss Gladys Plumpton, and during the signing of the register, Miss Bae Chessel, sister of the groom, sang "Because" in a very pleasing manner.

Following the ceremony a dainty wedding dinner was served to about thirty guests.

The presents were numerous and costly, showing the high esteem in which the young couple are held.

Mr. and Mrs. Chessel left on the afternoon train, amid showers of confetti, for Toronto and Waterford, the bride travelling in a gown of brown chiffon velvet and Hudson seal coat, with brown hat to match.

ERIK OF DENMARK HOLDS HIS TITLE

OTTAWA, Dec. 27.— (Canadian Press.)—His Royal Highness Prince Erik of Denmark, has not lost his title of Prince on the occasion of his betrothal to Miss Louis Booth, in spite of the despatches from Copenhagen that he had—at least, that is what Prince Erik laughingly asserted last night in an interview over the telephone with him at Mr. Fred Booth's residence and Miss Booth firmly corroborated her fiance's opinion. Prince Erik said the despatch was wrong. He declared that he had received another one from King Christian.

"He has not taken away the title," Miss Booth declared. "He is to be still known as His Royal Highness and Count of Rothenburg as well."

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—It is is officially announced that Prince Erik of Denmark on the occasion of his betrothal to Miss Louis Francis Booth, of Ottawa, renounced his right to succession to the throne and his title of Prince.

FERGUSON WILL REDUCE PRICES

Liquor at Government Dispensaries Will Be Lower After First of Year.

TORONTO, Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—At a sacrifice of between $350,000 and $500,000 annual revenue the Ferguson administration is cutting liquor prices at Ontario government dispensaries. The new prices go into effect on the first of the year.

"During the election campaign," stated Attorney General Nickle yesterday. "The Conservative party made it abundantly clear that it was disatisfied with the huge dispensaries, particularly in view of the fact that the liquor was being sold for medicinal purposes. I have had the matter under consideration for some time, with the result that a reduction in prices had been decided upon

Although last year's liquor sales statistics are not available as yet, it is understood from government circles that net profits to the government were approximately a million dollars. In former years, they have reached about three quarters of a million dollars, in which connection former attorney-general Raney was subjected to severe criticism from the then Conservative opposition.

Commencing with the New Year, according to the official Government announcement a substantial reduction will be made in the price of practically all liquors sold by the Government dispensaries.

BIG PRICES PAID FOR STAMP STOCK.

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—(Associated Press)—Fabulous prices have been realized from some of the rare stamps in the collection which formerly belonged to Emperor William II, which is being sold in Paris. A stamp of the Grand Duchy of Baden, only three specimens of which are in existence, brought 12,000 francs and a Spanish stamp from the middle of last centruy brought almost as much. Already more than 12,000,000 francs have been realized from the sale.

This famous collection of stamps was given to the ex-kaiser in the will of a son of the late Duchess of Galliera who had taken Austrian citizenship under the name of Count de la Renotiere. William II had instituted the sale of this stamp collection in France before the war began and the remainder of the collection was seized by the entente powers.

JANETVILLE NEWS

Presbyterian Concert.

The Presbyterian Sunday school held its Christmas concert and Christmas tree on Friday evening last and had a good programme and excellent time. Rev. Mr. Walker, the pastor, acted as chairman, while Rev Mr. Ross, pastor of the Methodist church, gave an address. Santa Claus came about 10 p.m., and was right royally received. Everybody was pleased with the entertainment.

"Light of the World"

The great pageant entitled "The Light of the World," was presented by the Janetville, Methodist Sunday School on Christmas eve in the Foresters' Hall of the village By common consent it was the finest entertainment ever given in Janetville in connection with the Sunday school.

An invisible quartette, composed of Mrs. E. Bradburn and Mrs. Rev. Ross, with Mr. W. W. Stinson and Mr. E. Hannah, furnished music suitable for the occasion and the subject.

The whole adult Sunday school, with a number of the juveniles, took part, with a grace and reverence bordening on perfection. The prophets and the magi were represented by young men, the ambassadors by youths while the shepherds' parts fell upon boys of about 14 years.

The costumes were most beautiful and becoming, some of them having been secured in Toronto.

The pageant was presented in five parts, and the pastor, Rev. Mr. Ross, explained the coming scene each time before the curtain was lifted. About 300 people attended the entertainment, and all went away with a more exalted idea of the beauty and glory surrounding the "Nativity," which was the greatest event in the history of the world. The audience expressed their gratitude at splendid effort of Janetville's young Methodists.

GRASS HILL THEFTS GAVE GREAT TROUBLE

Grass Hill Station on the C.N.R. has been for some time the scene of thefts, when merchandise consigned by Peterboro merchants to farmers in that district has been taken from the flag station. Special Officer W. H. Howard of the C.N.R. succeeded in unravelling the mystery, and yesterday haled into court before Magistrate Bradford of Lindsay an elderly farmer of Grass Hill. The prisoner pleaded not guilty, but on the prosecution asking for an adjournment until January, and promising to produce evidence then, he changed his plea to one of guilty. He was released on suspended sentence after promising to make restitution. He will pay all costs and must keep the peace two years.

The lenient sentence was given because of the prisoner's age and his family circumstances.

W. H. Howard conducted the prosecution in conjunction with County Crown Attorney Anderson.

SONS BUILD HOME FOR AGED MOTHER

Mrs Wm. Dineen of Oshawa At 96 Has Lived in Same Place Fifty Years.

OSHAWA, Dec. 26.—To receive the season's greeting from a host of friends, in a new home built by her sons, at the age of 96 is the experience of Oshawa's oldest living resident, Mrs. Wm. Dineen who has lived in or around Oshaaw, for over 77 years and at 221 Celina street for over 50 years, or until recently when she moved into her new abode built on the spot where her youngest daughter, Anna, now Mrs. Timothy Sheridan was born at 271 Celina street.

Mrs. Dineen, a daughter of Francis and Catherine Kiernan, was born in 1827 at the town of Armaugh, County of Cavin, Ireland and migrated to Canada in 1844, landing at Newcastle, Ont., where she resided for two years before coming to Oshawa. In 1847 she married William Dineen also a native of Ireland, being born in 1824 at Macroom Parish, County Cork and who migrated here in 1842. Of their union eleven children were born, three dying in their infancy, the other eight, four girls and four boys living to man and womanhood. In 1899 her husband passed to the great beyond, since which Mrs. Dineen has lived with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. T. Sheridan.

Mrs. Dineen can tell of Oshawa when it was known as Skea's Corners and having only three streets south of Kingston Road, Simcoe street and Centre street, with a population numbered in the hundreds and toll gates at the northern and southern limits of the town. Mrs. Dineen expects to have a number of children gathered around her for New Year's Day.

ST. PATS TOOK THE BIG SCORE

HAMILTON, Dec. 27.— (Canadian Press.) —Although outplayed for more than forty minutes of the N.H.L. game played here last night, St. Pats skated off the ice on the long end of a 2 to 1 count, and they have John Ross Roach to thank for their narrow victory. The Toronto wizard was on his best behaviour and he had to be, as the Hamilton squad, fighting hard for a win, turned in a performance that was good enough to win any game, but in Roach they found their stumbling block.

Mickey Roach beat his namesake from close in and the goal judge declared it a goal, but Jerry Laflamme brought the wrath of the crowd upon his head by overruling the judge, and for a short time the ice resembled the floor of an egg market. Jerry was pelted but fortunately none of the missles found their mark.

CANADIENS DEFEATED BY SENATORS 3 TO 2

OTTAWA, Dec. 27.— (Canadian Press.) — Dennenay's wicked shot from outside the defence, drifting through Vezina's pads, after one minute and thirty seconds of overtime, gave the Senators a three to two victory over Canadians last night. Full time found the teams tied with two goals each, and the sudden termination of a closely contested battle left the fans gasping.

From the outset it was a close checking, bitterly fought game, with neither team sparing the other and making liberal use of the body. Referee Ross was somewhat lenient, and as the game progressed feeling ran higher, trouble being on the verge of breaking out when Billy Boucher jabbed Nighbor in the face near the close of playing time. Nighbor had to be carried from the ice, and after the game it was stated that he had suffered severe injury to his teeth and mouth. The hockey displayed, while not spectacular, was highly exciting throughout.

RINDLESS CHEESE HERE TO STAY, EXPERTS SAY

MADISON, Wis, Dec. 27.—Nearly all, if not all, Wisconsin-made cheese will be made without rind if the demand of the last two years, keeps up, according to a statement made by Math Michels, dairy expert, Wisconsin Department of Markets.

At present, the expert says, the call is for rindless cheese wrapped in tinfoil. Up to thirty years ago, grease was applied to the outside of cheese to prevent checking and mold

Since that time paraffine has been used for this purpose, and this now is being replaced by rindless cheese wrapped in tinfoil, according to Mr. Michels.

RE-ORGANIZING THE POLICE.

The police controversy may or may not have a big effect in the municipal campaign, and in this connection it is noticeable that Mayor Taylor, who referred in Council recently to the need of a re-organization of the Police Department, has interjected the issue into the mayoralty fight by declaring in his election card that he stands for "re-organization of the Police Department on as economical lines as are consistent with efficient police protection."

In view of the general interest in this question, His Worship should develop that policy far enough to indicate just what he has in mind.

What re-organization does he purpose?

Cutting down salaries?

Fewer officers?

Doing away with motor transportation?

Those are questions that suggest themselves after the Mayor's declaration is read, and the ratepayers are entitled to an explanation of what in its present form is a meaningless statement of policy.

ELECTRIC COMMISSIONS.

In view of the local police situation the effort that is being made by the Kitchener Council to substitute a Police Comission that will be two-third elective for the present commission upon which the Mayor is the only elected member, is of peculiar interest.

The Kitchener plan advocates the exemption of Police Magistrates from the commission, their place to be taken in each case by an elected member, and is offered as a means of giving the people more to say about the operations of Police Departments and about the expenditures made by such bodies.

Such a policy will doubtless have a large measure of popular opinion behind it—but it will meet with strong opposition nevertheless, for there are many people who would view with considerable misgiving the establishment of a system that will leave police forces open to the influence of municipal politics.

"Another attempt will be made to bring municipal representatives together in an effort to have the Police Commission made an elective body.

"When the matter was up last year The Advertiser stated that it could see no reason for changing the system, and nothing has transpired since to alter that opinion.

"The Mayor is a member of the Police Commission, and he is elected; the Magistrate represents the Provincial Government, and the County Judge brings to the body his experience and sense of justice.

"The elective system is reaching over into United States for our municipal laws, and they can teach us nothing. With the present system we have the control of the police in safe hands, separate from local political issues.

"No good reason has been advanced why we should make the change."

The Advertiser's opinion is not an isolated case by any means, for despite the tangle into which the quarrel between the local Council and the Police Commission has succeeded in involving the enforcement of law, it must be remembered that the present system is operating smoothly enough in the majority of other cities, and the Peterborough situation has not caused a general demand for an elective commission—indeed, has done little more than give the rest of the Province a good laugh at our expense.

THE DUTY OF THE ELECTORS.

There is no evidence that the electors are regarding the municipal elections any more seriously than usual, despite the fact that there is a three-cornered fight for the mayoralty, and a contest for the chief magistrate's chair has always been thought to bring out a larger vote than in the years when that official is chosen by acclamation.

This indifference is not merely a Peterborough problem, for in the majority of the cities of Ontario a similar condition of affairs is recorded, and the newspapers are busy trying to get at the reasons for the general apathy and to stir up the electors to a sense of their responsibility.

In other years the Examiner has devoted considerable space to a discussion of this phase of municipal life, but it seems a hopeless task.

If citizens cannot be made to realize that it is their own business and their own money that they are handing over to the civic bodies to operate for them, and that therefore it is incumbent upon them in their own interest to exert every effort to have the best men elected it is useless for a newspaper to keep hammering away upon responsibility to the community.

The election takes place on New Year's Day, a public holiday, and there is nothing to keep a voter away from the polls, seeing that only a few minutes are required for the necessary marking of the ballots.

THE MAYORALTY RACE.

In choosing a Chief Magistrate for 1924 the electors of Peterborough have to make their selection from the following, taken in the order in which their names will appear on the ballot paper.

Dr. W. T. Holloway, who for two years has been a member of the City Council, acting as chairman of the Unemployment Relief Committee in 1922 and in the present year as chairman of the Legal Committee. Dr. Holloway is a dentist by profession.

W. H. Taylor, the present Mayor, who has been Chief Magistrate for the past two years, and who served as alderman previously, and having been chairman of the Finance Committee. Mr. Taylor is in the real estate and insurance business.

J. J. Turner, former member of the City Council and former president of the Board of Trade, who unsuccessfully contested the Mayoralty with Mr. Taylor two years ago. Mr. Turner is head of J. J. Turner & Sons, one of Peterborough's well-known industries.

If the ratepayers are convinced that Mayor Taylor has shown by his services as the city's chief executive officer for the past two years that he can be counted upon to do better work than either of his two opponents, their duty is clear. They should give him a third term.

But if they are, on the other hand, convinced that either of his opponents is capable of as good service as the present Mayor, it becomes their duty to select a Chief Magistrate from the other two, for His Worship has had the usual term in the Mayor's chair, and must surely show himself superior to have any claim on the office for another year.

The first test in selecting the Mayor for 1924 should therefore, be between the present Mayor and the field.

And in making that and other tests, the electors would do well to remember the fact that there are likely to be some important problems for next year's administration to settle.

Upon the leadership Peterborough gets from her Chief Magistrate in the next two years much will depend.

If it is weak and undependable, Peterborough will fall back.

If it is vigorous and full of vision, Peterborough should spring forward with the development that is bound to come to Canada.

What kind of leadership have we had from the present Mayor in the two years he has been Chief Magistrate?

What kind of leadership are we to expect from Dr. Holloway or Mr. Turner, judged by their public records and their business experience?

These questions may be helpful to the electors as they seek to decide how they should vote on Tuesday next.

FREE TRADE AND THE TRUSTS.

If the British election has done nothing else, it has disposed of an old and popular slogan, widely accepted in this country, especially by editorial writers who do not do their own thinking, says Barron's. How many million times have we been informed by democratic demagogues that "the tariff is the father of the trusts?" Presumably, therefore, the one country which could carry on business without "trusts" or, to discard that question-begging epithet, large combinations of capital, would be a country committed to free trade. Great Britain has once more endorsed a policy which has now been in force for eighty years. It might be supposed, therefore, that her business had been conducted with the freest of individual competition. But, as an English economist in the Times points out, Great Britain is honeycombed with trusts, if you like to call them that.

Curiously enough, all these combinations, rings, pools and various devices for the restraint of trade were offenses under the old common law. The increased cost of housing in England, perhaps the most serious problem next to actual unemployment, is admittedly due more to rings in building supplies than to high wages. A new menace, indeed, is the recently organized International Cement Combine. Associations to control the supply of beef are well protected under the English company laws and are considerably more absolute than our own packers. Indeed, international combinations largely make their headquarters in Great Britain. What have free trade, or even protection, to do with the most gigantic newspaper combinations the world has ever seen? If tariffs help trusts, especially in their infancy, it is perfectly clear that free trade does not prevent them. The most powerful thread combination in the world is an English corporation, absolutely unprotected.

What is more interesting to the student is that the Labor Party in Great Britain has never concerned itself to agitate against these combinations. England has never had the blessing of a Sherman Anti-Trust law, and some of her statesmen have even said that they wouldn't know what to do with it.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Note to printer: Keep standing, for use in election cards, "I stand for rigid economy in civic expenditures."

Tea drinking in Canada is on the increase. There is a chance for another prohibition campaign after liquor has been sunk without a trace and tobacco has ceased to smoulder.

Tommy Church evidently regards the Toronto mayoralty as his own private property. Some time or other the ratepayers will disabuse him of that idea.

With Christmas over Peterborough should settle down to selecting the best of the candidates who are offering themselves for the various civic offices.

That result in Kent was scarcely a dainty dish to set before a King.

Judging by the movement of ball players throughout Ontario, some of the various club officials could give some valuable pointers to the immigration authorities.

Municipal candidates are being given a chance to state their platforms at a public meeting tomorrow night. Some of them will doubtless not fail to recollect that an election platform is like a platform of a railway car, something to get in on and not to ride on afterwards.

Dr. Edward Wood, another new candidate for the Board of Education, has stated his position in regard to a school building programme frankly. Like Mr. Reid, he favors technical as well as academic education, but is opposed to any intensive building programme at present. Who'll be the next to state his position?

PRESS WELCOMES PRINCE'S RETURN

As a Private Citizen and With His Promise to Refrain From Politics He Is Protected.

OELS, Silesia, Dec. 27.—(Associated Press)—While William, the former crown prince of Germany who returned recently to his castle at Oels, perhaps is not the most popular person in the world with the press and public of these parts which he calls home, any proposal that he be not allowed to remain here meets with immediate resentment.

The public generally has taken this attitude; it is quite evident, because protests against William's return emanate from France. Local papers declare that the prince has the sympathy of all true Germans; that Germans generally are pleased at his return, and that he should remain in the country and share the burdens of the people.

"We have his promise to refrain from political activity," says the Schlesische Volszeitung, "and we believe he will keep his word. He comes back to us not as a prince, but as a private citizen."

GERMAN HEROES JOKE AT PAY.

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—(Associated Press)—Holders of German medals of valor are entitled to draw 25 marks in legal money monthly from a grateful country's treasury. In pre-war days this was more than $6. Today it is one forty-billionth part of a German pfenning. But some of the medal-wearers with a grim sense of humor still apply for the payment.

One hero remarked: "It takes some courage for officials to look into the face of a man who risked his life for his fatherland and pay him one forty-billionth of a penny for it."

TORONTO LIVE STOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 27.—The packers made short work of the small cattle receipts at the Union Stock Yards yesterday. There were no extra choice steers or heifers, and the top for a load of medium weights was 6¼ cents a pound. These qualified as good, and several other loads of steers and heifers sold at 6½ cents a pound.

Medium butchers' steers and heifers brought 5½ cents and Dunn and Levack got 5 cents for a choice butchers' cow. There will be nothing carried over today, and commission men look for only a few cattle today. Yesterday's prices are 75 cents to a dollar a cwt. higher than those of two weeks ago.

The few calves on sale did not contain many good vealers, and the top was made for one sold by F. Dunn at 12 cents. Medium calves brought 10 cents, and common ones 5 cents a pound.

There was no lamb market, and quotations remain unchanged.

Two decks of Western and some corn fed hogs comprised yesterday's deliveries. For domestic hogs the price is accepted as firmer at $8 a cwt. f.o.b.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS MAKES PROGRESS IN SETTLEMENT EUROPE

Writer Says 1923 Marked Definite Establishment of the League As a Power For Good — Has Tackled Big Problem.

GREAT CONFERENCES.

By HENRY WOOD.

GENEVA, Dec. 27.—(United Press).—The year just closing marks the definite establishment of the League of Nations as one of the most important factors in world-wide economic reconstruction.

Although the league was founded primarily for the purpose of insuring and maintaining world peace, leaguers have learned that other fields of activity are absolutely imperative in order to render effective the league.

This depends upon the following situation. First of all, as a result of the last great war in which the leading European nations have been bled white and improverished for probably fifty years to come, it is likely to be a long time before the league will be called in to play its great role of peace-maker.

In the second place, even when the world gets back on a normal basis, war threats are not so common as to keep the league busy all the time.

As a consequence, other fields of activity sufficient to warrant the maintenance and effectiveness of the league organization when the moment to prevent war shall come are absolutely imperative.

Two such fields have already been laid down, namely humanitarian and economic reconstruction.

During the first three years of the league's existence its attention was given largely to the humanitarian field. The conditions following the great war were such that the intervention of some great organization like the league was absolutel yimperative in order to alleviate human suffering.

Humanitarian Problems.

The league tackled such problems as the reparations of hundreds of thousands of war prisoners from Russia and other countries; the wiping out of the great epidemics in Central Europe that followed the war; the rescue and care of hundreds of thousands of refugees who were thrown out of Asia Minor as a result of the Greco-Turkish war; the rescue and identification of all the Armenian women and children who, as a result of the Turkish deportations of 1915, were separated from their families and scattered to the four winds of the Turkish Empire; the launching of treaties regulating the white slave traffic and similar steps towards controlling the production and traffic of opium, cocaine and other harmful drugs.

During the first three years of the league's existence all of these humanitarian problems were either disposed of or gotten sufficiently out of the way, so that it became imperative for the league to find other fields of activity in order to maintain its great organization and efficiency, pending the day that it may be called on—possibly fifty years hence—to stay another great European war.

The past year therefore has marked the league's definite launching into the field of European construction.

While it has not yet succeeded in getting into its hands such vital problems as reparations and war debts, it has, nevertheless, demonstrated that probably no better organization for the handling of all such problems exists in the world today than the league.

Tackle Big Problem.

As a consequence, leaguers are confident that the day is not far distant when the Geneva organization will be entrusted with the problem as a whole of getting Europe back on its feet—and along with Europe, all of the rest of the world.

In this new field of European reconstruction, the league's greatest achievement of the year is that of the financial and economic reconstruction of Austria.

In less than a year after tackling the problem, the league had not only demonstrated that Austria can be made a self-supporting state, but had stabilized the latter's currency, started the budget onto a definite path of eventual equilibrium and rendered absolutely certain the financial and economic prosperity of Austria.

The close of the year was also marked by the launching of a similar project under league auspices for the financial and economic restoration of Hungary.

Next in importance towards the economic reconstruction of Europe was the taking over by the league of the problem of the definite settlement of over 1,000,000 refugees thrown back onto Europe from Asia Minor by the Greco-Turkish war.

These 1,000,000 people, who today have been merely a drain on the charity of Greece and the world at large, the league proposes to render not only self-supporting but actually wealth producing.

Great Conferences.

During the course of the year two great international conferences were also held by the league at which treaties were launched, signed by the leading nations of the world, tending to break down all barriers to international commerce and to develop international trade and intercourse to its fullest extent.

The first of these was a conference on customs formalities barriers and restrictions which in the past have rendered international trade almost impossible. Under the treaty these will all be reduced to the simplest proportions possible.

The second conference on transportation launched similar treaties covering both railway and maritime transportation and tending likewise to breaking down all restrictions to the greatest freedom and facility for the transportation of merchandise.

Treaties were also launched covering the development of international sources of water power and electrical energy on which the future development of many European states greatly depends.

Finally, as a result of its efforts towards disarmament and universal peace, the league was able to register during the past year an actual reduction in armament budgets of the great bulk of the European nations.

The league feels that during the past year it has not only played a great role in the problem of European reconstruction but that it has demonstrated its fitness to handle even great problems.

USE AIRPLANES AND CAVALRY IN FRENCH AFRICA

Last Message From the "Dixmude" Creates the Official Opinion That the Big Dirigible Was Not Carried Out to Sea.

SEARCH THE COAST.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—No word yet from the missing dirigible Dixmude which may still be in the air, after many days, or may have effected a landing on some out of the way place in the French protectorate of Tunis in Northern Africa, or in the Sahara Desert.

For several days now the airship's wireless has been silenced and the great craft itself has vanished.

The Minister of Marine received messages today from the Port Admiral at Bizerta declaring that the Dixmude was not seen over Tunisia on December 23 or 24, and that she had never asked for help. It is established that the last communication received from the airship was on December 21, at 3 a.m., when she acknowledged receipt of a telegram from Sidi Abdallah, Sahara, and the intensity of the message justified the inference that she then was not more than two hundred miles from Bizerta.

Undigated Search.

It is calculated that the Dixmude's store of gasoline might be exhausted by Sunday, December 23, and consequently the only thing left to do is to explore the regions where the airship might have come down either voluntarily or by force of circumstances.

All reports that the dirigible had been observed over Tunisia recently having proved erroneous, the Ministry considers that there is nothing to justify the belief that she was carried to sea. An exhaustive search made on Sunday and Monday in the zone comprised between the eastern cost of Tunish and the line of Malta-Tripoli, with help from the British and Italians yielded no result.

May Be In Algeria.

The opinion, therefore, prevails that search for the dirigible should be concentrated in southern Algeria. Cavalry patrols were dispatched on Sunday to explore the territory and as soon as the weather permitted airplanes from Algerian and Tunisian bases began a methodical exploration of the region where it was thought the dirigible might be.

Although there appears slight probability that the Dixmude has fallen into the sea, all light units available o the Mediterranean squadron, as well as the Provence, Algeria and Tunis flotillas, have been placed at the disposal of the Vice-admiral commanding in north African waters for fresh investigations of the wester part of the eastern Mediterranean basin.

INDIANS REJECT OIL FOR GAME PRESERVES

Osages, Richest of Indian Bands, Are Restless — Will Buy Land.

PAWHUSKA, Okla., Dec. 27.—(United Press)—There is restlessness among the Osages, richest of all Indians.

Oil and riches have entered their heretofore placid existence and the Indian desire for quiet and the hunting grounds, where running water is fresh and game plentiful runs in a strong undercurrent today.

Prospecting parties, headed by wealthy Indian leaders, have investigated reservation sites in New Mexico, California and the lower Rio Grande Valley.

But the Osages are not planning to call upon Uncle Sam for their future home. Mrs. Rose Bunch, whose oil income is estimated at $8,000 a month, has under consideration a huge ranch in New Mexico, where she describes "the wild game plentiful and the land unfenced."

Others have visited the Rio Grande Valley, new home of gigantic cabbages and rival of California for climate and fertility.

Investment opportunities are attractive to many modern Osages, while the older Indians are content with any possible location—where mild climate and plenty of grass are available.

MURDERED WOMAN WILL GET A HOUSE

The Housing Shortage In Moscow Is Acute—Drives One Man to Killing.

By JOHN GRAUDENZ

MOSCOW, Dec. 27.— (United Press).—The housing shortage in Moscow is getting worse daily. It has caused a number of crimes. Recently the police arrested Ivan Barbarov on a charge of murder. The housing shortage was the cause.

Ivan's father had owned a small house before the revolution. It had been rented since 1912. The Government made a decree that small houses could be turned back to the former owners, if they agreed to care for the houses.

Ivan told the occupants to move. They refused. The chief plea was that the occupant' mother was old and ill and he had no place to move her to.

So Ivan, he is only 18, figured that the best way to solve the problem of the sick mother who blocked the move was to remove her. So he went to the house while the son was away and shot the mother to death as she lay in bed.

CHEMONG LAKE IS OPEN AGAIN

BRIDGENORTH, Dec. 21.—Chemong lake froze over Friday night and the high wind on Saturday morning broke the ice up and during the day the ice piled up on the bridge to a depth of from two to three feet in some places. Several cars got stalled in making the trip across. Mr. Richard Killen, who arrived about three o'clock, with a load of provisions for his store at the Poft Office at Ennismore, was compelled to turn back and go by Fowler's Corners. The mail stage for Lakehurst, after delivering the mail at Bridgenorth was also forced to return to the fourth Line and take the head of the lake trip, which meant a distance of some 14 miles to get to Ennismore P. O.

A Narrow Escape

There are a number of loads of grain coming across from Ennismore these days heading for Peterboro, and it is noticed that some teams return with a bigger load. Upon making inquiry from some of the farmers we find there is no place nearer than Peterboro to get chop, therefore they have this long haul to get it ground for feeding purposes.

A farmer coming across the bridge the other morning discovered his horses were not shod very sharp and the planks were very icy. Both horses fell at the same time. In making an attempt to get up, one almost plunged through the railing into the lake. He was forced to unhitch and take his team ashore, while another farmer coming behind brought his load over past the swing.

Went Into Lake

Mr. J. T. O'Connell, of Peterboro who had a number of cattle pasturing on a ranch in Harvey township, had rather bad luck when driving them into Peterboro last Friday. Gannon's Bridge was very icy and six of them slipped through the railing into the icy waters. They succeeded in getting them out after considerable time.... Everything went all right until they arrived at Chemong bridge, which was in worse condition and a longer stretch of it. Some of them also took a swim. One cow refused to walk any further on the icy plank and was taken ashore on a stone boat by a farmer who lives nearby.

Season For Concerts

A number of young people drove over to Selwyn Friday night to attend the annual concert given by the young people of the Methodist church. They had a good time and also got something to eat.

Fairview gave a concert the same evening, put on by the two day schools which are situated near by the church. The Bridgenorth people who were there did not fare just as well, the concert was better but there weren't any eats.

A large crowd filled the Methodist church to capacity on Tuesday night it being their annual Christmas entertainment. Rev. P. H. Neville occupied the chair. It was a children's entertainment but a number of the older people helped them with the programme which when handed to the chairman, contained some forty-two numbers. No pains had been spared to ensure that the children had a good time An orchestra of six pieces from Wesley contributed a number of selections. Selwyn young people contributed two dialogues. Fairview also contributed two.

The chairman's speech was short, and they got away to a good start. However, it was eleven o'clock when the orchestra played God Save the King, after which each child was presented with a bag of candy and the older ones with some home-made creams. The receipts amounted to $39.00.

Car Would Not Go

Mr. George Nicholls, while backing his new car out of the garage one day last week, something went wrong with one of the cylinders, which put his car out of commission. Mr. Nicholls was going to Bobcaygeon to attend a funeral. However, Mr. Herb McConkey, who lives bearby was called in and took Mr. Nicholls in his car.

A number of visitors were in the village on Tuesday to attend the annual concert at the church here. Amongst them were noticed: Mr. and Mrs. W. Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. White, Mr. and Mrs. Y. N. D. Kelly, Mrs. S. Clegg, Miss Laura Jones and peveral others.

Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Northey were in the village on Tuesday.

Constipation is largely responsible for auto-intoxication that leads to dangerous diseases unless it is not only checked but permanently relieved. Constipation, in fact, is the basis of a majority of human ailments which could be headed off if people would only help rid themselves of this serious, health-undermining condition, which can be easily done.

Constipation must be fought to a finish—not with pills and cathartics, which are dangerous to the delicate membranes of the intestines and temporary at best—but with nature's greatest cereal health food—Bran—Kellogg's Bran, which is as delicious as it is beneficial.

Kellogg's Bran is wonderful in its work because it is ALL BRAN. And, to get permanent relief, ALL BRAN is a necessity, for it is the "bulk" of Kellogg's Bran that sweeps and purifies, ridding the system of poisons and bringing conditions to normal. Eat Kellogg's Bran regularly—at least two tablespoonfuls daily; as much with each meal in chronic cases—and we guarantee that you will get relief permanently and naturally.

Kellogg's Bran is delicious. You do not have to learn to like it. Eat it as a cereal or sprinkle on or mix with hot or cold cereals. Or, cook it with hot cereals, allowing two tablespoonfuls for each person. Kellogg's makes wonderful muffins, griddle cakes, raisin bread, macaroons, etc. Recipes on package.

Leading hotels, clubs and restaurants serve Kellogg's Bran in individual packages. All grocers.

VALUABLE JEWELRY FOUND IN HOLLOW WOODEN LEG OF A WINNIPEG ROBBER

WINNIPEG, Dec. 27.- With the arrest of six men and four women over the holiday, Winnipeg police believe they have broken up one of the biggest house-breaking and theft rings in the city's history.

They are alleged to have entered at least sixty houses during the past three months securing jewelry, furs and other valuables worth approximately $10,000. One of the men said to be the "lookout" for the gang has a wooden leg. It was found to be hollow and contained valuable jewelry.

The gang was well organized, owned several automobiles and is said to have watched several wedding and funeral announcements in the newspapers, taking advantage of the householders 'absence to ransack the house.

FOUNDER OF GOOD EGG SCHEME DIED.

Danish Eggs Stamped With Number By Which Shipper Is Traced and Fined For Poor Quality.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 27.—(Associated Press) — After several month illness, the man who brought the Danish egg to the notice of the world, Frederik Moller, died recently. Moller started life as a school teacher, but in 1890 started a campaign for the improvement in quality and production of the Danish egg. He organized egg collecting stations or circles throughout the country introducing a simple control system whereby he was able to trace every egg back to the producer.

Every circle and producer had a number which was stamped on the egg, and if a customer complained that his egg was bad it could be returned to the surburban grocer who in turn informed the Danish shipper. The producer was promptly fined for the first offence, and for the second offence was discharged from the magic circle of producers.

Moller's efforts to improve the quality and quantity of the Danish egg came in for a good deal of criticism and opposition but he stuck to his task of organizinz on cooperative line, and his concern, the "Danish Andels Egg Export" which had a turnover of 80,000 crowns in 1895, turned over 4,701,000 crowns in 1922.

Home Town Testimonials Prove Reliability of Dreco Methods

You can easily verify every statement we make about Dreco—People you know—your neighbors and friends—tell of its remarkable health-building qualities.

You are not asked to read testimonials from a person hundreds of miles away. It is a point of pride with us to publish home town testimonials, not only as a mark of our confidence in Dreco's wonderful properties, but also to give every one who reads them the opportunity to verify our statements. None but a genuine remedy could survive this test.

That the public appreciates the candor of our methods is shown by the thousands who have cast skepticism to the winds and availed themselves of the real opportunity for better health offered them by Dreco. They realize that this remedy must possess the merits we claim for it or we could not advertise it in the way we do.

The result is that Dreco is the most widely known and respected herbal remedy on the market today. Its users are legion. Every day we are receiving letters of praise from nearly every city in Ontario. These we publish from time to time.

Here are two selected from the many received from Peterborough people telling of the wonderful relief Dreco has given them. You can readily verify their authenticity. Could anything be fairer than this? Then why not let Dreco improve your health as it has that of thousands of others?

Pains Like Knife Stabs

Peterborough man suffered the agonies of impaired digestion till Dreco came to tone his organs and regulate them back to healthy working order.

"For years I have suffered terribly from gas on the stomach," says Mr. R. F. Buntin of 584 Chamberlain street, Peterborough, Ont. "It was at its worst in the morning when I would get stabbing pains just like a knife going through me. I also had severe dizzy spells and bad attacks of heartburn. My kidneys were out of order, too, and I would often get acute pains across my back. Constipation was also a source of great distress and I had to constantly be taking harsh laxatives.

"I tried a lot of different medicines, but got no relief till I tried Dreco, two bottles of which have put me in better condition than I have been for years. It has almost completely relieved me of gas and I have a splendid appetite, eating and enjoying everything that comes my way. My kidneys are much improved, too, and my bowels are regular every day. Dreco is in my opinion, a good medicine and it does everything that is claimed for it."

Dreco has earned the confidence of thousands of sufferers in just this way. It lives up to every claim and stops pain and distress, by putting the whole digestive system in healthy working order after first thoroughly cleansing it of impurities. Dreco is a purely vegetable preparation and contains no mercury, potash or habit-forming drugs.

Feels Like a New Woman

Dreco loses no time in relieving disorders that were making life miserable for Peterborough lady. Three bottles of this grand remedy have restored to her the health of youth.

"For over a year," says Mrs. A. Hunter of Louis street, Peterborough, Ont., "I have been a victim of stomach trouble. The food I ate would ferment and form gas that would press up against my heart and make me miserable. I would have severe pains in the pit of my stomach and suffered great distress from nausea. My appetite was very poor and naturally my whole system became weakened through lack of nourishment.

"My kidneys were out of order and I would get severe pains across my back as a result. I became so badly troubled with constipation that I had to take a laxative every night.

"I tried about everything I heard of in the way of medicine, but got no relief. Finally, I read about Dreco and impressed by the sincerity of the people who praised it, decided to give it a trial. I have only taken three bottles, but they have completely relieved my troubles.

"I have a splendid appetite and can eat anything without any trouble afterwards. My kidneys are in fine shape, too, and I haven't a pain of any kind. My bowels, too, are regular as a clock. In fact, I feel like a new woman and am glad to recommend Dreco to anyone who suffers as I did."

Rid yourself of symptoms that sap your health and strength. Most of them are directly traceable to faulty digestion. Dreco corrects this fault quickly and pleasantly and the whole body benefits as a result. Dreco contains no mercury, potash or habit-forming drugs, being a purely herbal remedy made in scientific, daylight laboratories.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterborough by Bond's Drug Store. Go there to-day and ask for Mr. Vaughan, the Dreco Expert, and let him explain the merits of this great remedy. There is no charge and he will tell you honestly if he believes Dreco will benefit you. Dreco is also sold in other cities as follows: Lakefield—E. H. Northey. Campbellford—J. E. Birks, and by a good druggist everywhere.

"BLACK OXEN"

by GERTRUDE ATHERTON

XXIX. (Continued)

Let me remind you that to begin anywhere you've got to begin somewhere." And then as she continued silent, he burst out: "For God's sake, say it!"

"Is—is—it possible that the suspicion has never crossed your mind that I am Mary Ogden?"

"Wha-at!"

"Mary Ogden, who married Count Zattiany thirty-four years ago. I was twenty-four at the time. You may do your own arithmetic."

But Clavering made no answer. His cigarette was burning a hole in the carpet. He mechanically set his foot on it, but his faculties felt suspended, his body immersed in ice water. And yet something in his unconscious rose and laughed . . . and tossed up a key . . . . if he had not fallen in love with her he would have found that key long since. His news sense rarely failed him. "

"I've told a good many lies, I'm afraid," she went on, and her voice was even and cool. The worst was over. "You'll have to forgive me that at least. I dislike downright lying, if only because concessions are foreign to my nature, and I quibbled when it was possible, but when cornered there was no other way out. I had no intention of being forced to tell you or any one the truth until I chose to tell it."

"Well, you had your little comedy!"

"It did amuse me for a time, but I think I explained all that in my letter. I also explained why I came to America, and that if I had not met you I should probably have come and gone and no one but Judge Trent been the wiser. I had prepared him by letter, and to him, I suppose, it has been a huge comedy—with no tragic sequel. Be sure that I never entertained the thought that I could ever love any man again. But I have made up my mind to disenchant you as far as possible, not only for your sake but my own. I wish you to know exactly whom you have fallen in love with."

"You grow more interesting every moment," xsaid Clavering politely, "and I have never been one-half as interested in my life."

"Perhaps you have heard—Mrs. Oglethorpe, I should think, would be very much disposed to talk about old times—that I was a great belle in New York—belles were fashionable in those days of more marked individuality. I suppose no girl ever had more proposals. Naturally I grew to understand my power over men perfectly. I had that white and regular beauty combined with animation and great sex-magnetism which always convinces men that under the snow volcanic fires are burning. I was experienced, under the frankest exterior, in all the subtle arts of the coquette. Men to me were a sort of musical instrument from which I could evoke any harmony or cacophony I chose.

"What held the men I played with and rejected was my real gift for good fellowship, my loyalty in friendship, and some natural sweetness of disposition. But such power makes a woman, particularly while young, somewhat heartless and callous, and I was convinced that I had no capacity for love myself; especially as I found all men rather ridiculous. I met Otto Zattiany in Paris, where he was attached to the Embassy of the Dual Empire. He was an impetuous wooer and very handsome. I did not love him, but I was fascinated. Moreover, I was tired of American men and American life. Diplomacy appealed to my ambition, my love of power and intrigue. He was also a nobleman with great estates; there could be no suspicion that he was influenced by my fortune. He followed me back to New York, and although my parents were opposed to all foreigners, I had my way; there was the usual wedding in St. Thomas', and we sailed immediately for Europe.

"I hated him at once. I shall not go into the details of that marraige. Fortunately he soon tired of me and returned to his mistresses. To him I was the Galatea that no man could bring to life. But he was very proud of me and keenly aware of my value as the wife of an ambitious diplomatist. He treated me with courtesy, and concerned himself not at all with my private life. He knew my pride, and believed that where he had failed no man could succeed; in short, that I would never consider divorce nor elopement, nor even run the risk of less public scandals.

"I was not unhappy. I was rid

of him. I had a great position and there was everything to distract my mind. I was not so interested in the inner workings of diplomacy as I was later, but the comedy of jealousy and intrigue in the diplomatic set was amusing from the first. I was very beautiful, I entertained magnificently, I was called the best dressed woman in Paris, I was besieged by men—men who were a good deal more difficult to manage than chivalrous Americans, particularly as I was now married and the natural prey of the hunter. But it was several years before I could think of men with a shudder, little as I permitted them to suspect it. I learned to play the subtle and absorbing game of men and women as it is played to perfection in the older civilizations. It was all that gave vitality to the general game of society. I had no children; my establishment was run by a major domo; it bore little resemblance to a home. It was the brilliant artificial existence of a great lady, young, beautiful, and wealthy, in Europe before nineteen-fourteen. Of course that phase of life was suspended in Europe during the war. All the women I knew or heard of worked as hard as I did. Whether that terrible interregnum left its indelible seal on them, or whether they have rebounded to the old life, where conditions are less agonizing than in Vienna, I do not know."

She paused a moment, and Clavering braced himself. Her unconsciously initial revelation had left the deeper and more personal part of him stunned, and he was listening to her with a certain detachment. So far she had revealed little that Dinwiddie had not told him already, and as he knew that this brief recapitulation of her earlier life was not prompted by vanity, he could only wonder if it were the suggestive preface to that secret volume at whic. Dinwiddie had hinted more than once

As she continued silent, he got suddenly to his feet. "I'll walk up and down a bit, if you don't mind," he muttered. "I'm rather—ah—getting rather cramped."

"Do," she said indifferently.

"Please go on. I am deeply interested."

She continued in a particularly level voice while he strode unevenly up and down: "Of course the time came when ugly memories faded, my buoyant youth asserted itself and I wanted love. And when a woman feels a crying need to love as well as to be loved, her whole being a peremptory demand, unsatisfied romance quickening, she is not long finding the man. I had many to choose from. I made my choice and was happy for a time. Although I had been brought up in the severest respectability—just recall Jane Oglethorpe, Mrs. Vane, Mrs. Ruyler, and you will be able to reconstruct the atmosphere—several of the women I had known as a girl had lovers, it seemed to me that American women came to Europe for no other purpose, and I was now living at the fountain-head of polite license. Not that I made any apologies to myself. I should have taken a lover if—I had wanted one had virtue been the fashion. And the contract with my husband had been dissolved by mutual consent. The only thing that rebelled was my pride. I hated stepping down from my pedestal."

Clavering gave a short barking laugh. "Your arrogance is the most magnificent thing about you, and that is saying more than I could otherwise express. I'll fortify myself before you proceed further, if you will permit." He poured himself out a drink and returned to his chair with the glass in his hand. "Pray go on."

She had not turned her head and she continued to look into the fire. She might have been posing to a sculptor for a bust that would hardly look more like marble when finished.

"I soon discovered that I had not found happiness. Men want. They rarely love. I realized that I had demanded in love far more than passion, and I received nothing else.

"I am not going to tell you how many lovers I have had. It is none of your business——"

"Ah!" Clavering, staring at her, had forgotten his first shock, everything but her living presence; forgotten also that he had once apprehended something of the sort, then dismissed it from his mind. He spilt the whiskey over the arm of the chair, then sprang to his feet and began to pace the room once more.

She went on calmly: "Disappointment does not mean the end of seeking. . . . They gave me little that I wanted. They were clever and adroit enough in the prelude. They knew how to create the illusion that in them alone could be found the fulfillment of all aspiration and desire. No doubt they satisfied many women, but they could not satisfy me. They gave me little I did not find in the mere society of the many brilliant and accomplished men with whom I was surrounded. I had a rapacious mind, and there was ample satisfaction for it in the men who haunted my salon and were constantly to be met elsewhere. European men are instruits. They are interested in every vital subject, intellectual and political, despite the itch of amor, their deliberate cult of sex. They like to talk. Conversation is an art. My mind was never uncompanioned. But that deeper spiritual rapacity, one offspring of passion as it may be, they could not satisfy; for love with them is always too confused with animalism and 's dedicated 'n the art of love making. Fidelity is a virtue relegated to the bourgeois——"

"What about Englishmen?", demanded Clavering sarcastically. "I thought they were bad artists but real lovers."

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

SIMPLE SIMON'S RIDDLE

"You are round and smooth and flat."

"Simple Simon," called the Riddle Lady, "here is a riddle for you. Not that everybody in Riddle Town can't guess, but I'm sure that you will guess first. It's something that you have been wanting for a long time. Try as hard as you can, for the prize is the same as the answer."

"All right," grinned Simple Simon. "But I hope it's not a whale. I wouldn't have any place to keep it. Mother said she wouldn't have any whales around."

"If I guess it," whispered the Twins, "we'll give you the prize."

"No, you won't," spoke up the Pieman. "No such thing! Simon is not as simple as he pretends. Let him do his own guessing!"

"I'll have to begin," said the Riddle Lady. "Time is flying. So everybody be quiet, please." Then she began:

"You are round and smooth and flat,
And you never wear a hat,
You wear neither suit nor gown.
When you travel over town

"In pockets you burn holes, I'm told,
But when I touch you, you're quite cold,
And they say you simply fly!
You've got feathers, is that why?

"Your name is on your back in print,
Not candy, yet you're made in mint.
You've the moving habit strong
And never stay in one place long.

"Come of quite a sturdy race,
But show your age upon your face,
Not that you're old, my goodness, no!
But there's the year that tells us so.

"Often in a single day
You move twenty times away,
And every time you spend a cent,
Is it cheaper, friend, than rent?

"You have often times been seen
Slipping in a slot machine,
Telling fat folk what they weigh.
'Mercy on us!' people say.

"Are you fond of lollypops
That you're always in the shops?
And each time you hunt a slot
You spend every bit you've got.

"When you're new you're bright as gold,
But when you are getting old,
Sober colors are must bring,
You get brown as anything.

"Now, what is it?" asked the Riddle Lady.

"It's a penny!" said Simple Simon, just like that.

"Goody! Simple Simon's guessed! Simple Simon's guessed!" sang Nancy.

"So he has," declared the Riddle Lady, and she handed Simple Simon a bright new one, date, name and all.

"Now you may have your pie," said the Pieman.

Much so-called stomach trouble is really chronic appendicitis. This can often be relieved by simple glycerine, buckthorn bark, etc., as mixed in Adlerika. Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

MIND-CURE

In its proper way or place, "Mind-cure" is in some essentials at least a part of personal or individual hygiene. When a sincere regimen of health regulations has been carefully selected and put in running order, one must have faith or confidence that it will help in regaining normal condition. He must also have confidence in the physician who prescribes a health diet, proper exercise, baths and living conditions for his improvement.

Mental conditions affect the body and health to a marked degree. Worry over conditions of work, or failure in certain enterprises, lack of sleep or rest through worry, will have serious effects on the digestive system.

The X-ray has successfully detected the disturbances and arrest of peristaltic movements in both stomach and intestines on account of worry or fear. In other physical manifestations it has been shown that strong emotion may lead to a marked increase of sugar in the blood. In such cases, a proper mind condition will cure the prevailing disturbances.

The brain is the great master. To attain the desired results from any hygienic measure or treatment, the mind must concur in body welfare. The successful operation by a physician depends to a great extent on the determination and will power of the patient to get well after the operation.

Mind-cure in reality is the satisfying in one's own brain that all faith and hope is centered on a condition of health to be attained. Lack of it often causes despair and death. Its stimulating working presence will build and help restore many a seemingly hopeless case.

Church Union in Canada

Canada Leads the World Toward Christian Unity

THROUGHOUT the English-speaking world, there is evidence of a drawing together of the Christian Churches and of a growing confidence in the desirability of Church Union. Canada is giving leadership, because our needs forced definite action. Here the subject has been carefully investigated and its realization has moved steadily forward for twenty years, impelled by the necessity of facing in a more adequate way the pressing problems and wonderful opportunities of this great, new country.

Parliamentary and Legislative approval of the Union of the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Congregational Churches is designed to protect the rights of both unionists and minorities.

All Essentials are Preserved

1. The creed of the United Church contains the "Doctrines of Grace" that made the Reformation.
2. No minister can be ordained in the United Church until he accepts the Church's creed.
3. The ordained eldership is retained in the United Church.
4. Congregations of the United Church have the right to "call" their own minister, subject to the Settlement Committee's approval, as Presbyterian Congregations are now subject to Presbytery.

When Anti-Unionists deny the above truths, it is only necessary to place their charges side by side with the provisions of the official "Basis of Union":—

The Charges

(Quotations from advertisements of the Anti-Unionists)

1. "The Ministers will not be pledged to any system of truth."

2. "The ordained eldership will be dropped."

3. "The right of a congregation to 'call' its own Minister will be taken away."

4. "The right of a Presbytery to ordain and induct its Ministers will be taken away."

The Facts

Before a minister can be ordained, he must "satisfy the examining body that he is in essential agreement with" "The Statement of Doctrine" of the United Church.
—See "Basis of Union"—page 26.

The oversight of the spiritual interests of each charge shall be entrusted to "the Minister or Ministers and a body of men specially chosen and set apart or ordained for that work, who shall jointly constitute the Session."
—See "Basis of Union"—page 26.

"Any pastoral charge, in view of a vacancy, may extend a call to any properly qualified Minister or Ministers." This is subject to the approval of the Settlement Committee, as now to Presbytery, the only difference being that, if the call fails, the Settlement Committee may send a Minister, a provision which will remedy the abuses of the present "call" system.
—See "Basis of Union"—page 24.

"It shall be the duty of the Presbytery to induct or install Ministers . . . to inquire, each year, into the personal character, doctrinal beliefs and general fitness of candidates for the ministry . . . to license them to preach and to recommend them for the ordination of the Conference."
—See "Basis of Union"—page 22.

Each of the three uniting Churches is contributing to the others much that is beyond price in tradition, history, experience and in zeal for humanity. Let not any of us selfishly retain for our own enjoyment whatever in our glorious past may contribute to the spiritual advancement of others.

The religious life of the ordinary congregation or individual will be practically undisturbed by the Union. What we give up is as nothing compared with the potential value of Union in the building of the Kingdom in the sparsely-settled sections of our own country and in the vast missionary fields, in both of which our divisions have been a real hindrance. The eyes of the religious world are upon Canada. Let us show that we are worthy of leadership.

TWO BOYS CHARGED WITH THE ARTURO MARTINEZ MURDER

Billy Forrester and Paul Daedler Held As Slayers of Baby Playmate.

By JACK JUNGMEYER.

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 27. — Guns are made to shoot. Guns are made to kill. Sparrows, rabbits, deer in the hunt of sport. Men in the hunt of war or feud. Out of season, it is wrong to kill. Such is the cult and code of the firearm.

Billy Forrester and Paul Daedler, both 14, of Pasadena, city of boasted culture and millionaires, are exemplars of the cult of the gun. But they violated the code.

They killed little Arturo Martinez, five years old.

Killed him like a rabbit in a hole and trussed him with wire to a pole so that, if any life were left, he might not crawl away to his mother.

"Didn't Mean to Kill Him."

The city of Pasadena is shocked at the ghastly and almost incredible story of adolescent barbarism, as Billy and Paul told it to the coroner's jury.

Now, Billy and Paul had no grudge against little Arturo; he was a pretty good kid to play with when older companions were lacking. At first Billy and Paul didn't even have immediate killing in mind. They were merely practicing with a revolver in a deserted building.

And keeping one's eye and trigger finger in trim for the taking of life, in proper season and circumstance, has always been integral to the cult of the weapon.

Most boys of 14 have somehow acquired the ethical distinction between shooting a rabbit and a fellow human. Parents usually see to that before they let youngsters have guns; or cities before they grant hunting licenses.

Bound Him to a Post.

But Billy and Paul think a little slower than average boys, perhaps. They were in some trouble because of tardy thinking.

On this day in the deserted building, almost as lonely as the forest, almost as remote as a cave-age ambush, the were thinking with a gun. And little Arturo looked so much like a rabbit or a bear as he came crawling into range to the cracking of the shots.

The lure of the must have crawled in

"The kid," said Billy, "because the window see him at first. Then we didn't see times down a sort of hole and he was in there. He squealed, and hit him on the head with a brick to keep him quiet.

"We was afraid the kid would get away and snitch on us, so Paul brought some wire and he tied one end around his neck and I tied the other around his feet. We fastened him to a post and shut the door real tight."

Feared Gallows and Jail.

"Next day," Paul informed the coroner's jury, "we came back to see if the kid was still alive. I was planning on letting him loose if he was alive. Billy said he hadn't made up his mind what to do.

"Paul," interrupted Billy, "was afraid he would get hung. But I was only afraid I would go to jail. . . . Well, the kid was dead when we got back.

"Billy," testified Paul, "said he ould leave it to me to do the thinking."

The boys, realizing in a dull way that they had violated the code, afraid respectively of the noose and of jail, finally confessed to police after pretending they had merely discovered the body of their neighbor's son.

Although Billy and Paul maintained it was an accident, Chief of Police Kelly, to whom they confessed, maintained the youths had found the baby a more interesting target than tin cans.

Now They Face Reformatory.

"Willful homicide," decreed the jury, recommending prosecution for murder. Both were placed in juvenile hall at Los Angeles, pending trial, while Pasadena, city of little wild game but many guns, shakes a horrified head.

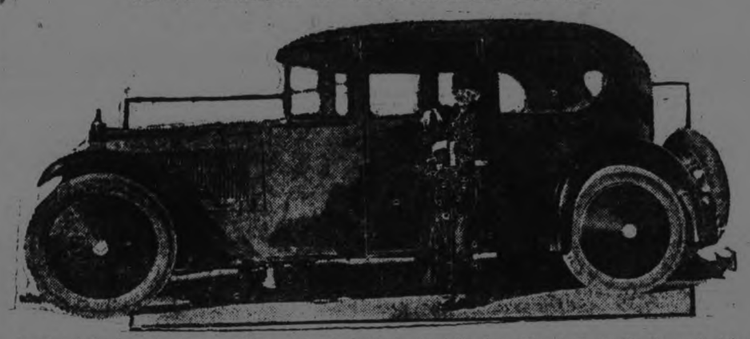
The heartbroken parents say whatever course the law takes probably will be justified. Both families are said to have had trouble with the boys, William Forrester being an adopted son. Police say they have both been on probation.

Conviction probably will mean the reformatory until legal majority.

Then, if the state wills, Billy and Paul who did such indiscriminate shooting in a barn that looked like a cave-man's lair at a boy who looked so much like a bear in the gloom, may be sent to the penitentiary—

The penitentiary where watchers on the walls, carrying rifles like a hunter, keep vigil over older Billies and Pauls who got the cult and code of killing atrociously mixed up.

SHE'S NEARLY 90—BUT SPEEDY DRIVER



Don't get the idea that because Mrs. John J. Hallenbeck of Garden City, L.I., is 88, she can't drive an auto. Recently she was arrested in Miami, Fla, charged with violating the speed laws. Here she is, with the car officials say she made travel 62 miles an hour.

CATHOLIC AND ANGLICAN REUNION SMALL HEADWAY

LONDON, Dec. 27.— (Canadian Press.)—The Archbishop of Canterbury's letter to dignitaries of the Church of England in which he says that the question of re-union of Anglican and Roman Catholic faiths has made a small headway since such a step was advocated at the Lambeth conference in 1920, has made considerable stir in England. Most of the morning papers comment on the communication, but remarks are not very encouraging to re-unionists.

Some of the writers refer sympathetically to Christian union in the abstract and to the desirability of ending divisions that separate professed followers of the Founder of Christianity, but they see little hope of practical results from efforts to effect such a re-union in the present circumstances.

EUROPEAN ROYALTY

By THOMAS EDGELOW

I believe that when a European Royalty does something in public, such as laying the foundation-stone for a Home for Low-Necked Cab-Drivers, certain formalities are always observed. The King, or Emperor, or whatever he is, arrives in state—possibly in that after-lunch state, when, owing to the lack of Prohibition, Majesty is feeling pretty good. There is a large and important-looking carriage with outriders in scarlet or blue, and with gentlemen in jockey caps blowing bugles and trumpets. All this goes as a matter of course. But there are other just as lasting formalities. The Mayor, wearing a gold chain around a fat and red neck, reads an address of welcome, saying how glad the townspeople are that Royalty has graciously consented to do this mighty work. (Prolonged cheers.) Then, what does Royalty say first of all? Does he remark that he is unaccustomed to public speaking, or that he feels this to be the most honored moment of his life Nothing of the kind. That is low-brow stuff, fit for a Senator or a District Alderman. Royalty invariably begins with the words: "We are deeply touched." This, the touching business, is every bit as necessary as the bugles, the outriders or the fat red neck of the Mayor.

Lately, I have felt like Royalty. I tell it to you modestly, but I have been very regal. I have been deeply touched.

My portion has been a sick bed, and have I been neglected by my friends? I'll tell the world I have not. I have received an almost unending stream of visitors, ever since Bill went to Canada and sold me three cases of the real stuff at infinitely less than at cost. Somehow the news got out—that I was sick and not allowed to touch anything, and that I had made this little deal with Bill. Why, the line has had to form from the left, these pals of mine, who have breezed into my bedroom and said without punctuation: "Sorry you are so poorly, old man, and what about a little drink?" Then, there have been others, warm-hearted, noble fellows, who have come around, eating my grapes, sampling my liquor and asking if they could have fifty until the end of the month. My heart has overflowerd, and now that I am better, I say to them, with Royalty: "I am deeply touched."

MODERN PHOTOGRAPHY.

By THOMAS EDGELOW

Those who groan for the good old days of the past, I would refer to the modern photographer. The most pessimistic and conservative of old-timers must surely admit the vast improvement in photographic methods of thirty years ago and today.

In the old days, one entered a bare-looking attic, with green shades over the skylights. The photographer, who called himself a photographer and did not dream of terming himself an artist, was generally dressed in one black velvet coat (spotty), one pair of gray pants (decorated with bits of egg dropped at breakfast), and a sitting was over in about ten minutes. One entered, assumed a fixed smile, leaned one's head against an iron rest, and placed one's left hand gracefully on the top of an Ionic column—and that was that. The result caused a later generation many a happy smile, and it cost—at the more expensive places—in the neighborhood of three dollars a dozen.

But not so today. Now one enters a large, beautifully decorated room, furnished with genuine antiques from Grand Rapids. The photographer is an artist, and a modern one, which means that he has his hair cut every Saturday and looks like a prosperous banker. He spends the whols morning over your face.

"I want to bring out the bitterness in your soul," your modern photographer says in an intense contralto-like voice. "Yours has been an unhappy life, and you have been bitterly misunderstood, particularly by your relatives." (This sounds something like a fortune teller, and you are so pleased with his dig at your family, that you smile all over yourself.) At which, he raises his hand in protest. "Pray do not smile!" he says in a pained voice. "Your soul is an unsmiling one, and that is for what I am so justly celebrated—the portrayal of the soul which shines through the eyes! As I remarked to the Grand Duke of Heltzvitch-Schlossenbert, when he came over here especially to see me, 'it is your soul I am after'!"

As you go out and hear the bad news from the secretary, you are inclined to think that it is your life's savings he is after, but the result is perhaps worth it. The proofs arrive, and you eagerly examine them. It looks a bit hazy—as though you had been wearing a wet cloud in front of your face when he clicked the camera. It is distinctly vague, and perhaps, with some faces, this is an advantage. Of course, if you look like Valentino or Violet Heming, the modern hazy effect is not so good, but it has its uses.

Personally I am all for the modern photographer with the hazy effect.

MR. BURNHAM AFTER SWORD SWALLOWERS

Believes Disease is Communicated in This Way

The following letters are of local interest.

BURNHAM ON EATING

To the Editor of The Toronto Star,

Sir: Herewith is a copy of letter received by this association from Mr. J. H. Burnahm, Peterboro. I do not see how we can hope to legislate people into the correct mode of eating. Can you educate them to do so?

T. C. ROUTLEY,

Secretary Ontario Medical Association.

"Dear Sirs Will you allow me to bring the following matter before you? For many years I have observed the effects of the universal habit amongst the bulk of the population by using the knife and fork, which they put in their mouths, to help themselves with, out of the various dishes intended for the general supply of the table such as the butter dish, jam dish, sauce dish, etc. In a word dishes which are for public supply are made private dishes by each one at the table with what probable results from contagion it is not difficult to suppose. In the case of communicable disease I have satisfied myself from years of observation the spread of disease in this way is appalling. I have written the department of health, but they take no action. A word in the newspapers from your association would greatly lessen this most serious evil.

J. H. BURNHAM,
(Layman).

FEAR IS WORLD'S GREATEST DISEASE.

People Who Have a Personal Fear of a Certain Disease Generally Get It

The greatest disease in the world is fear. You have noticed that people who have an especial fear of any particular disease usually wind up by contracting that disease. Maybe the fear is just a premonition of an ailment that is gradually developing in the body. maybe not—it depends on your viewpoint in regards to the effect of the mind on the body.

Fear, however, makes people frantic. It unbalances the nervous system, with the natural result that the digestive apparatus gets out of order or the body's powers of resistance against disease are otherwise lowered.

And people who do not fear disease are more able to combat disease simply because their mental attitude helps keeps their nervous system balanced and healthy.

Some medical scientists claim that fear and courage are the results of varying conditions of the adrenal glands attached to the kidneys. When these glands are too active, the owner is timid. Cautious is a better word, for the diseased glands telegraph to the brain that the body might be endangered by over-exertion and accordingly should take no chances.

When the adrenal or some of the other mysterious glands do not function normally, the owner has spells of indefinable apprehension—dread of everything in general and nothing in particular, a sort of fear or premonition of impending disaster.

Fear is as deadly to careers as it is to health. Failure often is the result of fear and the timidity and warped mental attitude produced thereby. On the other hand, success often is largely the result of self-confidence—absence of fear.

MR. YEOTES AWARDED TWO FIRST PRIZES

Owing to circumstances which developed at the last moment two first prizes were given by Mr. Louis Yeotes at the conclusion of his 18th anniversary popularity contest. These winners were Jos. Dwyer and Wm. Bennett. "Scottie" Logan was awarded second prize. A recount had to be taken to determine the final result and Mr. Yeotes generously presented first prizes to both the successful nominees for popularity.

MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

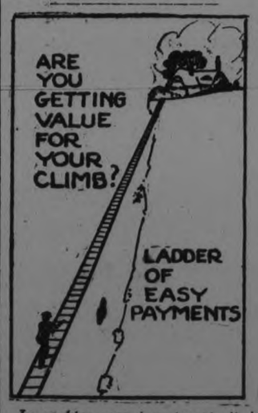
Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

There is no reason or excuse for any one accepting an inferior security because he has only small sums to invest.

The small investor can own just as good bonds and stocks as are in the strong boxes of wealthy investors, banks and great life insurance companies. A number of the highest class bonds may be had in denominations of $100 and $500. One land bank bond issue has a $40 bond as well as $100, $500, $1,000 and higher denominations.

Two courses are open to the small investor to obtain the best investment securities. He can maintain a savings account, which will pay interest while it is growing, and when a few hundred dollars have accumulated buy a good bond. Or he can buy securities on the partial payment plan. Most investment bankers do not cater to partial payment sales because the narrow margin of profit in the bond business makes the extra bookkeeping of part-payment sales an expensive burden. A number of good bond houses, however, make a special effort for part-payment sales, overcoming extra expense by a large volume of smaller sales. Several large utilities also sell stock on partial payments.

The main thing for the investor to keep in mind is the character of the firm he deals with. Be sure it is a firm of highest standing.



In making any investment, it is wise to ask "Am I getting value received?" This is especially important when the investment is made on the "easy payment" plan.

The average man can't pay cash for a house. He wants "easy payments." In looking for these easy payments, he is likely to overlook the most important point, which is value.

A sale which requires $100 down and a few dollars a month is not necessarily a bargain. To be sure, the physical payments are easy, but there is one important point to consider. Are you getting value?

No matter how small the payments are, an investment which is not really worth the money it costs is really not an "easy payment" proposition.

Value is the first thing to look for. Let easy payments come next.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

Parsnips are one of the cheapest and best winter vegetables. They are a starchy food if served in their natural state but if combined with egg and a certain amount of fat they add many "calories" to a scanty menu.

Serve them with dark meats of high flavor.

These recipes for parsnips may help you to vary your winter menus:

Parsnip Balls

Six parsnips, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ cup flour, 1 egg.

Wash and scrape parsnips. Boil in salted water until tender. Drain and pepper. Add flour and eggs well beaten and mix well. Form into small balls. Roll in cracker crumbs, dip in egg slightly beaten with one tablespoon water, roll again in crumbs and fry to a golden brown in deep hot fat. Drain on brown paper and serve. The fat should be hot enough to brown an inch square of bread from the soft part of the loaf in 40 seconds.

It will take longer to cook parsnips that have been dug some time and become wilty than freshly dug and crisp ones.

Glaced Parsnips

Four parsnips, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 dessertspoon sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons hot water.

Wash and scrape parsnips. Cut in slices, crosswise, three-quarters of an inch thick. Put each piece flat in a big flat sauce pan or spider. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and sugar. Dot with bits of butter and pour in the hot water at one side of the pan without disturbing the parsnips. Cover tightly and cook slowly for 45 minutes, or until tender. Remove cover and brown quickly in a very hot oven.

Parsnip Souffle

Four parsnips, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon butter, 1½ cups soft bread crumbs, 2 eggs, ½ cup milk.

Wash and scrape parsnips and boil until tender in salted water. Drain and force through a potato ricer. Melt butter, add milk and bread crumbs and when very hot and smooth add parsnips. Season with salt and pepper and add the yolks of the eggs well beaten. Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry and fold into mixture. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake 25 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve at once.

Parsnip Fritters

Wash and scrape parsnips and boil until tender in salted water. Cool and cut in slices ½ inch thick. Dip in frying batter and fry in deep hot fat to a golden brown.

Frying Batter: Four tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon melted butter, ½ cup warm water, 2 eggs (whites).

Mix and sift flour and salt. Add melted butter and stir. Beat in water. Beat vigorously for five minutes and let stand half an hour. Fold in the whites of the eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Use as needed.

Parsnips are good boiled and mashed and seasoned with butter, salt and pepper and a little sugar.

Parsnips are also served in cream sauce.

All these dishes furnish much nourishment but are not quickly digested and should not be included in the diet of children or invalids.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Dear Sir,—I notice that Mayor Taylor in his election address is making the reorganization of the police one of the planks in his platform. Mr. Taylor must have a poor opinion of the intelligence of the electors of Peterboro. He has been Mayor now two years, and during that time has been a member of the Board of Police Commissioners, and as far as I can see his opinion has had very little influence upon their decisions.

At any rate the affair has got into its present tangled condition under his guidance and leadership. Now he asks for a fresh mandate to straighten out the tangle.

No, no, Willie, we haven't time to wait for you to play with that yarn any longer. Better hand it over to brother John (Mr. J. J. Turner). He will unravel it quicker than you will. We want to get back to our knitting.—Yours faithfully,

GEO. LEADER.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: I am glad to see that Mr. J. T Braund, who has been serving on our Board of Education, is allowing his name to go before the ratepayers for election as a permanent member. Mr. Braund is one of the few Peterboro men who has risen from a small start to be one of the large property owners and tax payers of the city. He, in company with his brother, R. C. Braund, has done more in building up the business centre and providing housing accommodation than any other man in Peterboro, and the people can with perfect confidence leave the affairs of the school board in his hands. What he votes to spend he will have to pay as large a share of as anyone, and a great deal more than most people, so that we can look for wise, economical expenditures that Mr. Braund endorses.

It is to be hoped that the voters will recognize the chance to secure the services of a good, solid property owner of proven ability, to again associate with the good representative men already on our Board in carrying on the important work that is ahead of that body during 1924.

FAMILY QUARRELS CAUSE NO DAMAGE.

The Wife Who Declares Herself Gets Along the Best With Her Husband

By MARIAN HALE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2—The family quarrel is an excellent institution so long as you don't overdo it, according to Henry K. Marks, physician, psychologists and author of "Undertow."

"You may depend upon it," he remarks, "the husband and wife who have it hot and heavy for a while and clear up the atmosphere are much more healthy psychically than the couple who never have even a tiff and are awlays in accord.

"The woman who doesn't assert herself and take her husband in hand once in a while is really nothing more than a moron. Men never have given women anything, except what they wanted them to have, without a struggle. And they never will. Men aren't built that way.

"That is true in the home as well as in political and social life. Women have to know what they want and then fight for it. If they don't develop a spine for themselves eventually they become colorless, vague, negative.

Independence Wins.

"The clinging vine has never done anything for herself or for her race. And she is bound to find herself in time with nowhere to cling. Economic pressure, if nothing else, is forcing every individual to fight for himself, and those who can't will fall."

Likewise, Dr. Marks advises you not to be deceived by the over-solicitous, over-devoted wife. Instead of being prompted by real love, it may conceal actual hate.

"Many a woman realizes she hates her husband," the doctor continues. "She regards it as a shortcoming on her part and her first impulse is to conceal her discovery. So she tries to atone for what she believes is her guilt in not loving her husband by going to the other extreme and showing the most exaggerated solicitude for his welfare. But she is just as much of a neurotic as the woman who flies into hysteria."

Don't Fool Yourself.

If we could take a look into the psychical life of the Pollyannas about us we probably would find their omnipresent optimism just another form of over-compensation, he says.

"Pollyannas conceal their fears and their honest doubts beneath an armor of forced gladness," he explains. "It isn't natural to smile all day and be cheerful when the cook leaves or the baby spills ink on the new rug any more than it is never to quarrel or lose your temper when your husband gets too unreasonable.

"So don't be afraid of a good spat now and then, or a fit of the blues or any of those honest emotions that you may feel ashamed of afterwards. They indicate that you are normal and healthy-minded."

WORLD'S GREATEST INVESTMENT KNOWN

Woman Author, Four Years Flat on Her Back, Derives Her Hopes and Joys From Acquaintances.

BY HORTENSE SAUNDERS

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—After lying flat on her back for four years, Nellie Revell has substantiated her favorite theory that the greatest investment in the world is Friendship.

Now she is drawing her dividends.

A diseased spine put this remarkable woman to bed and kept her there almost motionless these last four years. In all that time she had put up a gay, game fight against misfortune and even death.

Before she went to the hospital Miss Revell had friends all over the country. She was one of the first women press agents, one of the highest paid and the best.

During those years she lay strapped to a board, able to move only her head and hands, she kept her old friends and made many others.

"Off the Chest"

Her almost helpless condition did not discourage Nellie Revell. She began writing a column of humor for a New York theatrical paper, and later for a daily—wrote with a pad of paper on her chest and a pencil suspended by a cord from the ceiling. The column was full of hope and optimism.

It was on the suggestion of Irvin Cobb that Miss Revell started her book, "Right Off the Chest," literally written on her chest.

"When I finished the book," she says, "I realized I had failed—I had written a book intended to bring hope and cheer into the lives of others, and I was still in the hospital.

Inspired by Book.

"Then and there I determined to get out, and I did. Moved with my day and night nurse to a hotel right in the heart of Broadway, I could actually say I had worked off my hospital sentence and won the fight.

"When it was announced I had left the hospital I received letters from over a thousand patients, some soldiers confined to their cots, some incurable cripples, and some discouraged invalids. All assured me that my winning fight made them feel it was worth while going on.

"Friends—they're the only real satisfaction in the world. Love is like currency. If it is hoarded, no one gets the benefit of it; if put into circulation, it accumulates in transit."

EARS ARE DEAF TEETH CAN HEAR.

Radio Has Enabled Deaf People to Hear.

Daily, science is getting closer to the solution of the problem seeking some means of compensation for those lacking any of the human senses.

Radio is taking its part in this field, especially in its contributions by which the deaf—or at least the near-deaf—may be enabled to hear.

Even before the popular use of radio, deaf mutes have been able to tell what a person was saying by touching the vocal cords, or watching the lips. Now radio makes it even easier. For those who could not be taught to discern talk by the sense of feeling or sight, may now "hear" it through use of what is called an osophone.

Such an instrument was invented a few months ago by an English scientist, but it has been left to H. Gernsback, editor of Science and Invention, and Radio News, New York, to perfect this instrument for simple application.

Gernsback's osophone depends on the transmission of radio waves in the form of vibrations through the teeth. The teeth, Gernsback says, are more sensitive to the slightest vibrations than any other part of the body. Therefore, by adapting a receiver-form of instrument for the teeth, in place of the ears, and attaching it to a receiving and transmitting instrument, he believes he has discovered the boon for deaf persons.

From the teeth, the vibrations are transmitted through the bony structure of the head to the auditory nerve. So that if this nerve functions at all however slightly, the osophone will in a way restore his hearing.

All that is needed is attachment of a special form of radio receiver between the osophone and the transmitting instrument. Just as a normal person puts a telephone receiver to his ear, the deaf "listener" puts the osophone between his teeth, to carry on a conversation.

CONVENTION OF LOCAL SALESMEN

Interesting Meeting at Canadian Packing Company.

The annual convention of the Canadian Packing Company began today, finishing to-morrow. The meetings are held in the factory building, where the salesmen and officials of the company met this morning, with the following salesmen present from out of town: J. A. Bryson, Cobalt, C. M. Harrison, North Bay, M. J. Shea, Sudbury, W. R. Draffin, Sault Ste. Marie Ontario, I. McAdams, Cochrane, M. Shaw, Timmins and H. B. Willoughby, Kingston.

In the absence of the manager, G. S. Matthews, the sales manager, R. S. Hall, welcomed the salesmen on behalf of the company. He outlined the policies followed by the company and hoped that the convention would prove of benefit and make for greater progress during the coming year, giving as the motto: "Buy right. Make right. Sell right."

The salesmen and managers met at the Empress Hotel for luncheon, which was followed by a bowling tournament, in which Mr. R. S. Hall's team proved victorious. The followin gare the scores of the various teams: R .S. Hall, captain, 78-96, McAdams, 86-130, Shaw, 151-125, Pogue, 119-145, Harrison 136-179.

STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—(United Press.)—Trading was active at the opening of the stock market, and although price changes were somewhat irregular the trend was decidedly upward. Locomotive stocks were strong, Baldwin opening 1-2 up, at 126 1-2, while American Locomotive starting at 75, up 1-8, quickly advanced to 75 5-8.

Rumors are again current that the last named company will pay an extra dividend early in the year.

Whether it does or not, the $6 dividend is regarded as safe, as Locomotive usually has large cash holdings and is in an exceptionally strong financial condition. Bethlehem Steel opened 1-2 up at 54. U. S. Steel's initial quotation was 97 3-4 to 7-8, unchanged to 1-8 up, but shortly after the opening the stocks repeated its Wednesday's high.

Stocks maintained a strong tone throughout the first hour, with Steel, Baldwin and other leaders of the week's advance displaying the greatest activity. New highs on the present movement were reached by many industrial specialties, while Sloss Sheffield Steel went into new high ground for the year. This stock's floating supply is extremely limited. Sloss advanced 5 1-2 points on transactions of 3,300 shares in the previous session. Sloss will make over $20 a share on its common this year and the recent improvement in the pig iron situation indicates that large earnings will continue for some time to come.

There is no doubt that recent strength of stocks has been due partly to Washington developments, particularly the belief that the Mellon Tax Bill will go through. There is also a growing belief that the Bonus Bill will meet with defeat.

Late advices from Washington are that while there will be a great deal of discussion on things pertaining to radical legislation, most of it will end in talk.

This applies to the railroads. It is claimed there has been a large increase in buying by houses in touch with Washintgon affairs.

At Your Service for a Third Term

His Policy

Mayor W. H. Taylor consented to nomination for a third term at the request of a large number of ratepayers, and his policy for 1924, if re-elected, follows:

Re-organization of the Police Department on as economical a basis as consistent with efficient police protection—

Agitating for and co-operating in seeking Legislation, if necessary, to this end that Council (an elective body) may have control of police expenditures now vested in a non-elective commission. This, he believes, will engender increased efficiency, and foster public confidence in the department.

Keep the tax rate down—

By careful foresight and scrutiny by Council of departmental appropriations, the rate of taxation was reduced two mills this year, and W. H. Taylor would ago advocate keeping the taxes for 1924 down to the lowest possible figure commensurate with the city's imperative needs.

Retrenchment as far as practicable in all civic expenditures.

How Light Affects the Eye and Gives Variety to Vision

A VERY interesting series of experiments on the physiology, and to a certain extent psychology, of vision, has been recently carried out, giving the comparison of the reaction time of the eye to objects seen by three different sources of light, one the sun, another the tungsten incandescent lamp, and third, the mercury vapor lamp.

Nearly everyone has learned how long it takes for a signal, as it may be termed, to pass through the sensor or motor nerve. The problem is sometimes oddly put by assuming that a whale is wounded near his tail. The sensation then has to travel the length of the great cetacean through the parallel nerve to induce him to flap his tail. The whale is taken as a good example on account of his length, for presumably where 150 feet has to be traversed, in a good-sized whale, it is certain that there is a perceptible delay in the reaction.

A great deal of attention has been given of late years to the study of experimental psychology. There is always danger of this line of work merging into physiology, and there is not the least doubt that such transgression has repeatedly been made by presumable psychologists. In the investigation of the psychology of vision, however, it is seen that the two factors come very close together. In a whale it was the length of time for a sensation to pass from the tail to the brain, and for the motor signal, as we may term it, to pass back from brain to tail through another set of nerves, which was concerned. In the present set of experiments, as described in Practical Electrics, it is the action of the eye that is being tested, both from physiological and psychological standpoints, for sight involves so much intellectual appreciation of the objects seen that it is decidedly a psychological action. To see an object and recognize it involves both the physiology of sight and the psychology of apprehension or understanding, so the psychologists have named the full process of seeing an object "cognition." It may be that "cognition" incites to muscular action; it always can if we desire it to do so.

To follow the course of a clay pigeon as it gyrates about in the air is "cognition," but for the arms to lift the gun and point it at the flying object requires an impulse to be sent out from the brain in answer to the "cognition." This is "muscular reaction," so called. The formation of the image on the retina, which is optical projection pure and simple, may be termed physiology; the effect on the brain is psychological, the arm movements are physiological, and the period of time between the formation of the image on the retina and the motion of the muscles corresponding thereto is called the "reaction time."

There are several kinds of seeing; the ordinary seeing of the every-day observer should not be too defined and acute. It is a general effect that is sought for, and it is fair to say that if vision were sufficiently acute to see everything, many things in the world would take on an aspect of ugliness.

The light from the sun and from ordinary artificial illuminations, such as candles, lamps and electric incandescent filament and electric arc, contains wave lengths of various dimensions, and as each length corresponds to a specific color, many see things in ordinary life by light composed of a mixture of wave lengths corresponding to different colors.

In the experiments described, the reaction time of vision was tried for three typical lights; one was the incandescent tungsten filament electric light; the other was the mercury vapor arc, and the third was natural daylight. The apparatus used was substantially the following:

On a strip of paper a series of numbers, each including four digits of about eight-point size, in printers' parlance—about the size of the type used on this page—were printed; there were 120 of these numbers. A piece of cardboard about a foot square was covered with dull gray paper and had an aperture in the middle, back of which the paper strip with the numbers passed. By pressing a button, a shutter which closed the opening, like the shutter of a camera, could be opened; the pressure of another button closed it. All this was done by electricity, the exact replica of a time shutter on a photographic camera. Great care was taken to avoid anything like glare incident to the use of some kinds of paper.

Two persons were required to carry out the experiment, one the psychologist or his assistant, the other was the observer; three different observers took part in order to get an average of the ordinary individual. Frequent rest was given the observer so as to avoid fatiguing the eye. The experiment was thus conducted:

The observer sitting in front of the board, which was supported at an angle of 45 degrees in front of it, fixed his eye upon the aperture closed by the shutter; the operator touched the button which opened the shutter, disclosing a number. The instant the observer felt that he recognized the number he pressed the other button, closing the opening, and then called out the number, to verify his understanding of it. The time elapsing between the opening and closing of the shutter was the sum of two intervals, one the interval required for visual cognition, and the other for muscular reaction dictated by that cognition. The time periods, which were, of course, exceedingly minute, were recorded by a chronograph. Three diferent observers were employed in a set of experiments, and 26,700 observations were made.

The light of one candle at a foot distance from the surface gives what is known as an illumination of one foot-candle. In the experiment the illumination was varied from two foot-candles up to fifty, and it was found that the reaction time for the mercury vapor lamp was shorter than for sunlight, and the reaction time for sunlight was shorter than for tungsten light. There were several per cent differences in each case, between the respective lights. The conclusion reached was that light giving a continuous spectrum such as is ordinarily used, whether daylight or artificial, creates a perceptible or rather measurable lag in reaction time; while the almost monochromatic light of the mercury vapor lamp has a shorter reaction time than the other. This indicates a superiority for manufacturing purposes. If the deductions are correct, as they seem to be, it makes a better light for mechanical operations than daylight itself; but where pleasure due to vision is concerned, it is wanting, for the ghastly appearance imparted by it to the human face is anything but beautiful.

Diseases Older Than Civilization

IT is a popular belief that diseases came in with civilization; that primitive men and animals lived in a state of perpetual health and died a natural death—though it is hard to reconcile the word natural with extinction. As a matter of fact, reports Dr. Roy L. Moodie, of the University of Chicago, the neolithic man was all too familiar with diseases, being a chronic sufferer from rheumatism, "cave gout" and toothache, for caverns are damp and chilly lodgings. He shared the diseases as he did the lodgings of the cave bear and the saber-toothed cats. The earliest human bones, if indeed they can be called human—those of the ape-man who lived in Java some half million years ago—bear the marks of a painful malady. The skull of the Dawn Man of Piltdown, England, a hundred thousand years old, is deformed by disease.

Dr. Moodie, in his new book, "The Antiquity of Disease," says: "A few ancient skulls reveal five cruel operations, which had all healed, the patients surviving." But he suggests that since the custom of trepanning was practiced most commonly in Peru the patient may have had the relief of a local anesthetic in the form of a few leaves of coca, the plant that gives us cocaine.

But eons before the human era the dumb animals had to endure all manner of diseases. The dinosaurs of the mesozoic era had "misery in the bones"—and such bones as they were! You have seen them in the museum. It must have been worse than a giraffe's sore throat. "Pott's disease" was doing its wicked work millions of years before Dr. Pott was born, though this sounds like an anachronism. This is shown by the discovery of backbones of saurians that had been stiffened by tuberculosis. Tumors are to be seen on reptile skeletons buried in the rock chalk of Kansas, and broken bones showing signs of bacterial infection have been found as far back as the Permian of Texas.

Geologists have to depend mostly upon bones for their knowledge of ancient diseases, since the softer parts do not leave fossil remains, but the stems of crinoids in the coal fields are found bored into by worms and it is apparent that the mollusks, crustaceans and plants of earlier ages were afflicted with parasites and other pests.

The earliest and simplest forms of plant and animal life, the bacteria and protozoa, seem envious of later arrivals and wage perpetual war on them to this day.

Just WHY Drinking WATER QUENCHES Your THIRST

THE sensation of thirst, so familiar yet vague and elusive, has often aroused the curiosity of the investigator, and at least two theories are current to explain its origin. Thirst might be due primarily to loss of water from the tissues in general, the actual sensation being a secondary local reference to the pharynx; or it might be a consequence simply of loss of water from the mucosa of the mouth and pharynx, and independent of the general state of the tissues, according to the explanation given by a writer in the London Lancet.

Some well-known facts point to the one theory and some to the other. Thus, the rapidity with which thirst is quenched by drinking water or by such devices as the sucking of a lemon, or the antidipsic button used by soldiers in arid climates, both of which promote a flow of saliva, point to the local desiccation theory; so does the thirst familiar to the nervous orator, or that engendered by atropin.

An experimental investigation by Professor G. T. Pack, of Yale, gives further support to this view. He sought to learn whether pilocarpine, by promoting a flow of saliva, exerted an antidipsic effect, and found that it did. Rabbits deprived of water for a sufficient period were offered water for a certain length of time and the amount consumed was noted. Similar rabbits treated with pilocarpine took much less water even in double the time; yet the general desiccation of the tissues would probably, if anything, have been greater after pilocarpine than before, on account of the flow of digestive juices.

While all these facts seem to be arrayed in favor of the local desiccation theory of the origin of thirst, there is a not inconsiderable body of evidence in favor of the general tissue-desiccation theory. For instance, thirst can be allayed or prevented by intravenous or rectal injections, or by the administration of water by a stomach tube. Again, the thirst of diabetes or of chronic polyuria is not assuaged by pilocarpine. Mere wetness or dryness of the mucosa of the mouth and pharynx is therefore not the only factor. Professor Pack's rabbits, although they took less water in a given time with than without pilocarpine, nevertheless frequently took some water; thirst was reduced but not abolished.

A compromise between the two views would be not unreasonable. Local drying apparently always produces thirst; local drying would obviously be greatly accelerated and would reach the sensation-point sooner if there was a generalized desiccation; sensations arise first from the pharynx because, though normally moist, its opportunities for drying are greater than in other mucous membranes, owing to its forming part of the respiratory tract, and possibly also being endowed with special end-organs sensitive to drying.

The MANY USES for the PEANUT

DO you know that last year every man, woman and child in the United States consumed, on average, more than half a bushel of peanuts in one form or another?

Twenty-five years ago the peanut was a "no account" in American agriculture. To-day the annual production of peanuts in the United States—about 53,000,000 bushels—would fill a tank nearly two miles wide and one and one-quarter miles long.

The yearly production of peanut butter alone is more than 7,000,000 pounds, and that of peanut oil more than 3,000,000 gallons. And these are only two of the 145 useful products developed from the goober.

This spectacular rise of the humble "goober" is due chiefly to the patient experiments of one man—George W. Carver, Professor of Agricultural Science and Husbandry at Tuskegee Institute.

Professor Carver took the friendless goober into his laboratory, cracked its shell, and probed deep into the secrets of its nutty meat. He found that it could be made into at least 145 different foods and food articles. For example, Professor Carver found that one ordinary tumblerful of shelled peanuts will produce a pint of rich, creamy milk that you can drink in your coffee or pour over your morning cereal.

Besides ten varieties of milk, peanuts can be made into five kinds of breakfast foods, two grades of flour, ice cream in all flavors, cake, candy, salad oils, five kinds of punches, bisque, "Worcestershire" sauce, chili sauce, oleomargarine and cheese—not to mention four kinds of meal stock for cattle feeding.

Peanuts can be made into many useful commercial articles, such as nine varieties of wood stains, leather dies in nineteen different shades, metal polishes, axle grease, toilet and laundry soaps, ink, tannic acid and glycerin.

All these uses were developed by Professor Carver, and he is still at work. Even now he is perfecting several peanut medicines, and he is making quinine from the red outside skins of the nut.

"Peanuts are one of the most wholesome, nourishing, healthful, appetizing foods," says Professor Carver, in Popular Science Monthly. "A pound of peanuts contains a little more of body building than a pound of sirloin steak, and nearly twice as much heat and energy producing nutriment. Peanut oils are palatable and supply the body with heat, fat and energy. The peanut contains proteins in abundance, as well as the much-prized legumin, lysin, myosin and amino acids."

Concerning peanut milk, he explains:

"It is rich, creamy and palatable, and it contains three times as much carbohydrates, three times as much protein and twelve times as much fat as cow's milk, and only one-tenth as much water. It was never intended to be substituted for cow's milk. It is a distinct product in the dietary of the human family. For culinary purposes its possibilities are practically unlimited. The sweet and the sour milk both can be used in the same ways as cow's milk; the curds can be made into many fancy types of cheese and fillers for pastry."

Will Cremation Take the Place of Burial?

THE twentieth century is a progressive age, when sanitation, hygiene, preventive medicine, economy and efficiency occupy a large place in the minds of the medical profession and in that of the public. For that reason, in the opinion of Dr. W. F. McNutt, of San Francisco, it is an opportune time to call the attention of both the profession and the public to the important question of how to dispose of the dead with the least danger and cost to the living.

"It is not my intention to give a detailed history of the progress of cremation," writes Dr. McNutt in the Medical Times, "or to enter largely into the literature of the subject. We may say that while the progress of cremation in this country has been slow, those who favor the method can report progress. Nearly 500 years ago Ferrar Ensio, and a few months later, Guichard also wrote advocating cremation and advising against earth burial as dangerous to the living. In 1836 a work was published in Holland condemning in the strongest terms the habit of burial in temples and churches.

"Cremation has been advocated by many modern sanitarians and scientists: In 1874 Sir Henry Thompson said: 'No dead body is ever placed in the soil without polluting the air, the water and the earth around it.' Scientists and sanitarians have confirmed Thompson. The germ theory of disease goes to prove the pollution. No one knows the longevity of some germs. Pasteur demonstrates that earth worms brought to the surface germs from a diseased sheep that had been dead ten years.

"The epidemic of cholera in London in 1854 was attributed by sanitarians and scientists to the uprooting of an old cemetery in which was buried the victims of the plague in 1665. While searching for the cause of a recent epidemic of yellow fever Dr. Domingo Feiri found in the soil of a cemetery, where the former victims of yellow fever had been buried, abundant evidence of the germs of yellow fever.

"Why multiply cases when scientists, sanitarians and the more intelligent laymen admit the dangers of burial and the longevity of some germs? The burial of those who die of contagious disease should be prohibited by law. Cemeteries are no longer located in cities, but are located at a distance from cities and towns that the earth, air and water may not be polluted.

"Cremation is only reducing the human dead body to harmless ashes—to dust—to its natural element in a few minutes in lieu of a few years, according to the moisture in the earth. The grave digger in answer to a question of Hamlet says: 'Water is a sore destroyer of dead bodies.'

"It would seem some base their opposition to cremation on the religious belief of the resurrection of the body. There is neither sense nor argument to the belief. It has no foundation other than the prejudice and ignorance of the teaching of early life. Some bodies are devoured by wild beasts. Many of the drowned are supposed to be food for fishes. The parsee give all but the bones of their dead to the birds.

"Many make the burial of the dead a matter of commerce. Not only do corporations, but societies own cemeteries. Owners or directors are not supposed to recommend cremation. Nor do undertakers. Cremation will never be a popular method of disposing of the human dead body until crematories are independent of cemeteries. And adjoining these must be a beautiful columbarium where the ashes of the cremated can be preserved, and a chapel for religious ceremonies, with rooms for friends, for post mortems, etc."

How a Baboon Was Trained to Act as a Railroad Signalman

THE fact that the baboon is not only one of the most intelligent of animals, but at times may approach the human in intelligence, is vouched for by a writer in London Tit-Bits, who gives an account of a trained baboon which for nine years acted as signalman on a South African railway line.

This animal, which was called Jack, had almost human intelligence, and was the property of James Edwin Wide, a South African railway guard, who, losing both his legs through being run down by a train, was given the post of signalman at Uitenhage, near Port Elizabeth.

It was one of Wide's duties to keep the key of the padlock which fastened a pair of points off the Graaff Reinet line leading to the coal-yard. When an engine-driver came down for coal he gave the customary signal of four whistle blasts, whereupon Wide went into the signal-box and, taking the key from a nail on the wall, handed it to the driver as he steamed slowly past the platform. On his return, the driver whistled again, and the key was taken from him by the signalman, who stood ready to grasp it as the engine passed.

For a long time Jack followed this manoeuvre intently, and then one day he amazed his master, directly the familiar four whistles sounded, by rushing to the nail, taking down the key, handing it to the driver, and waiting patiently on the platform until he returned. Then the baboon solemnly took back the key and replaced it on its nail. Every day he went through this performance, and in time he learned how to operate, under his master's supervision, the levers that controlled the switches and signals.

Sea WORMS That BUILD HOUSES

SEA-WORMS are perhaps the most industrious of marine creatures, and the species known as "masons" and "potters" are particularly so, especially in their house-building.

Fresh light is thrown on the habits of these tiny animals by Professor McIntosh, who has devoted the best part of his eighty-four years to their study. He has just published further facts concerning them.

The "mason" or "potter" is a member of a family of tube-builders, each worm inhabiting a tube the basis of which is a secretion of the skin glands which hardens often to the consistency of parchment. On the outer surface of this tube, while it is still soft, the worm embeds all manner of foreign bodies which it collects. The walls of the tube may be said to have a parallel in the stucco of human dwellings.

One of the marvels of the worm is the extraordinary number of different tasks it can perform, using its almost countless tentacles at one time with complete success.

A multitude of particles can be detected, with the aid of a lens, moving along the groove on the surface of each tentacle towards the mouth, there to be kneaded.

All the tentacles are employed in collecting materials for the dwelling, while the architect himself seems occupied in kneading masses in his mouth, disgorging them successively, or polishing the rude workmanship resulting from his labors.

Professor McIntosh mentions other worms which use grains of sand or carefully selected fragments of shell; while some Japanese seaworms gather pine needles and stick them lengthwise in the tube.

Why Toasts Are Drunk

JUST as nutmeg, spices and so on are still sometimes put into such a drink as "punch," so in the olden days a common custom was to slip a mite of toasted bread into a glass of ale with the idea that the taste was thereby improved. And so it came about that a drink was called a toast.

The custom of drinking to someone really dates from the old pagan days when sacrifices used to be made to the gods. Later on an offering of wine was made instead, its red color typifying the actual blood of the real sacrifice. Later still men made their offering not to the gods, but in honor of a friend.

So our ancestors would drink a glass or toast in honor of someone, and the person honored was as often as not called a toast for short.

We still keep the expression of drinking toasts on occasion of ceremony, and at such functions a toastmaster is in evidence to announce to the guests the dedication of the next health.

HOCKEY SCHEDULES FOR LOCAL GROUPS DRAFTED

Lakefield Opens Season In Lindsay on January 4 In Intermediate Section — Peterboro and Lindsay Juniors Play Double Schedule.

LIST OF GAMES.

Schedules for the intermediate and junior O.H.A. groups comprising the clubs of this district were drawn up last night at a meeting at which Percy Bond presided at convenor.

Lakefield, Lindsay and Peterboro constitute the intermediate group with Lakefield opening the season in Lindsay on Friday, January 4. Announcements from the west of zero weather encourage the hope that ice will be available here before the week is out. The intermediate games are scheduled as follows:

Jan. 4—Lakefield at Lindsay.
Jan. 8—Lindsay at Peterboro.
Jan. 11—Peterboro at Lakefield.
Jan. 15—Lakefield at Peterboro.
Jan. 18—Lindsay at Lakefield.
Jan. 22—Peterboro at Lindsay.

Junior Games.

Jan. 11—Lindsay at Peterboro.
Jan. 15—Peterboro at Lindsay.
Jan. 18—Lindsay at Peterboro.
Jan. 25—Peterboro at Lindsay.

The teams will start on even terms of lack of practice due to December's mildness. None of the rinks has been flooded and there has been scarcely any outdoor skating. Peterboro's juniors started "gym" work away back in November, and have patiently waited for real action while keeping in condition with road work and other training. Probabilities indicate lower temperature and the weather may turn a sharp corner into winter this week.

ATHLETICS FARM OUT FIVE ROOKIES

Next Season's Crop of Players Subjected to Early Pruning.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa, Dec. 26—The Philadephia Americans to-day began cutting down on the crop of players for next season by sending five rookies to the Shreveport Club of the Texas League, which is managed by Ira Thomas, former Athletic star catcher. The players are: Pitcher Ozmer, who played last season with the Martinburg Club of the Blue Ridge League; Pitcher Shilling, and Outfielder Sherling, who were in the New England circuit; Outfielder French, who was with the Athletics last season, and Catcher Rowland, who did duty most of the season in the Athletics' "bull-pen."

The players are under option and can be recalled at any time.

TURNED SCORES ON BOXING DAY

Many of Results on the Holiday Were Reverse of Christmas Day.

LONDON, Dec. 26. —(Canadian Press Cable).—Boxing day games in the English Football Association saw for the most part, another meeting of the teams which had played on Christmas day, with the terrains reversed. In several cases the results of the previous day were turned around, notably in the meetings between Huddersfield Town and Tottenham Hot. Spurs, the former turned a 1 to 0 defeat into a 2 to1 victory. Of four drawn games played on the 25th, there were more decisive results this afternoon. The league leader, Cardiff City were held down to 1-1 at Sheffield but to-day they trimmed the United by 3 to 1 at Cardiff; Nottingham Forest won by two to one after Chelsea had drawn yesterday; Middlesborough stacked a 3 to 0 defeat against Burnley while West Ham got through their tilt with Aston Villa by a narrow goal margin.

Teams to repeat their victories of Christmas day were Newcastle United who again defeated Liverpool; Blackburn Rovers who had a one goal victory over the Lowly Preston North End and Bolton Wanderers who decisively crushed West Bromwich.

In the second division, twenty-seven goals were scored in nine games and of these Derby County, Hull City and Leeds United accounted for 16. By losing to Nelson on Christmas Day, Derby County gave up leadership of the league, temporarily perhaps to Leeds United. Their revenge by a score of six to nothing, constituting the largest defeat of the day may have some consolation for the loss.

TUNNEY MATCHED AGAINST SPALLA

European Heavyweight Holder Signs For Bout on February 1st.

NEW YORK, Dec .26—Erminio Spalla, Italian holder of the European heavyweight boxing championship, will make his debut in the United States in a 15-round match with Gene Tunney, United States light heavyweight title holder, at Madison Square Garden, February 1.

Tunney's title will not be at stake, as Spalla cannot make 175 pounds, but the match is expected to attract unusual interest. It will mark one of Tunney's most important ventures outside light heavyweight circles and also test the weight of challenge Spalla has directed at Luis Firpo and Jack Dempsey.

Spalla won the European heavyweight title last May when he defeated Vanderveer of Holland, on points in a match at Rome. He is expected to sail from Italy next Saturday, arriving here January 9.

PERFECT SCORE POSSIBLE ONLY IN BOWLS GAME

Element of Luck Enough to Sustain Interest — Bowling Is Not a Spectators' Game But Is Primarily For Players.

One reason why bowling is so popular is because it is so interesting. The element of luck does not predominate in this game, but is just enough of a factor to make the recreation intensely fascinating. The unexpected is continually happening every frame in a game of either five or ten pins, and is like a chapter of an exciting story, one can hardly wait to see what is to come next.

But bowling is primarily a game of skill and science, and therefore develops accuracy and a strong, keen and quick mind. It makes no difference how much one bowls there are always new combinations to solve. No one has ever yet, or ever will become a perfect bowler. Like any other game of science, there is always more to learn. While perfection at bowling is impossible, yet it is the only popular game in which one is able to secure a perfect score.

Bowling is not a spectator's game, and bowlers are proud of it. Very few people would go across the street to see a public bowling tournament, but thousands will travel miles to actually participate in the game. One great lack of our athletic system is that it is largely 99 per cent onlookers and almost 1 per cent participants. But in bowling the 99 per cent are players who get the benefits of the physical exercise and the 1 per cent idle fans.

Bowling is a mild exercise which tones up practically ever muscle in the body, without as already indicated overtaxing any. It increases the circulation of the blood, acting as a tonic deteriorating after effects. A great many people do not care for more strenuous form of recreation. Bowling is not only a splendid phiysical exercise, but it is also among the best mental recreational activities. If one desires to rest the mind for a time from the problems of daily tasks, great satisfaction is to be found in bowling. It is impossible to bowl and carry business worries on one's mind at the same time.

BRITISH GOLF KING AND THE AMERICAN STAR TO MEET

HAVERS SARAZEN

America's pre-eminent golf profes sional, Gene Sarazen, only native champion to repeat in a major event the past season and England's new champion, Arthur Havers, will come to grips in a 72-hole match in California.

Sarazen and Havers will play 36 holes in San Francisco Jan. 18 and 36 more holes in Los Angeles 2 days later. Havers is due to arrive in this country the middle of December. Sarazen is now at Miami, Fla., putting in some lusty practice licks.

Havers won the English champion ship for the first time this year. Sarazen, winner of the professional match-play title a year ago, repeated this season.

EFFORT TO SOLVE MURDER MYSTERY

The Dragnet of the Law Has Fastened Its Tentacles Around John E. Scott.

LA CYGNE, Kas., Dec. 27.—Reaching out for a solution of one of the most baffling murder mysteries in this section of the country, the dragnet of the law has fastened its tentacles around John E. Scott, grocery store proprietor here, and his niece by marriage, 19-year-old Arlene Scott.

They are charged jointly with the murder of Scott's wife, who was shot down in the dark one night last June upon the return of her and her husband from a minstrel show.

The eternal triangle, background of so many crimes in the past, is said by authorities to play a leading role in the murder of Mrs. Scott. The evidence in their possession is merely circumstantial. Nevertheless, John Scott and Arlene Scott have been bound over for trial on a charge of murder.

Class Room Arrest.

Truth, they say, is stranger than fiction. Certainly no fiction could have been stranger than the dramatic arrest of Miss Scott, who was taken into custody recently, five months after her uncle had first been arrested for the crime.

Miss Scott is a school teacher. She was standing before her class, pointing to a triangle drawn on the blackboard. She was explaining and defining a triangle when the door slowly opened and Sheriff Ellington passed slowly up the centre aisle.

"Miss Scott," he said, "I'm Sheriff Ellington and—"

"Yes," broke in the teacher, "and I know why you've come. It is for the murder of my aunt."

She dismissed the class; then broke down and sobbed.

Lived With Aunt.

There are other triangles, it seems, that little children know nothing about. So none could satisfactorily explain why teacher had dismissed school that day.

Four years ago, Arlene, then 15, went to live with her uncle and aunt so that she might attend La Cygne high school and prepare to teach the township school at Centreville.

Mrs. Scott was a sister of Arlene's mother. The child was taken into the home and treated by Scott and his wife as their own.

Last spring she was graduated and went away to attend summer school. La Cygne missed her. Her pretty face had been a familiar sight at all of La Cygne's social activities.

Then came June—and the night of the minstrel show. John Scott and his wife drove home. Their machine rolled into the garage. Mrs. Scott left the car and entered the rear door of the house.

Town Shocked.

There were two pistol shots. Scott called for help, then ran two blocks and returned with a physician. But Mrs. Scott was dead.

The town was aghast. Bloodhounds from Kansas City were put on the trail and ended at a negro's home not far away. But the negro was released. His wife, it was learned, had made the tracks. She had been washing at the Scott home.

The dogs were kept at their task, but the only other trail they followed was one from the Scott garage to the house.

Jury Disagrees.

Then came the gossip. Accusing remarks were directed at the husband. He was arrested and released on bond. Then the state exploded a bombshell.

Witnesses testified that after the murder, Scott and Arlene registered together at a Pittsburg, Kas., hotel.

Neither denied it. The trial resulted in a hung jury.

Arlene admits Scott is in love with her. Scott refuses to talk.

Both protest their innocence, denying all knowledge of the murder.

And the new evidence has resulted in the arrest of Arlene and the rearrest of her uncle.

NO SUCH THING AS A GOOD LOSER SAYS COACH BOB TUPPKE, ILLINOIS

BY BILLY EVANS

He's a good loser."

In the world of sport that remark refers to one who can smile in defeat.

Bob Zuppke, famous football coach at the University of Illinois, does not suscribe to that theory.

"I don't want any good losers playing football for me," says Zuppke. "The fellow who smiles in defeat is pulling the bunk. No one is happy when they lose. It's the time for a darn good cry rather than a smile.

"I want players who fight hard but clean. We don't know the meaning of the word quit. Players who can congratulate the victor with a determined jaw, as much as if to say, wait until we meet again.

"I like the players who go off the field fighting mad after a defeat, rather than the fellows who smile when they get under the showers.

"After a defeat I like nothing better than silence. It proves the sting of losing has gone home, that the players are thinking of the mistakes they made, vowing they will never make them again. Silence and determination makes for trouble for the next team they meet.

"Good sportsmanship is the basis of all athletics at Illinois. I have no use for the athlete who doesn't understand fair play, for sport is based on fair play and honesty. I want my players to fight hard but clean. Football isn't a game for mollycoddles. It is a sport for the fellows who do and dare.

"I like to have it said that the Illinois team showed real sportsmanship in defeat. That's O.K. But I do object to that much abused expression, "a good loser." There is no such animal.

"The fellow who loses and then smiles about it, is simply bunking himself. Dont' misunderstand me, I don't favxor the crab or alibi player.

I want the fighter, the man who never quits, the fellow who in defeat can say, wait until the next time."

Take it from me, when Bob Zuppke speaks, he says something.

Golf Gets Funny When Two Humorists Battle

This is a tale of the golf links.

Nick, who has quite an edge on Lardner as a golfer, was leading by a comfortable margin when the two teed off at the twelfth green.

After Nick had wasted a couple of strokes trying to get out, spraying sand over the green, but no ball, Lardner was hoping he would require at least seven or eight more, when Lardner, who has a thorough knowledge of the part pyschology plays in golf, glanced down the fairway and noticed three or four prominent pro players were following them. Calling them by name, Lardner remarked:

"Your reputation is ruined, Nick, when I tell them how many strokes you required to get out of the trap." Altrock was plainly perturbed. When a golfer is in trouble he is always asking advice. Nick was anxious to get out of the trap.

"What shall I do?" asked Altrock.

"Better keep on digging and they'll think you're working down there," replied Lardnes. Needless to say, the advice didn't help Altrock score. He took and 8.

WILLIAMS HAS A LOT OF CLASS

Newcomer to P. A. A. A. Squad Displays Speed and Skill in Last Night's Programme.

SOME GOOD BOUTS

The initial programme of boxing bouts under the auspices of the boxing committee of the P.A.A.A. held in the G.W.V.A. Hall last night provided a good night's entertainment for a large crowd of fans and served to give a line on some of the new material that is being developed. Several of the bouts were between youngsters who have had but two or three lessons and most of the novices showed promise. The programme was arranged by Frank Milliard, chairman of the boxing committee and Wilfred Jones the instructor and they succeeded in putting on an interesting bill.

A new comer to the P.A.A.A squad this year is Al Williams, a boxer of considerable experience and skill, who went three rounds last night with Harvey Smith and earned the decision although he gave away nearly twenty pounds. Williams weighs 113 pounds and is fast and clever. He jabbed his way to a nice lead early in the bout and had a wide margin on points despite Smith's strength and weight. The latter showed much improvement and is developing into an able exponent of the fistic game.

Lorne Combe, the youngster who made such a good showing last season is getting better every time out. He is clever with both hands and can deliver a mean punch while his foot work is faster than it used to be. Combe went three rounds with W. Johns last night and although Johns made good showing the more experienced Combe had a big lead on points.

Two novices, the Hunt brothers, each won a bout L. Hunt worsted Connors in a three round affair, having considerable the better of the argument and his brother slammed into Geary so hard in this bout that the mill was stopped in the first round with Geary almost out on his feet.

"Red" Thompson earned the decision over Charlie Woodgate in the 115 lb class. Both boys did good work but Thompson out pointed his opponent by clever left jabbing.

Woodcock whose battle with Cole on other bills have become classic, boxed a draw with Elliott and the crowd enjoyed the bout. Each had a style all his own and Woodcock's aerial attack drew hearty laugh.

In the 108 lb class Maudsley and Daniels boxed a draw, both youngsters showing promise. While in another bout, Mike Murray out pointed Hutchinson and got the decision. Instructor Jones refereed the bouts.

Williams whose cleverness impressed the fans last night is to meet Willis Cutt of Rochester, formerly of Peterboro, in a bout of the near future. Cutt has developed rapidly since leaving Peterboro and local fans are anxious to see him in action Williams showed enough last night to convince them that Cutt will have a busy evening.

HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE IN WRECK

YARMOUTH, N.S., Dec. 27. — (Canadian Press.)— Captain F. L. Pothier of Boston and twelve of his crew of 14 men lost their lives when the auxiliary schooner Grace N. Pendleton sank as a result of being run down by an unknown steamer off Heligoland on the night of November 15th. Two survivors of the wreck, second engineer Odler Pothier, captain's son and ship's cook, related their experiences to-day following their arrival here.

The unknown steamer that rammed the Pendleton did not stop after the collision and after searching for some time Captain Pothier was forced to make all speed for Cuxhaven. It was necessary to man the pumps in an attempt to stem the flow of water into the ship's hold. The Pendleton never reached Cuxhaven, however, as a head-on gale was encountered against which, in her battered condition, the Pendleton was uanble to make any headway. She struck on the shifting sands at the mouth of the Elbe, and despite the fact that the pumps had been worked continuously the water had now risen to the pumps, rendering them useless, and the Pendleton began to settle in the sands.

The men donned life belts, and clinging to the rigging waited for the ship to sink. In a short time the Pendleton sank in 19 feet of water, and within a few hours, all the crew, with the exception of two survivors, were swept away from their holds on the rigging by the heavy seas. By morning the storm had abated, and the two remaining members of the crew were rescued by a passing tug and brought to Cuxhaven, from which port they sailed for Yarmouth.

FAST BASKETBALL GAME IS ASSURED

On Monday Evening when the Association College Team and the Local Intermediates Clash.

The Association College basketball team who are to play the local Intermediates on the Y. M. C. A. floor Monday evening are a crack team. They form a heavy and fast aggregation, with good combination and team play. Some of the players have been on the squad for three or four year. The team is made up of the cream of over two hundred good basketball players.

This team makes trips annually during the Christmas holidays from Chicago to play games with the crack teams of the States, and in these games they have made a reputation because of their fine play and conspicuous successes. This year they are crossing the border and invading Canada. They are slated to play the best teams Eastern Canada can produce. They play the Toronto West-End "Y" on the 29th, Peterboro on the 31st, Central "Y," Toronto, on January 1, and Hamilton on the 2nd, among many other games. Toronto sport writers claim that they are a faster crew than the North-Western University team which trimmed the good Central "Y" quintette last year.

Peterboro fans should crowd the balcony at the local "Y" Monday evening to see this perfect basketball machine in action.

CANADA SAVED BY LATE GOVERNMENT

Interesting Information Revealed by Opposition Leader.

RAWDEN, Que., Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—The opening tour of Laurentian points, the Right Hon Arthur Meighen, leader of the Federal opposition, Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, Hon. R. Monty, and Hon. A. Fauteaux, addressed a political gathering here last night. In course of his speech, Mr. Meighen said what late Government had done had saved railway situation in Canada. The last two years had justified what the late government had done.

The Liberal Government would not dare to sell one mite of railways This government would go down to its political grave and the people would still be owners of National Railways. Liberals were to-day boasting of success of the road, and also of the merchant marine. Increase in export trade was largely due to foresight of Hon. Mr. Ballantyne, said Mr. Meighen, after pointing out that the Liberals had supported the merchant marine policy.

What, asked Mr. Ballantyne, was policy of Premier King? Did anyone know? Not three ministers of Cabinet were in agreement on any issue, and Mr. King had to go around corner and have chat with Mr. Forke, the Progressive leader.

Mr. Ballantyne dealt with the sales tax. With Conservative government system, in nine time out of ten the tax had been absorbed before the ultimate consumer was reached. After January 1, he believed the burden upon the people would be very heavy.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

ZANE GREY'S STORY IS CAPITOL FEATURE

The inspiring contrast between traffic-crowded streets in New York and magnificent open spaces of mountainous Arizona are shown in a manner never before presented on the screen in "The Call of the Canyon," a Paramount picture adapted from Zane Grey's latest novel, which will be on view at the Capitol theatre today, Friday and Saturday. Mr. Grey is said to have accomplished one of the greatest achievements of his career in this novel.

The picture retains the spirit of the story. The scenes in Arizona described in the story, were used as a background for the picture as was the case in filming "To the Last Man," the first of Mr. Grey's stories to be picturized for Paramount.

Featured in the cast are Richard Dix, Lois Wilson and Marjorie Daw. The picture was directed by Victor Fleming. Heading the supporting cast are Noah Beery, Ricardo Cortez and Fred Huntley, men at the top of their profession. Doris Schroeder and Edfrid Bingham adapted the story for the screen.

The picture deals with that phase of current American history immediately following the great war when the world went mad over jazz music and wild extravagance. Richard Dix as Glenn Kilbourne, a war hero, returns to his sweetheart Carley Burch who is living a gay live in young America. Carley played by Lois Wilson, is unwilling to give up city luxuries to go west with Kilbourne. In Arizona meanwhile, Glen meets Flo Hunter (Marjorie Daw). He is about to marry her when Carley Burch arrives from the east.

A series of dramatic scenes follow in which the girl from New York wages a battle of wits against the spirit of westerners is shown in the final scenes which are filled with suspense to the close of the picture. It is a picture that none can see without enjoyment and profit.

AT THE REGENT.

What many noted writers and motion picture critics declare to be one of the best melodramatic film plays of the season, "Bulldog Drummond," is coming to the Regent Theatre today. It is an adaptation by "Sapper" of the stage play of the same name which had such a successful run on Broadway. The cast is headed by Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley, supported by such excellent players as Gerald Deane, Harry Bogarth, Horace Devere, Warwick Warde, William Browning and Dorothy Fane.

The story takes place in England, where most of the scenes were filmed and deals with a demobilized army catain who after the thrill and excitement of trench life finds lolling around in a dinner coat and going to tea parties very boring and monotonous. He puts a ad in the paper asking for employment which promises plenty of excitement and even crime if it is of an adventurous and humorous nature. The answer which he receives to his ad plunges him into a veritable whirlpool of mystery and excitement with more action crammed in than he encountered in No Man's Land. He finds romance as well and wins the love of a beautiful girl.

It is said that the gripping interest and exceptional quality of this picture has created a strong demand for more melodramas of this character.

AT THE GRAND.

"INSINUATION AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE

A screen attraction of more than average merit is Margery Wilson's production of "Insinuation" which comes to the Grand for a three days' stay, beginning to-night.

"Insinuation" is one of the biggest themes ever utilized for a photoplay, embracing as it does, an exposition of the pain and suffering that must follow in the wake oft' times of idle gossip and "Insinuation."

The story is that of a lovable and self-sacrificing actress, who, through no fault of her own, is compelled to endure some of the cruelest buffetings that fate ever devised, finally leaving her spent and broken, on the verge of insanity.

The misfortunes that befall the young actress, which also includes her being driven from her home and baby, is the result of malicious tongues whose poisonous "Insinuations" have nearly accomplished her ruin.

Of course in time fate rights the wrong it has done, and the final fade-out finds the young woman in her husband's arms, restored to her home and baby.

Margery Wilson, whose name is familiar wherever better class pictures are shown, is the star of "Insinuation" and the author as well, and this talented young artist has given to the screen, in this, her latest work, an offering that will outlast in popularity many of the biggest screen productions of the present day.

An excellent cast supports Miss Wilson, numbering such well-known players as Bradley Barker, Agnes Nielson and Percy Helton.

AT THE ROYAL.

The way moving pictures are made and the amusing things that happen in their making are pictured in "The Thrill Chaser," the Universal-Hoot Gibson special production, written by Raymond L. Schrock and Edward Sedgwick, and directed by Sedgwick, which opens to-day at the Royal Theatre.

"The Thrill Chaser," however, isn't laid entirely in filmland. The story carries the "extra" man hero into faraway Arabia, where he earns twenty-five thousand dollars as a "double" for a real sheik.

Omar K. Jenkins, cowpuncher de luxe, heard that three thousand dollars was what one cowboy got when he went into pictures.

"I want three thousand bucks a week, but I'll start at two thousand," he informed Fred Datig, casting director at Universal City.

"That's the spirit," Datig answered. "However, I'll have to make a slight cut in your salery to start with. Suppose we say three dollars a day?"

The mere fact that he ruins scenes in several big pictures being made in the Universal City studios is only one of the many funny things that befall this hero. He isn't a hero, as a matter of fact, until he lands in Arabia. It's the real Arabia, with sheiks by the tenful.

Billie Dove is the leading woman opposite Gibson, while James Neill, William E. Lawrence, Gino Gerrado and others have regular roles, with King Baggot, Hobart Henley, Norman Kerry, Mary Philbin, Reginald Denny, Laura La Plante and Sedgwick, appear in studio scenes which Jenkins wanders through rather carelessly.

BIG IN THEME AND BIG IN THE MAKING.

Charles Dickens' Novel Brought to the Screen in Complete Form.

Big in theme and big in the making, the Charles Dickens story of "David Copperfield" has been transplanted to the motion picture screen in a most complete and satisfactory manner. The management of the Royal Theatre has arranged for this film treat to be shown at that house for three days, beginning Monday.

When word was flashed that the romance of David Copperfield would be picturized, there was conjecture as to what shape it would be done and speculation reached the stage where many believed that it would be both exaggerated and distorted, thereby destroying the real atmospheric environment and putting the celebrated characters from Dickens' work before the public in the wrong light. Their fears will be quickly dispelled upon seeing the picture, for the makers have adhered as closely to the original story as was possible under the circumstances.

Not only does the romance run through a most interesting and delightful channel, but there is a happy blending of comedy and pathos that adds to the natural charm of the famous Dickens story.

The characters that readers of "David Coppenfield" came to love and quote are brought into action realistically and the result is that the picture gives splendid and praiseworthy entertainment.

St. George's school room was the scene of much festivity on Christmas eve, when the A. Y. P. A. of that church held a Christmas party. A happy social evening was spent in singing Christmas carols, and in games. Santa Claus, that jolly old saint, who is expected to be present on such occasions at this season, was there, and distributed the "funny surprise" gifts which had been hung on the gayly decorated tree. Miss Ida Parks received the "best present" and Mr. Sid. Field the "booby present." After refreshments were served, the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" brought the evening to a close.

A special meeting of Otonabee Lodge, No. 13, will be held on Friday evening, Dec. 28th, for the transaction of general business. A large attendance requested.

HOME BANK CASE IS MERE SKIRMISH

Real Battle May Be Fought About June Next. Justice Ferguson Says.

TORONTO, Ont, Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—After hearing counsel for the Crown and for the accused directors and officials of the Home Bank, this morning, Mr. Justice Ferguson adjourned his decision upon the application by the attorney general for a stay of proceedings which would prevent the mandatory order of Mr. Justice Middleton directing Judge Coatsworth to try the directors from taking effect till after the appellate division has determined whether Mr. Justice Middleton's order is correct.

Mr. Justice Ferguson's decision is adjourned until counsel for the attorney general has been able to secure instructions as to whether the crown will agree to terms which the court thinks should be imposed. The hearing was to be resumed this afternoon or to-morrow morning, Justice Ferguson remarked that mere 'skirmishing" was going on in this case at present. The real battle, he said, might be fought about June next.

DIXMUDE LOSS RAISES STORM

Giant Dirigible Conceded Lost by French Cabinet -- Explanations Demanded.

PARIS, Dec. 27. — (By Webb Miller, United Press).—The North African Sky has released the imprisoned Dixmude and its crew of fifty and the giant naval dirigible has plunged into the desert, the ministry of marines believes to-day. Air planes which searched in vain over hundreds of square miles in Algiers and Tunis, extended their hunt to-day to the Libyian wastes and to Cyrena.

The ministry of marine was convinced that the airship no longer was held aloft by storms, nor is it believed possible that the Dixmude fell into the Mediterranean.

Cruisers continued to scour the coast of Tunis, however, while cavalry and camel corps pushed into the Desert at dawn, for another day of roving search for the missing air liner.

The Last Message

At noon to-day, it was officially announced that the last wireless message received from the Dixmude was picked up at Bizerte at 8 p.m. Friday.

It gave the ships position as half way between Biskra and Touggourt.

The Dixmude's commander reported he was proceeding towards Algiers at 70 kilometers an hour and asked what the weather conditions were.

The station at Bizerte flashed back a warning of westerly gales but no further word came from the dirigible, leading them to believe she may have met with an accident at that moment.

Loss Conceded

Loss of the naval dirigible Dixmude, somewhere in the Sahara, was conceded by the French cabinet this afternoon and the affair has developed into a scandal of which explanations are to be demanded from the Government.

Deputies aroused by the confusion of reports regarding "last messages" from the missing airship, today demanded an investigation and deputy Girond will interpolate the Minister of Marine in the Chamber.

WEDDING BELLS

BENNETT-HAYWARD.

At the home of the bride's mother, 231 Princess Street, on Wednesday, Dec. 26, Joseph Bennett, son of Mr. B. Westlake, late of Cobourg, was united in marriage to Jeanie Hayward, daughter of Mrs. D. Hayward, late of Brixton, England.

The service was conducted by Adjt. A. J. Smith, of the Salvation Army. The bride has been a salvationist for the past eighteen years. The young couple were attended by Wm. Bennett, of Toronto, brother of the groom, and Mrs. E. Prout, sister of the groom.

The room was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the service being performed under an archway of floral emblems.

The gift from the groom to the bride was a gold wrist watch, and the bride's gift to the groom was a golden sovereign. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a pearl ring.

The wedding march was played by Mrs. M. J. Shadgett. After the ceremony a splendid wedding breakfast was served. The happy couple left with the best wishes of many friends on the 3.50 train to Toronto and points south. On their return they will reside in Peterboro.

Among the out-of-town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. W. Brown, of Cobourg.

SPRAGGE—CUMPSTON.

A very interesting wedding took place recently in Christ Church, Deer Park, when Joan Marion, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Cumpston, was married to Mr. Geo. Warburton Spragge, youngest son of the late Canon and Mrs. Spragge, of Cobourg. Rev. H. A. Brooke officiated, assisted by Canon Woodcock. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a beautiful wedding dress of ivory crepe satin embroidered in pearls. The court train of cut velvet was lined with georgette. Her veil of old family lace was caught with a coronet of orange blossoms and pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and lily of the valley. The bridesmaid, Miss Freda Cumpston, wore a lovely period frock of rose pink taffeta, with brown velvet hat softly trimmed with ortrich feathers. She carried a nosegay of flowers. Mr. Ted Ketchum acted as best man, and the ushers were Messrs. George Cumpston, Jack Spragge, Hugh Ketchum and George Cook. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Walmer Road. Mrs. Cumpston's fascinating dress of orchid satin was embroidered in steel beads, and she wore a purple hat with ostrich feather. Later Mr. and Mrs. Spragge left for their honeymoon, the bride going away in navy blue costume, with jade green hat and seal wrap. On their return they will reside in Port Hope.

BRAKES ARE SUBJECT TO A TEST BY POLICE

In connection with the new regulations governing motorists and their vehicles, one of the provisions is that brakes must be maintained in good working order, and are subject to test at any time by police officers.

The following table is given as an indication of what "good working order" may mean, and gives motorists a guide by which they may test their brakes and thus perhaps prevent embarrassment through being stopped by a policeman.

When travelling at 10 miles an hour the car should be stopped in 9.3 feet; at 15 miles, in 20.8 feet; at 20 miles, in 37 feet; at 25 miles, in 58 feet; at 30 miles, in 83.3 feet; at 35 miles, in 113 feet; at 40 miles, in 148 feet; at 45 miles, in 188 feet, and at 50 miles an hour it should stop on application of the brakes in 232 feet.

IN MEMORIAM.

God took him home, it was his will;
Forget him I never will.

BIG DONATIONS FOR EDUCATION ARE ANNOUNCED

Medical Schools of Ontario and Alberta Provincial Universities Share in Rockefeller Foundation Appropriations.

PREVIOUSLY PLEDGED

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Directors of the Rockefeller Foundation at their December meeting yesterday, appropriated $1,000,000 for the University of Toronto Medical School, and $500,000 for the Medical School of the University of Alberta. The donations were made in line with previous pledges.

Together with appropriations of $1,000,000 for the University of Chicago and $225,000 for the University of Iowa, the total endowments and appropriations by the Foundation for 1924 reached $10,500,000.

Dr. John G. Fitzgerald, professor of hygiene and preventative medicine of the University of Toronto, was made a member of the International Health Board.

FRENCH BUDGET WAS APPROVED

General Estimates For 1924 Anticipates Surplus of Half Billion Francs.

PARIS, December 28. — France's general budget for 1924 was adopted by both the Chamber and Senate yesterday, thereby achieving the object of the law making the 1923 budget applicable to 1924 except for a few inevitable additions, that is, to have the budget voted before the new year begins so as to avoid provisional credits, which are a source of great expense. The 1923 budget, it may be recalled was not voted before July.

The 1924 budget for reconstruction of the devastated regions, the cost of which theoretically is recoverable from Germany, has not yet been voted and provisional credits must be provided for this purpose.

The general budget, as previously anounced, shows a surplus of 568,000,000 francs, with estimated receipts of 23,950,000,000 francs, against expenses of 23,382,000,000.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S MENDING BUREAU.

Kansas Women Have Started Campaign to Aid Helpless People in Other Parts of Country.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 27. — Bachelors and business women — a boon!

The Womens' Trade Union League of this city has begun a movement which may be taken up for the aid of your helpless brothers and sisters in other parts of the country.

Henceforth, thanks to this league, you needn't worry about loose buttons, torn linings or "holy" stockings. Nay, not even to the bother of doing your own sewing and darning, after a day of toil.

The league offers to do this for you.

Mrs. Sarah Green, president, divulges the plan. It calls for a mending bureau or repair shop to do valet service for all persons too busy to attend to their own grooming.

The shop's purpose is twofold—to give needy women out of work a way to earn a living and to provide funds for temporary loans to working girls who have become ill or are out of work and will not accept public charity.

"Business women who come home tired and mentally harassed should rest and relax," says Mrs. Green. "On the other hand there are many women who have skill with their fingers and who are out of work. Then can help the business woman save her strength for the things she can do best. At the same time they can become self-supporting by means of our mending bureau."

And that goes for bachelors, as well.

NO STATEMENT FROM CABINET

Premier King Silent on Results of Long Session—Parliament Opening Not Announced.

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press).—No announcement as to when Parliament will meet was forthcoming at the close of a long Cabinet session last night. While Premier King intimated some time ago that he would not announce the date decided upon for the opening of Parliament until the New Year, it is believed that consideration was given to this question, yesterday afternoon, and it was thought possible that some indication of the time determined upon might be given out.

The concensus of opinion in the capital favors the second week in February.

The Premier was equally uncommunicative in regard to other matters which it is considered probable the Cabinet discussed at the meeting. Speculation as to who will fill the vacancy upon the Supreme Court bench has been quickened of late, by rumors connecting Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Speaker of the House, with the appointment.

Considerable interest centres upon the choice of an Auditor-General. This office has been vacant for some time. There are also two senatorial vacancies and several judgeships awaiting appointees.

While the Premier had nothing to say about who will fill any of these posts, it is considered possible that several appointments have been made, but are being withheld from publication until such time as the orders-in-Council receive the assent of the Governor-General.

DICKENS NOVEL ON 100 BEST BOOKS LIST

"Who's Who" Committee of Leading Educators Gives "David Copperfield" Honor.

A committee of 96 educated men and women of unusual prominence in the world and whose names appear in "Who's Who in America," has chosen the Charles Dickens novel, "David Copperfield," second in point of popularity among 100 books of all languages which it endorses as best for every American to read.

This is an unusual and distinctive honor and adds more prestige to the writing crown of the famous English author, whose works have been a delight and revelation for years.

"David Copperfield" has been given a complete and elaborate screen presentation and the big picture is scheduled to be shown for three days at the Royal Theatre, beginning Monday.

If the "Who's Who" Committee believes one should read the book by all means, then the same committee would undoubtedly advise all to see the film, as all the characters of "David Copperfield" are transplanted to the screen.

PRISONER SAYS DESIRE TO KILL IS WAR'S EFFECT

Confessed Murder of New York Girl Police Allege—Seek to Connect Him With Other Similar Crimes.

COOK IN ARMY.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press). — Captured on the tip of a keen-eyed employment agent, Frank Benner, alias Collins, and alias Carleton, claiming to be a war veteran, was alleged by the police to have confessed yesterday that he assaulted and murdered Miss Estelle Phillips in this city last October, and that three weeks ago he attacked Mrs. May Mitchell, a nurse in a hospital in the Chestnut Hill section of Philadelphia, torturing her so that she is still an invalid.

Detectives were trying last night to connect their prisoner with the murder and mutilation of pretty Ream Hoxie, 17, in New York in February, 1920, and with similar crimes reported in a half dozen cities by a man answering the prisoner's general description.

Effect of War.

"Maybe it was the war put such ideas into my head," Benner was alleged to have declared at the end of a frank, unemotional confession. "I get wild, like a maniac. Give me something to eat."

He is a stocky, powerful man, a chef who since the war has worked in many hospitals and on ocean passenger ships.

His father, he says, was a church worker in Montreal who later had a plumbing shop in Brooklyn.

The New York Crime.

Miss Phillips, a young and attractive department store clerk, roomed in a house on West 97th street, next to Benner when he was employed at the Reconstruction Hospital on Central Park West. About midnight on October 11, according to the prisoners' alleged confession, he forced entrance to the girl's room, attacked and strangled her, denuded and mutilated the body, and fled with his belongings after having left in the bathroom a handkerchief with a tell-tale laundry mark. The body was found next day.

Benner told of seeking refuge in Philadelphia, where he lived at the Edward Hotel and later worked in a girls' school in Bryn Mawr, a suburb. Later he became acquainted with Mrs. Mitchell, employed at the Home for Consumptives in Chestnut Hill.

Attacked With a Bottle. 6

One night he accompanied her to a dance and, on their return attacked her with a broken bottle, according to his alleged confession. He left her half-dead to crawl into the institution later and tell the story. She is still under care of doctors.

"I was a good boy until I came out of the army," the prisoner told detectives. "I've shifted for myself since I was eight years old, when my father died. I was in the army three and a half years, with the 50th Infantry, as a company cook."

Term in Prison.

His statement to detectives included an admission that he had been convicted for larceny at Washington, D. C., soon after being discharged from the army in 1919, and that he was in prison until "early in February, 1920," the month the Hoxie girl was slain in New York. He stoutly denied knowing anything about the girl. He admitted, however, that he had been arrested on Long Island for stealing a typewriter.

He was identified by the presence of a tatooed mermaid on his arm and the absence of three toes from one foot.

Rebels Capture Cavalry Squadron and General

VERA CRUZ, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press).—General Lazaro Gardenas and his entire staff and 300 cavalry have been taken prisoner by the revolutionary forces, according to a statement issued last night at general revolutionary headquarters here.

The rebels were under command of General Rafael Buelna of General Estrada's army. They attacked the Obregonists at Irapuato, State of Guanajato.

ESTATE IN NICARAGUA SACKED BY HONDURAS

Diplomatic Protest Forwarded and Reprisals May Follow—Fear More Hostilities in Latin America.

U. S. A. WATCHING.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. — (Canadian Press).—Nicarauga has despatched a vigorous protest to Honduras as a result of a reported raid by Honduran troops into Nicaraguan territory.

Detailed information regarding the incident is lacking here, but in some Latin-American quarters there is a fear that the situaion may lead to serious international consequences.

Word of the raid reached Washington Wednesday in private advices which said that a body of Honduran troops after crossing into Nicaragua had sacked an estate belonging to the Nicaraguan Minister of Finance. Notification that the Nicaraguan Government had protested was delivered to the State Department yesterday by the Nicaraguan Legation here.

Election Trouble.

For several weeks a serious internal situation has appeared to be developing in Honduras in connection with the rivalries of candidates for the presidency. A week ago a censorship was declared and only a few scraps of information as to later developments have been permitted to reach the outside world.

The United States Minister at Tegucigalpa has been directed to inform the President of Honduras and responsible officials of that Government that the United States disregards with disfavor any attempt of a Government to perpetuate itself in power except by accepted constitutional processes.

MOTOR LICENSES WILL BE DELAYED

Markers Will Not Be Ready Until First of February.

TORONTO, Dec. 28—(Canadian Press).—Motorists will be unable to secure their 1924 license plates until the first of February. In past years January the first has been the date on which plates have been available, but motorists have generally been given several weeks grace in securing them. This year, however the markers were not ready in sufficient quantities to satisfy demand for them during January. An order in council has, accordingly been passed which specifies February the first as date upon which distribution will commence.

Girl Hysterical After Motor Ride

SASKATOON, Sask. 28.—(Canadian Press).—After a 20-year old girl student of the University of Saskatchewan had been wandering on the street at five a.m. hysterical and in a pitiable condition, police yesterday arrested William Munro, age 18, and Cecil Hurley, 21, both well-known young men about town. They are charged with attempting a criminal attack on the girl and have been released on $2,000 bail for preliminary hearing Monday.

The girl told the police that she had consented to go for an automobile ride, with Munro and Hurley after a dance They had taken her to the western outskirts of the city, she said, where they had dragged her from the car.

Seventeen Hurt in Lumber Yard Fire

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 28. —(Canadian Press)—Seventeen persons were injured, none seriously, and damage estimated at $410,000 was caused by fire of unknown origin which swept through the lumber yard and plant of W. J. Hughes and Company here yesterday afternoon. The flames reached a number of small houses and sheds adjacent to the yard an several families were driven from their homes.

First reports were that two or three workmen in the lumber plant were missing, but last night company officials said they had been able to account for all employees.

SOVIET POLITE IN NAVAL NOTE

Willing to Attend Limitation Meeting But Not Within Swiss Boundary

PARIS, Dec. 28.—Russia's refusal to attend the January meeting of the naval experts is likely to lead to the session being held in London instead of at Geneva. The Soviet Government, in what League officials describe as the most polite note ever sent by the Soviet to the League, declared it was willing to attend the naval experts meeting if it was not held on Swiss soil. Its objection to being represented in Switzerland, it as added, was due to the assassination of M. Vorovsky, Russia's representative at Lausanne and the acquittal of Conradi, the Swiss engineer who shot him.

League leaders are convinced that any European naval agreement or any general application of principles of the Washington armament convention would be ineffective unless they included Russia, which is regarded as potentially one of Europe's greatest naval powers. The Scandinavian naval powers are particularly anxious that Russia should participate in the meeting of the naval experts because of their desire to have the naval strength of the Baltic Sea regulated.

The message of the Soviet Government has been wired to the representatives of all countries represented on the Council of the League of Nations. If London is chosen as the place of meeting the sessions will be postponed until February.

GERMAN COURTS CLUTTERED AND JAILS ARE FULL

1,200 TREASON CASES.

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press).—"Open your jails," is the advice offered the Prussian Ministry of Justice by the Prussian Minister of Finance in response to a request for an increased appropriation required for the prosecution of thousands of offenders of all categories who are awaiting trial.

Both the Prussian and the Federal courts have been so badly cluttered up through the large number of arrests and lack of funds to prosecute that the plan to liberated indicted persons was advanced in all seriousness by the Minister of Finance.

The Federal Government has ordained sweeping retrenchments in civil court proceedings, both with respect to the abolition of jury trials and the examination of witnesses. It is suggested by the Government that all private litigation cease until April 1, next, so as to permit the civil courts to occupy themselves only with the most urgent cases.

The official pruning knife also will be applied to the Supreme Court at Leipsic, where the number of judges sitting will be reduced and the prosecution of treason cases, of which there are 1,200 on the present calendar, will be indefinitely postponed or entirely suspended The emergency, riot and military courts established throughout Germany also are to be abolished as the condition of the national exchequer is such that their maintenance no longer is possible.

CARS SKIDDED AND SEVERAL COLLIDED.

Slippery Pavements Given As the Cause For Series of Accidents.

Three automobile smashes caused wholly or partly by the slippery roads occurred in the city within a few minutes of each other yesterday afternoon. At 3.25 a closed car, said to be owned by T. J. Scollard, 559 Reid street, skidded while making the turn at Simcoe and George streets going north. It struck the sidewalk and scattered glass from its windows over the roadway, and passed on.

At 3.27 when J. Rylott of R.R. 11, conducting a De Laval Agency at 344 Water street, was turning north on Water street coming from Charlotte he struck an auto driven by Charles Elliott. Rylott was in the act of cutting the corner when the crash occurred. Elliott's car was slightly damaged and Rylott's had the left running board smashed.

At 3.30 Wesley Finlay's car was struck on Water street by a car. Finlay lives at 89 Edison avenue.

GERMAN MONEY FOR FARMS IN RUSSIA.

Capital Seeks Concessions From Soviet Even In Agriculture.

BERLIN, Dec. 28. — A German-Russian agrarian corporation has been organized here with a capital of $1,000,000. It will seek agricultural concessions from the Soviet Government and otherwise will facilitate an exchange of Russian grain and other farm products for German industrial commodities.

The promoters of the corporation assert that the corporation does not propose to become a mence to German agrarian interests; that primarily it is desirous of safeguarding the commercial trade Germany nows enjoys in Russia, which otherwise might be taken over by the United States. Several well known Berlin private banks are identified with the new venture, which, according to report also is receiving the attention of the German Foreign Office, the Federal Food Controller and the Prussian Ministry of Agriculture.

BUFFALO HIDES AND MEAT SOLD

Robes, Heads and Coats Will Appear on Market As In Olden Days — Packers Get Meat.

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Buffalo coats, that were so fashionable 25 years ago, will soon be on the market in this Province, Buffalo rugs will again be available for motorists and fine Buffalo heads will find a place in Canadian homes, according to a Citizen news story. Ottawa is likely to have the first chance in the market if information received by the Citizen is correct.

The story continues: This information, which comes from a very reliable source, is to the effect that Sam Bilsky, a local jeweller, has closed a contract with the Dominion Government by which he becomes the purchaser of skins and heads of all the Buffaloes killed by the Federal authorities from their herd at Wainwright. Additional credence is given to this report by the fact that Mr. Bilsky left Ottawa yesterday for New York, taking with him a beautiful specimen skin and head obtained from one of the 600 beasts already destroyed. At least 1,500 Buffaloes are to be killed, and it is understood that specially skilled men employed by the Government for this purpose are doing their work carefully and systematically at the rate of from 40 to 50 head a day. Further information received was to the effect that the carcasses of the slain Buffaloes have all been sold by contract to the Smith-Armour Packing Co. of Chicago.

CHRISTMAS CHEER LOST ON THIS BOY

His Dog "Buster" Was Killed on Railway Tracks

ST. THOMAS, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Christmas was not a day of gladness for one little boy in this district. The boy, who had all joy taken out of the holiday is Bernard Barons of Springfield and cause of his grief is the death, on the Michigan Central Railway tracks, Christmas morning, of "Buster" his dog. The dog was one of the hero dogs of the province, having saved his young master's life a few years ago by seizing the little fellow's clothing and dragging him from path of an approaching train.

The eruption, which began at 1 p.m. is the largest in years, as measured by volume of smoke emitted, the despatch said.

GRAND MASTER PRESENT WITH LOCAL MASONS

Was Presented by Members of Three City Lodges With Handsome Silver Tray Last Evening

A GALA NIGHT

A right happy jolly occasion was the union last night of the three local lodges A. F. & A. M.—Corinthian, Peterborough and Royal Arthur—in celebration of the annual Masonic festival in honor of St. John the Evangelist. Taking the shape of a banquet of the premier class in the Empress Hotel, the event was indeed a brilliant function, graced by the presence of the Order's Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, in the Province of Ontario, Most Wor. Bro. W. J. Drope, and also marked by the attendance of visiting brethren from this district, Toronto, Montreal, Kingston and Cobourg.

The menu, which included roast young dressed turkey fit for a king, and aplenty at that, was super-palatable throughout, and served with that efficiency which enhances so much the enjoyment of evenings when friends and brethren gather in amity and goodwill around the festive board.

Perhaps it is not too much to say that the after-dinner programme left nothing to be desired in the way of entertainment, together with acceptable contributions of Masonic advice and information. Both toasts and responses were featured by a flow of eloquence declared by Bro. F. J. Sawers of Cobourg to have been unexcelled at any of the not a few Twenty-Seventh nights he had attended in Peterboro, while wit and humor found their places, measure full, heaped up and overflowing. Then, outstanding in local Masonic talent indeed were the musical numbers with which the speeches were so delightfully interspersed, the whole dominated by a splendid choir of 18 male voices, under the direction of Rt. Wor. Bro. John Crane, whose contributions elicited enthusiastic reception.

Musical Programme.

Glee—"Ye Mariners of England," the Masonic Chorus.

Duet—"The Battle Eve," Bros. M. H. Park and D. G. Carlisle.

Tenor solo—"Be Thou Faithful Unto Death," Bro. G. E. Chandler.

Comic song—"Radi-adi-O," Bro. C. E. Coleman.

Glee—"The Boys of the Old Brigade," the Masonic Chorus.

The Informal Dinner

There is no more delightful way of entertaining during the winter months than with informal dinners. If you must cook and serve your dinner as to ruin your complexion during the performance and the nip in the air whets appetites.

In placing the guests at the table the clever hostess thinks well and carefully of the conversational powers of each guest. Distribute your good talkers among your good listeners.

In the first place the persons invited should be congenial and of similar tastes. This insures common interests of some sort and makes conversation easy and fluent. The best dinner in the world as to food will be a bore and a strain on the hostess if the guests are unable to do their share conversationally.

Husbands and wives, and even engaged couples, are separated in the seating.

Whom to Serve

The honor guest is seated at the right of the host or hostess. This person is served first unless the dinner is large and two waitresses are in attendance. Then the "head" waiters serves the hostess first and the assisting waitress goes first to the honor guest. The service continues to the right. The waitress serves on the left of the guest.

At the ordinary dinner where there are but a few guests the greatest stranger is served first to the various courses.

Whether you have a maid or not it is permissible to mix and serve the salad at the table. This is done by the hostess, the host attending to the carving of the roast and serving the vegetables. If you must serve the dinner yourself the crispness of the salad is assured if it is mixed and served at the table.

The salad bowl should be filled with carefully washed and crisped lettuce and the "makings" of the salad. The dressing is ready in a separate bowl or, if French dressing is used, this is made at the table.

The dessert may also be served by the hostess at the table. A molded dessert usually adds to the beauty of the dinner if unmolded and garnished with whipped cream, candied cherries, crystallized flowers or fruits.

Before Dessert

All unused silver, all plates and dishes, salt and pepper shakers are removed before the dessert is served. Bon-bons and salted nuts remain. The table should be crumbed with a folded napkin.

The centerpiece for the dinner table should be of flowers in a low arrangement. The view of persons opposite each other at the table should not be obstructed by a high bouquet.

Correct Positions

While butter is never served at the formal dinner, the informal dinner requires it and small pats of butter are placed on the bread and butter plate placed at the top of the forks. The butter spreader is laid across the right side of the plate.

The knives and spoons are placed at the right of the "cover," the silver needed for the first course at the extreme right. If oysters or a cocktail or canape requiring a fork is served, this fork is not placed with the dinner and salad fork at the left but on the right with the knives and spoons.

The pieces are placed with the handles an inch from the edge of the table in a straight line, knives with the cutting edge toward the plate. More than three forks are never placed on the table and for the informal dinner of few courses this usually takes care of the dinner fork, salad fork and pastry fork. If more forks are needed they are placed with the course.

Candle Light

Candle light is always kind to guests around a dinner table and adds a decided charm to the table. The candles are used unshaded and are arranged in a square around the centerpiece. For a long table more than four may be necessary.

The water goblet is placed above the knives.

If individual salts and peppers are used they should be placed in the center above the plate.

Large salt shakers should be placed between every two covers, making reaching unnecessary.

Small dishes holding salted nuts or bon-bons, olives or radishes are placed conveniently near the covers for passing.

Perfect neatness and immaculateness must prevail.

MAMA DOLLS ARE LATEST DRY SLEUTH DECOYS

A Detroit housewife looked out of her window and saw a young man neatly dressed in civilian clothes looking at her imploringly from the sidewalk. He held a big blue-eyed fluffy-haired doll under each arm.

"Come in," she said.

The doll salesman did, and while praising his wares kept looking around with something more than casual interest. The woman suddenly seemed alarmed. She rushed to the kitchen.

So did the salesman, who dropped his doll and seized the woman's wrist just as she was about to empty a jug of moonshine whisky into the kitchen sink. Then he arrested her in a charge of violating the prohibition law.

The doll salesman is Patrolman Arthur Koch, attached to the liquor investigation squad of Michigan Attorney General Andrew B. Dougherty.

REPORT GIVEN BY INSPECTOR

Campbellford Schools Are on the Whole Satisfactotoy — Crowding in the Primary Department,

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 28—P. S. Inspector R. Boyes, at the regular meeting of the Board of Education last night, submitted the following report of his recent inspection of the Campbellford Public School.

"W. I. Chisholm, M.A., assistant chief inspector for Ontario, has been with us this week. We visited your public school and Mr. Chisholm thoroughly examined all the classes and taught many excellent lessons in various subjects.

The main building is in fine condition if you will compare the class rooms with the class rooms in your new High School you will see at once that the lighting is not good.

"The equipment is up to date and in good condition. Hooks or nails should be placed in some of the rooms for the hanging up of the maps.

"The registers are all corect. No unauthorized texthooks are in use.

"Sufficient provisions is made for teaching the subjects of part one of the Junior High School entrance examination.

"The teachers are all properly qualified.

"The attendance is not yet all that it should be. A number of pupils are not as far forward as they should be at their age and the explanation usually given is irregular attendance.

"The organization is not satisfactory. The two teachers in the little building have 107 pupils. This number would be enough for three teachers, about 36 each.

"The teachers are doing excellent work and have good control of their classes.

"Most of the pupils are well advanced with their year's work and are making good progress.

"With the present staff and conditions I think we may confidently expect good results at the next examinations.

Principal Haig Explains

Trustee Irwin presided in the absence of Chairman Douglas and the other members of the Board present were Trustees O'Sullivan, Free, Major Bygott, Benod, Arnold, Stephens Hoover and Lynch.

Principal Haig of the public school when asked as to the irregular attendance referred to in the inspectors report, stated that this was no worse than usual. For the past term the attendance has been up to the mark, but the record for the year, was low owing to the amount of sickness, last winter, when children were absent from school, the parents almost invariably give illness as the cause. There are several cases of chronic truancy. When Truant Officer Wilkinson gets after these there is an improvement for a few days and then former conditions prevail again. Principal Haig said that in his opinion the truant officer is doing all that he possibly can short of bringing some of the cases into court.

When the old High School is vacated and part of the building used for the primary departments which are now over-crowded, then this problem can be dealt with. At present there is no room in the old building for a third teacher, the remedy suggested by Inspector Boyes.

A Dispute With Contractor.

John Nancarrow, who has been watching the construction of the new High school on behalf of the Board, reported that the work is being carried on as rapidly as possible, although there has been some delay owing to a lack of material.

Acting Chairman Irwin reported that before the plastering can be done fires must be started in the furnaces .Contractor Brown maintains that the fuel required for this purpose should be supplied by the Board. There is nothing in the contract or the specifications dealing with this point, but Architect Coons, when asked for an opinion, had stated that in such cases it was customary for the Board to pay for the fuel required to heat the building while construction work was being carried on.

With this ruling Trustees Hoover, Benor and others took issue and it was finally decided to have Contractor Brown supply the fuel. If he cares to sue the Board for the cost of the coal the question can be tested in the courts.

Resignation Accepted.

The resignation of J. C. Birmingham as a member of the Board was received, and on motion of Major Bygott, accepted. Mr. Birmingham, who has served two years as a trustee, retires from the position in order to become a candidate for the council.,

Parents Object.

It has been suggested that as a remedy for the overcrowded condition of the primary departments, that the pupils in these attend for only half time each day.

Principal Haig explained that this matter was discussed some time ago and was dropped. Parents of children who reside at considerable distance from the school object to their going so far for only half a day of tuition. Principal Haig added that when the primary classes get into larger quarters the teachers should be required to put in full time instead of getting away at 11.30 and 3.30 as at present.

Information For Ratepayers.

Trustee Hoover raised the point that the ratepayers should be furnished, at the annual nomination meeting, with a statement showing the amount received and expended by the Board during the year. At present this information is not available until the auditors' report is presented during the winter, and it is then too late for discussion at the nomination.

On motion of Trustee Arnold, it was decided to have the chairman and secretary prepare such a statement for use at the nomination meeting Monday night.

The $68,000 raised by debenture issue last summer for the construction of the High school is still in the custody of the town, being paid out to the Board as required. The interest goes to the town and the members of the Board believe that this should be turned over to them. Trustee Sullivan called attention to the fact that the by-law distinctly states that when the money was received it should be placed to the credit of the Board.

His Term Expires.

The term for which John Nancarrow was engaged as building inspector of the new High school expires with the close of the year. The matter of his re-engagement was left to the building committee, who will decide whether it is necessary to retain him now that the construction work is so far advanced.

DRUNKS GO FREE WITH MILLIONAIRES ON JURY

SPOKANE, Wash., Dec. 28.—Plain and fancy drunks are being tried by a $38,000,000 jury here.

Under a new order by local Judge S. A. Mann, retired capitalists and other wealthy residents of the community are being compelled to try their hand at making the wheels of law go round.

The jurist wants them to put into practice their countless preachments and admonitions on good citizenship, radioed and broadcast through the public prints.

Every talesman serving is reputed a millionaire. And they're getting a great kick out of the job, it's said.

Up to date, most cases coming before the Croesus assembly of 12 good men and true, because of insufficient evidence, have been dismissed with the defendant found not guilty.

This has served to stir up police efficiency and made prosecutors more accurate in presenting complaints.

JUDGE S. A. MANN

OFFERED ROAD MATERIAL FREE

Campbellford Rejected a Gift of Broken Stone When Canal Was Under Construction.

CAMPBELLFORD, December 28. —"I notice that nearly all those who have announced their candidature for the Town Council have declared themselves in favour of better streets for Campbellford. They seem to be in agreement that it is only a waste of public money to attempt to fix up our present highways year after year, and that the only sensible policy is to begin the construction of modern thoroughfares that will last for years."

The resident who made the above statement to The Examiner is a native of the town and one of its largest taxpayers. His name is not found among the list of candidates who have so far declared themselves although he has been a member of the Town Council in the past, one of those who came to grief for taking a definite stand on Campbellford's erstwhile perennial problem—now settled for many years to come—the erection of a new High School.

Opportunity Knocked.

"Campbellford," he continued, "might have had better streets, and that without a cent of expense to the ratepayers, if the Council in the past had made the most of their opportunities. But they let a golden chance pass them by When opportunity tapped at the corporation doorway the Councillors shot the bolt and ducked for cover.

When the Trent Canal was being built in this district T. A. Brown, a local contractor, who is now building the High School, had the contract for making a section of the excavation. One of the problems was to find dumping ground for the broken rock that was taken from the channel. He offered to place the broken rock on the streets of the town absolutely free of charge but the Council of that time refused to listen to the proposition.

Mr. Brown found vacant lots, the owners of which were only too glad to have them filled in, and through this means many a piece of marshy land, otherwise useless, was reclaimed . The lot on which the new High School is built was filled in with material taken from the Trent Canal.

Finally Mr. Brown did secure permission to place some of the broken rock on the street in front of the Post Office, and that is the best piece of roadway we have in Campbellford to-day. That fact alone should be sufficient to convince any one that a mistake was made and that the town should have better streets than it has, and without any overhanging debenture at that. ,

The Station Road.

Visitors to a town form their permanent opinions of the place mostly from their first impressions. The road that leads from the station to the business section is one of the roughest in Campbellford. Strangers seldom fail to remark on this condition as they are bumped over the rough places while riding from the station to the hotel. If there are to be any improved streets, that is the first work that should be undertaken. The sidewalks to the station, too, from Grand Road, is of wood, and has long since outlived its usefulness.

There is plenty of work ahead of the Council, no matter who may be elected to office. May the men with the most progressive spirit win. We need more sewers, and while we have an expensive system of waterworks, the water cannot be used for drinking purposes. In a town the size of Campbellford the streets should be named, signs put up at every important corner, and the houses numbered.

"The best men in Campbellford are members of the Chamber of Commerce, which was organised last winter, and at the outset gave promise of putting everything in order. In the interests of the corporation, let us hope that this organisation will soon begin to function again."

HASTINGS, Dec. 28.—One of the oldest residents in this part in looking through an old diary his father kept in the year 1840 came across such a Christmas as has passed by.

In that year the Christmas was the same as this, very green, and before spring the graveyard had claimed a large number of people.

We would not only express our estimation in words but would desire to give tangible proof to you of what we say. We would seek to confer upon you a well-deserved honor — the highest honor that our W. DEATH CALLED SHERIFF HALL

Sheriff of Peterborough County 51 Years, He Died in His 87th Year—Splendid Record.

Sheriff Hall, patriarch of Peterboro and the best known man in the city, died this morning. He had been regularly in his office until the middle of November, when he went home for the last time on a Monday.

Sheriff James A. Hall celebrated his 86th birthday anniversary on December 15, and about the same time completed his fifty-first year of service to Peterboro County.

Last year during the December sittings of the general sessions His Honor Judge Huycke paid a tribute to the grand old man of Peterboro County. It was in one rare and happy expressive word in his address to the Grand Jury. "The reverend Sheriff tells me, and when I say reverend I mean it, because of his years and dignity," said the Judge in reference to the Sheriff's report, and that felicitous phrase, "reverend Sheriff," seemed to re-echo in the court-room long after the sittings of the court had terminated for another year, and only the Sheriff remained after the Judge and his juries, the lawyers and litigants, and the minor officials of the court had gone.

A casual remark in his last interview about the passing of another court crystalized the Sheriff's crowding memories as he looked out from the big silent room toward the noisy children coasting down the slope of Victoria Park, and one recollection called up another.

And from these reminiscences it was evident that the year 1872 must have been one of the most eventful in the Sheriff's life.

On the second day of the following November he was appointed Sheriff, resigning his position as manager of the local Bank of Commerce.

Sheriff Hall, therefore, attended fifty-one sessions of the December Court, first under Judge Dennistoun, then under Judge Weller, and now under Judge Huycke.

He heard the arguments of many lawyers, not a few of whom have been elevated to the bench, and the prisoners of the last fifty years have in a sense, passed through his hands.

In this light, and the long record of the Sheriff's faithful performance of duty, together with his fine personal qualities, Judge Huycke's happy expression of respect was particularly appropriate and well deserved.

Another anniversary that came back to the Sheriff from that year of 1872 was his election in first place as an elder of St. Paul's Presbyterian church.

Some of these facts were modestly recalled by the Sheriff, others were obtained elsewhere at the Court House. They indicate that in his thirty-fifth year, at the fullness of his young manhood, Sheriff Hall occupied a high place in the business, municipal, and also the religious life of the Peterborough of those days.

The town had grown to a city since then, but many of the old landmarks were still vivid in the Sheriff's memory.

As a boy he used to skate on a pond where St. Paul's Church now stands, and often chased black squirrels through the bush and the big oaks of Victoria Park.

The Court-House underwent extensive alterations following the fire of a few years ago, but its outlines are the same, and the Sheriff's office was virtually unchanged on his departure in November from its appearance and arrangement when he first entered it.

As a young man attending college in Toronto, Sheriff Hall had to make the journey in the Pickwickian manner of the stage coach, with stops along the road for fresh horses and meals.

The route followed the old lake shore road to Cobourg, and thence to Peterboro.

Taverns were numerous, almost innumerable, and the company diverting and entertaining, even in the long cold rides at the Christmas holidays.

Sheriff Hall's old home, which was built by his father, was on the north-west corner of Hunter and Aylmer Streets. Fleming Place traverses the property, and, according to a bill in his father's papers, the lumber for the house was bought from Mr. Young, of Young's Point, for $7 per thousand feet.

These sketches are merely brief glimpses into the great store of memories locked in the active mind of the late Sheriff Hall. He was a link with the pioneers, one of Peterboro's patriarchs, and his passing will be noted with regret by the citizens of the city for which he did so much.

Of his immediate family there are left to mourn his loss nine children, scattered throughout the country and in foreign lands. They are: F. J. A. Hall, Deputy Sheriff of Peterborough County; F. W. Hall, Calgary; S. R. Hall, Cobalt; R. E. F. Hall, Saskatoon; Mrs. A. Crofton, San Francisco; Mrs. V. E .Austin, Detroit; Mrs. Greenless, Montreal; Mrs. MacKenzie, Trinidad, British West Indies, and Miss Annie Hall at home. E. H. D. Hall, Peterborough, is a brother.

FIFTY MILLION INCREASE GOES TO ROYAL BANK

Bank Made Remarkable Progress in Past Fiscal Year—Position Further Strengthened By Holdings of Short Term Securities.

A gain of fifty millions in deposits liquid assets of approximately 50% and cash amounting to no less than 28% of liabilities to the public are among the outstanding features of a remarkably strong statement which The Royal Bank of Canada is forwarding to its shareholders for the fiscal year ending November 30th. A $50,000,000 gain in deposits is really phenomenal under conditions that prevailed during the past year and must be accepted as unmistakable testimony of the confidence that is everywhere placed in this strong Canadian banking institution. What will make such a large gain still more satisfactory from the shareholders' standpoint is that owing to the general character of the business done by the Bank there are no especially large deposits of any nature.

General Position further Strengthened

The general business of the Bank continues to show an expanding tendency. Total assets are now $538,358,554, as compared with $479,362,366 for the previous year, or a gain of about $59,000,000. Liquid assets are $233,125,474, as compared with $216,048,331, while cash on hand amounts to $81,604,539, against $71,935,920 a year ago. In the liquid assets a number of other large increases are shown, the principal being a gain in short term government securities. Do minion and Provincial government securities now stand at $28,783,050, up from $22,950,224, and Canadian, Municipal and British, Foreign and Colonial Government securities, other than Canadian, amount to $15,900,363, against $7,901,927 a year ago. Call loans total $46,372,574, compared with $48,610,020 last year.

Larger Business Handled.

In the many fields of industry and commerce served by the bank there has evidently been a demand for increased accommodation. This is reflected in a gain in current loans, which now stand at $264,722,967 as against $242,937,776. During 1923 the balance due to the Dominion government of $17,461,750, reported a year ago, has been entirely paid off.

Growth in Deposits.

In the large gain of $50,000,000 in deposits it is to be noted that those in the Savings Department now amount to $311,759,127, as compared with $277,595,882, an increase of no less than $34,163,245 for the year.

Earnings Well Maintained.

Earnings of year were well maintained, profits having amounted to $3,909,316. This compares with $3,958,469 in the previous year. The profits added to the balance carried forward from the preceding year brought the total amount available for distribution up to $4,916,830. This was distributed as follows:

Dividends and bonuses to shareholders	$2,856,000
Transferred to Officers' Pension Fund	100,000
Appropriation for Bank Premises	400,000
Reserve for Dominion Government Taxes, including war tax on Bank Note Circulation	475,000 leaving an amount to be carried forward of $1085,380, as against $1,007,514 at the end of the previous year.

LITERARY BY-PATHS

(By Thomas Edgelow)

One of the greatest problems of our parents is "What To Do With Our Boy." Shall Cuthbert be a pumbler or a publisher, a jobber or a janitor? There are so many occupations, hundreds of which are practically unknown. The professions, the trades, the arts, the usual businesses are obvious enough, but think of the number of queer ways there are by which to earn a living. Naturally everybody wants to do as little as possible for as much as possible, and then one has to consider ones' aptitude for such and such a job. Again, so many professions and trades are subdivided into lesser known branches.

Take my own trade as an instance, though, with my natural modesty, I do hate talking about myself. One thinks of a writer ("author" is a more dignified expression), as a man who turns out novels, short stories, plays or articles. But what about those great minds hired to begin a sentence in the middle? I mean the guy who gets paid real money to write this kind of thing:

"CAME THE FIRST STREAKS OF ROSEATE DAWN, STEALING ACROSS THE DESERT'S STILLNESS LIKE A THIEF OF THE NIGHT."

What do they use it for? The movies, "a sub-title," I think they call it, and it has to be that way. It won't do just to say:

"IT BEGAN TO GET LIGHT."

Any boob could write that, because that's the way you talk in ordinary life, and the trick, though why I should give it away I don't know except for my generosity, lies in beginning the sentence with the verb, and then throwing in some stuff that suggests long hair and an unwashed neck.

The same construction goes with the she-writers, who do those bits under a fashion sketch in a woman's magazine. You know:

"ARRIVES NOW FROM PARIS THIS CHARMING MAH JONG GOWN IN DELICATESSEN BEIGE SUEDE AND AMBER TAPESTRY, DELIGHTING MILADY'S HEART THESE DAYS THAT SPRING LILTS DOWN THE AVENUE."

There again, you begin with a verb,, just as every German sentence ends with one, but care must be observed always to refer to "Milady" as it has rich, fruity sort of sound, causing Mrs. O'Shaunessy or Mrs. Gurgleheim to feel so fashionably European.

Yes, there are many by-paths in every trade, and Cuthbert might do worse than get into the twisted branch of the writing game.

KNITTED APPAREL.

Knitted things, like scarfs, sweaters, capes and sacks, should be washed quickly in white soapsuds and lukewarm water, rinsed and dried in a crumpled heap in the sun. Hanging ruins them. It is wiser to wash very fluffy wool articles in gasoline or have them dry cleaned.

THE LEGISLATURE WILL DECIDE.

Much of the campaign talk about reduction of the police force is without point—unless it can be followed by action.

The Examiner has maintained all through the present controversy that the Legislature is the logical battlefield for this fight over the control of the Police Department.

Eventually the Legislature will have to decide the question regardless of whatever decision is reached by the Appeal Court in the local litigation.

If the finding holds that City Councils have the power to reduce the estimates of the Police Commission, the matter will not rest there, for there is a strong measure of opinion throughout the Province, particularly among law enforcement officials, against political interference with the administration of Police Departments, and there will be a formidable effort to have the act restored to its old status.

On the other hand, if the decision is against the City Council an appeal to the Legislature is the only means of redress.

In either case, therefore, the final decision will come from Queen's Park, and until the Legislature has dealt with this question and removed all element of doubt from the respective jurisdiction of the two bodies, there is little that can be done by municipal candidates or anybody else.

"On to the Legislature" would be a businesslike and logical slogan for aspirants for positions in the civic government.

TESTING THE BRAKES.

The new regulations in regard to automobile brakes will come into effect on January 1st, and car owners would be well advised in seeing that their brakes are in good order before then, inasmuch as the police are likely to make a test at any time they see fit, and the motorist who is found with car brakes that do not operate effectively will be liable to a fine.

The suggestion is made to the Examiner that in the general interest the city officials should have two white lines painted on the pavement 37 feet apart and marked with posts on each side of the road visible above the snow in order that motorists can test their brakes.

A car approaching these lines at twenty miles an hour should stop before the second line is reached, provided the brakes are applied as the front wheels are crossing the first line.

On the other hand, if the car fails to stop within 37 feet while travelling at 20 miles an hour the brakes are inefficient and the owner is liable under the new regulations.

It is also suggested that such a testing point could be arranged on Charlotte street just west of Park, and that motorists should be encouraged to test their brakes not only because of the change in the regulations, but also in the interest of the safety of the public.

The Examiner passes the suggestion on to the City Council as worthy of consideration and discussion.

WHY THE EXAMINER PRESSES THIS POINT.

It has been said that the Examiner in endeavouring to secure from Board of Education candidates a clear-cut statement as to their views on more school accommodation is taking an unfair advantage of the aspirants.

To the Examiner it appears that the unfairness would be on the other side should the candidates fail to show where they stand.

There are two or three different policies that will be considered by the Board of Education next year.

One calls for the extension of the Collegiate Institute to provide more accommodation for academic work.

Another involves an extension that will furnish facilities for technical as well as academic education.

A third advises against any expenditure beyond what is absolutely necessary at the present time.

There are ten candidates in the field.

Surely there is nothing unfair in asking them to tell the people their views in regard to these plans.

It would be unfair if the aspirants hid behind a screen of generalities so that an elector who is opposed to further expenditure on schools just now might be deceived into voting for a candidate who will turn out next year to be an advocate of an immediate building programme, or so that a citizen who firmly believes in technical education might unwillingly give his support to a candidate whose support next year will be given to the plan that calls for academic facilities and ignores the accommodation for technical education altogether.

There will be no danger of this if the candidates will be fair to the people for whose support they are appealing.

That is why the Examiner has continued to urge Board of Education nominees to be frank on this point, and once again we repeat those who fail to be frank should be left at home.

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

It is hinted that some pressure will be brought to bear to have the Federal Government deal with the question of daylight saving with a view to either adopting summer time as a national institution or to prevent individual municipalities from adopting the system on their own account.

The idea, of course, is to have daylight saving effective either everywhere or nowhere in order that the confusion caused by two different systems of time may be avoided.

The Government would be showing commendable wisdom in declining to put either alternative into effect.

In the first, place there is so much opposition in many quarters to daylight saving that its adoption on a nation-wide scale would not be advisable or fair.

And there would be no justification in taking away from municipalities their right to adopt summer time as a local measure if the majority of their citizens want it just because a few people outside of those municipalities may be inconvenienced to some degree.

If Peterborough, for example, took a vote on daylight saving and approved it, it would be decidedly unfair to the people of Peterborough to force them to follow standard time because a visitor from Lindsay found the system confusing.

Many municipalities have used daylight saving time each summer for a number of years and would not think of going back to the old system, and they should not be interfered with in the interest of other parts of the country which favour standard time.

THE CHRISTMAS DINNER.

The man in the city sat down to a good dinner on Christmas Day, says the London Advertiser. The turkey was there, and it was a good turkey; it had been well fed, and he was tickled because he had bought it at 28 cents per pound, almost half what he paid two years ago.

The potatoes were fine and mealy; he said so himself as he broke one open; they had been baked just to a turn.

And then there was a salad made of celery, apples and beets, and on top of it was a good-sized splash of whipped cream. It was also great, and he said so.

And there weer big red apples on the table; fine, clean apples, no worms, no spots, juicy and firm.

Yes, it was a good dinner all right.

He never stopped to think where all this came from. It never entered his head that he had drawn from the farms around here for his whole repast.

In fact, few of us ever stop to think how well we are served by the people who work on the land around here.

AN AMERICAN VIEW.

An Englishman who did not inflict any lectures on the United States in a recent visit to this country, looking only for likeable traits in American character, had no difficulty in finding them. But he made a comment in a New York club which was well within his rights. He said: "I am a complete believer in the American sense of humor, but I find it a little hard to reconcile that belief with the patronizing way in which so many of you speak of the King of England, evidently in all seriousness." The point is well taken. American editorial writers lightly dismiss the King as a mere figurehead, a social convenience, a monarch who "reigns, but who does not govern," a sort of state appanage maintained at heavy expense for purposes of pageantry and display. The delusion is harmless enough, but the condition brought about by the recent general election makes it worth while to point out certain inalienable rights possessed even by the King of England. They arise out of his office. Unless he is actually mentally incompetent or absolutely indifferent to public affairs, his powers, in practice, are of the highest importance.

He is permanent and his ministers are transitory. He has three rights which cannot be taken away from him without deposing him. His first and most important prerogative is the right to be consulted. A minister may have a great belief in a new measure proposed. He may state it on the platform or in the House of Commons with indifference to its secondary effects, backed and encouraged by his cheering followers. But when he states that proposition in cold blood to the King he is offering it to one whose experience includes many propositions of the kind, whose moderate intelligence has at least been reinforced by contact with many great minds. The very statement tends to modify the minister's own view. The second inalienable right is the King's power to encourage. During Queen Victoria's reign there were many instances in which she put backbone into her ministers, notably in the resistance to the movement to recognize the Confederate government during our Civil War. In the same way Edward VII., because he was permanent where his ministers were transitory, was the best foreign minister England ever had. He had exactly the experience they lacked. And the third right is the right to warn. The King's warning is different from that of a mere political opponent bound by party policies.

All this is apart from the royal power to reward or to do a number of things, like disbanding the army and navy or making every able-bodied man a duke, or refusing to sign the commissions of the judges, prerogatives which no king in his senses would dream of exercising. In the political crisis in London at present the King is, for the time being, the most powerful factor. No labor newspaper can make him send for Ramsay Macdonald, to entrust him with the premiership, whatever theoretical rights the Labor Party may have. The King would not make the mistake of entrusting the government to a party with a membership of less than a third of the House of Commons. The King, and nobody else, has, moreover, the power to dissolve the newly elected House of Commons, and order a new election. Our English critic's adjective seems justified. American comment has at times seemed a trifle condescending.—Barron's.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Make your New Year's resolutions early — and they'll last that much longer.

Several candidates for the Board of Education are opposed to any school building activity that is not absolutely necessary at the present time. A large number of ratepayers seem to hold the same opinion.

Christmas toys do not seem to be any more durable than election promises.

The French franc is dropping in the New York exchange. The decline should not be without its significance to the rulers of France.

Strange none of the mayoralty candidates have adopted Andy Gump's two election slogans, "He wears no man's collar" and "100 per cent. for the people."

The Board of Education candidates are lining up. Mr. H. J. McCannan declares himself as opposed to any expenditure on technical education at present and in favour of extending the Collegiate Institute for academic work only if absolutely necessary. Next!

KILLED BY ZEBRA'S BITE.

VIENNA, Dec. 28. — (United Press).—Beautiful 28-year-old Princess Ella Hohenlohe, formerly Countess Hadik-Barkoczy, wife of the Prince Huber Hohenlohe, died here as the result of a zebra bite. The princess was strolling through the animal gardens of Budapest with friends. The group stopped before a cage containing zebras. The princess reached her hand through the bars, offering a bite to the nearest zebra. The striped animal bit quickly and sharply, tearing a finger from the princess' hand. Blood poisoning set in and specialists were unable to save her life.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 27.—Wednesday's cattle at the Union Stock Yards were all sold and those in yesterday were mostly disposed of in the first hour. The receipts were 316 cattle, 64 calves, 1073 hogs and 243 sheep and lambs.

Some choice heavy cattle sold at $7.50 a cwt. to Swift's. Ten rough heavy steers made $6.90 a cwt. and good handyweight butchers' steers and heifers sold from $6.25 to $6.75 a cwt. The few medium butchers on sale brought 5¼ to 5¼ cents a pound.

Lambs showed a firmer tone and a package of good lambs was weighed up at 11¼ cents a pound for the ewes. Heavier lambs were around 10½ cents. And good handyweight sheep were wanted at 6½ cents.

In the hogs there was an underlying tone of strength and some sellers were of the opinion that the price would be $8.25 a cwt. f.o.b. yesterday. The light run and outside demand made the stronger market.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—Influenced a good deal by accumulating Canadian supplies, wheat registered a decline in price to-day, whereas corn worked upward owing more or less to bad weather. Wheat closed heavy, 3-8c. to 4 1-4c. net lower, May $1.06 1-2 to $1.06 7-8 and July $1.05 3-8. The outcome in corn was 1-8c. to 3-8c. gain, with oats varying from 1-8c. loss to a like advance, and provisions at 2c. to 15c. decline.

World's available stocks of wheat were reported as having increased 1,393,000 bushels in the last week, with the total supply estimated at 252,832,000 bushels against 187,355,000 a year ago. Nevertheless, notwithstanding that the supply and demand situation was generally construed as adverse to the bulls, close observers expressed belief that so far there had been no sign of liquidation of supposed concentrated holdings.

Firmness in prices of corn and oats was due partly to the fact that country offerings of corn to arrive were very small, many farmers apparently expecting that quotations would show a decided advance later in the season.

Lower quotations on hogs weakened the provision market.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 27.—Fresh are inclined to be easier though there is no very distinct evidence of this in prices. Evidence points, however to increasing receipts at country points and some Toronto dealers claim they are buying fresh extras at 55 to 60 delivered. Good turkeys are reporting scarce on several markets and the likelihood is that prices will be much higher for the New Year market.

Toronto, tone easier, official quotations unchanged. Good turkeys scarce, jobbing 32 to 33, geese 20 to 22.

Montreal, quiet but steady with some fresh specials offering at 60, extras 60, firsts 45. Storage extras 38 to 40, firsts 35, seconds 28 to 29.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Dec. 27. — Egg market to-day—Storage extras 38; storage firsts 34 to 35. Storage seconds 28 to 30. Fresh specials 80. Fresh extras sixty. Fresh firsts 45. Butter— No. 1 pasteurized 41 1-2. No. 1 creamery 40 1-2.

STERLING RATES.

Demand 4.45 1-4.
Cables 4.45 5-8.

CROP REPORTS

The following is a summary of returns made by the Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Farmers enter the last week of the year with plowing and other fall work well in advance of the ordinary and they are better prepared than usual to make an early start at field operations in the spring.

Kent—Beets in general were a very good crop, with an average tonnage of around fifteen per acre. The sugar content is very high, and since payment is made on a percentage basis according to the sugar content and the price of sugar, that some will make as high as $150 per acre in some cases. The bulk of the tobacco in Kent County has been sold. The Imperial Tobacco Company and the Ross Tobacco Company, both of Leamington, have purchased the greater part of it, at prices running from 22c a lb. down. The tobacco crop in general was very good where it did not get caught with the frost.

Dundas— Milk condenseries report strong demand for condensed milk products on the South African market. Whole milk is bringing $2 per cwt. f.o.b. at the condensory.

Timiskwaming—The product of the Ontario Government Creamery this year exceeds those of a year ago by 2,000 lbs.

Peterboro—There are more farmers shipping their milk this fall than ever before. They are receiving $2 per cwt. Cream is bringing 42c a lb. butterfat.

Elgin—Dairying is still the best line of farming, and exceptionally good for the man who has his cows freshening in the fall. Since the cheese factories have shut down most of the milk is going to Windsor or Toronto which returns the farmers around $2 per cwt.

Leeds—A few cheese factories are figuring on operating right through the winter this year. Some cheese makers claim that more can be made from the milk in the production of cheese at 17 or 18 a lb. than selling for cream at 45c a lb., although the demand for butter seems to be greater than for cheese.

Kenora—This district has now reached the stage that it could support a creamery, and the demand for one is being keenly felt, as many of the farmers have now sufficient stock and with the advent of sunflower silage for winter feeding, they could easily carry on operations throughout the winter.

Middlesex —Grade Holsteins, tubercular tested, brought an average of $125, at an auction sale this week. Pure-breds about $160.

Bruce—A car load of hogs shipped from Dunkeld and Walkerton district this week graded 75% selects and the balance thick smooths. At present market quotations it is estimated that by shipping on graded basis the farmers gained approximately $80, over shipping on flat rate, as was done formerly.

South Simcoe—Moderate shipments of livestock were made this week, $7.50 to $8.00 per cwt. was paid for hogs on the thick smooth basis, while lambs brought $9.00 to $10.50 per cwt. Fair feeders are being sold locally at from $4.00 to $4.50 per cwt. The bulk of the good quality butcher cattle are being held over until the New Year. Local drovers reports having good quality butcher cattle at from $5.50 to $6 per cwt. for early January delivery.

Hastings—During the past week, there have been a number of auction sales. Mature milch cows brought prices ranging from $40 to $60. Good heifers sold at from $20 to $30. The biggest surprise at these sales is the keen bidding and high prices offered for small grains of all kinds. Barley sold as high as $1.05 per bushel, and oats, 60c. Good timothy hay is selling at from $7.00 to $8.50 per ton. There seems to be little demand for horses, unless they are of good size and weight.

Prescott and Russell—Six car loads of live stock mostly cows, calves and hogs were shipped from Plantagenet since last Saturday. It is a pity to see in how poor a condition most of thees animals are shipped. No wonder the returns are small.

Durham—Poultry raising is gaining popularity in the Port Hope district. Several new men have started commercial plants and farmers are keeping larger flocks.

Manitoulin—A large number of turkeys have been raised on the Island this year. One shipment for the Thanksgiving market comprised 2,700 birds. Farmers, however, have been much discouraged at the poor demand for turkeys for the Christmas market.

Kent—We have placed this week two British harvesters and hope to place a similar number each week as long as the supply lasts. Farmers, however, are reluctant to hire inexperienced farm laborers.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Concert at Whitfield's School—Tribute to Dr. D. J. Goggin.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 28. — The holiday spirit was well exemplified in the annual concert and Christmas tree held at Whitfield's, S. S. No. 8, on Friday afternoon last. The school-room was made bright with streamers and bells, and the tree was beautifully decorated with tinsel, sparklers, and bells of various sizes. Many of the parents and friends showed their interest and appreciation by being present.

The excellence of the programme rendered, even the tiny tots knowing their "pieces" perfectly, showed that the teacher, Miss Ethel McKnight, had spared no pains in her endeavor to make the occasion both enjoyable and successful. Each of the twenty-two pupils gave a short recitation, and there were three splendid drills, "The Christmas Clock," "The Christmas Presents" and "At Christmas Time." Two choruses by the school completed the programme.

Naturally to the scholars, and perhaps to the grown-ups also, the distribution of gifts from the tree was the chief event of the afternoon, one of the trustees, Mr. Hilliard Lang, making an efficient Santa Claus. The "giving spirit" found expression in the fact that each pupil received a present from the teacher, and from a fellow-pupil as well. Miss McKnight was generously remembered by her scholars, quite a pile of gifts accumulating on her desk as "Santa Claus" called out the various names when he cut the parcels from the tree, and certainly no one present appreciated the kindness shown in this way more than the teacher herself.

During the afternoon addresses were given by Rev. Edgar Russell and Mr. W. Williamson.

Many of the older residents will be interested in a striking tribute paid to Dr. D. J. Goggin, spoken of as "a stalwart in progressive education," who was recently the guest of honor at the thirtieth anniversary of the opening of the first Normal School in Saskatchewan. Quite a number of years ago D. J. Goggin was Principal of the Public School, Millbrook, accepting that position soon after the late Mr. William Vance had resigned. In 1893 Dr. Goggin, now of Toronto, went to Regina to take cahrge of the teacher training of the great North-West Territories, and his work has profoundly affected the whole educational development of the West. Many of the foremost men have expressed, in the highest terms, their appreciation of Dr. Goggin's labors and influence, among them being Sir Frederick Haultain, Chief Justice of Saskatchewan, Dr. D. P. McCall, Superintendent of Education for that Province, and others.

During his recent visit to Saskatchewan, Dr. Goggin was a guest at Government House ,and the recipient of many hospitalities, receiving indeed honors such as few teachers in Canada have ever experienced.

Among the many letters received from Old Boys in connection with the Cavan and Millbrook Re-union last August, was one from Dr. Goggin regretting his inability to be present.

It will be of general interest in rural communities to know that pressure is being brought to bear on the Department of Agriculture, urging the proposal that judges be required to pass an examination before being allowed to officiate in this capacity at the annual Fall Fairs. The complaint is made that there has been a good deal of "hit and miss" judging at the smaller shows throughout the country in recent years. Especially is this true in the poultry department, where, it is said, few judges are qualified to place the awards properly on all varieties of fowl. The small shows are not able to pay for the services of more than one man, or possibly, two, in the majority of cases. A committee has been appointed to consider the qualifications of men offering themselves as judges, and further developments are awaited with interest.

NEWS LAKEFIELD AND IN DISTRICT

A Jolly Cinderella Dance Held at the Lakefield House.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 28.—A jolly Cinderella dance was held on Christmas Eve in the Lakefield House was attended by about thirty, nearly all being members of the younger set. The rotunda of the hotel was decorated with red and green streamers and Christmas bells, quite in keeping with the season. A bit of mistletoe created a good deal of merriment and added to the innocent fun Hendren's Orchestra supplied music for the dancing. Among those present were: Mrs. E. R. Tate, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Grier, Mr. and Mrs. Wood, Misses Nancy Tate, Mary Leeming, Mary and Florence Hewitt, Yvonne Stuart, Mary and Florence Mackenzie, Mrs. and Miss Osborne, Miss M. Bailey, Miss G. Simpson, Miss Graham, Miss O. Langley, Rev. A. W. Mackenzie, Rev. Walter Cox, Cadet Jack Langley, John Lang, K. Hamilton, N. Bruce, K. Tate, R. Graham, E. Bailey W. Webster C. Ridpath, S. Sherin.

The event of next week will be the New Year's dance to be held in the Memorial Hall under the auspices of the Volunteer Fire Brigade. This dance will attract not only the local young folks but also the holiday visitors as well. There has been a feeling of disappointment among the fireman that more of the older people do not patronize their dances and a New Year's resolution to do so would be of mental benefit and enjoyment to the older people and the young men as well. A little encouragement helps any organization and the Fire Brigade should have the sympathy and support of every householder.

Christmas Services.

The Christmas services in St. John's church were held at 8 a.m. and at 10.30 a.m. Both services were well attended. At the 10.30 service Rev. Walter Cox preached an appropriate sermon on "The Christmas Chimes" taking his text from these words of Holy Scripture, "And His Name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace."

At this service a beautiful ante pendulum and new communion linen were dedicated by Mr. Cox. These gifts were made and given by two parishioners as a pious offering to God's service.

Rev. Walter Cox was the celebrant at the 8 o'clock communion and Rev. A. W. Mackenzie, assisted by Mr. Cox, at the 10.30 celebration.

High Mass was celebrated in St. Paul's Roman Catholic church at midnight, on Christmas eve and Low Mass at 11 a.m.

The musical service held in the Baptist Church on Sunday evening was very successful and was thoroughly enjoyed by a large number of people who attended the service.

The Baptists, Methodists and Presbyterians held a union service in the Baptist Church on Christmas morning at 10.30. Rev. T. L. White took charge and was assisted by Rev. C. S. Reddick while Miss Nelson presided at the organ.

Cobourg and District

COBOURG, Dec. 27.—There were an unusually large number of visitors in town for the Yuletide holiday, Christmas day, for the latch-string was out in every home. Every incoming train brought its quota of visitors and happiness reigned in the majority of homes.

Christmas day services were held at St. Peter's Anglican church by the rector, Rev. Canon Sawers.

A Christmas distribution by the King's Daughters brought happiness a and joy to some homes, that was much appreciated. Everyone rejoiced over the snow that covered field and road and lawn and walks on Christmas eve, and although there was not heard the merry sound of the jingling sleigh bells, the white carpet over the earth made it seem far more Christmasy, especially for the children, who were out bright and early with shining new sleighs and with skates looking for some miniature rink, and the long-delayed ice. Altogether it was a happy day for young and old, although the rain came later in the day and snow and ice both disappeared.

Need Snow For Logging

While the mild weather has been favorable to the lumber operations in the woods and a great many logs have been cut, the owners are beginning to be anxious about the problem of drawing them to the mills as for hauling it is necessary that the swamps be frozen over, a condition that seems very remote at the present time. There is a possibility that a great many cut logs will remain where they were felled.

Fifty Dollars a Month
(Guaranteed to you by the Canada Life)

How Fifty Dollars a Month looks to the Average Man

Age 20—Happy on Fifty Dollars a month.

Age 35—Thinks he can easily afford to "spend" Fifty Dollars a month.

Age 50—Things are not going as well as they were.

Age 65—Strange how these assets have depreciated! Fifty Dollars a month is good interest on $10,000, and not to be despised.

You know of men well up in years who are still "drudging along". They cannot stop if they would, but must go on to the end of their days working for a living. You can avoid that.

Why Not Pension Yourself?

Why not "take stock" of your present financial position—to size up your personal affairs and decide on a plan for the future?

Our New Pension Plan

guarantees that upon reaching a certain age in life, you will receive a monthly cheque for $50.00, $100, $200, $250—as you may now decide—and this monthly payment cannot cease as long as you live.

An Income for Life

Think what it may mean to you to be certain of an income right up to the end of life, when you consider that 97% of people in their later years are partially or wholly dependent upon others for support.

When they were younger they did not have the chance now offered you. It was not then possible to secure such a convenient and certain provision as this Monthly Pension Plan.

And This is Not All

Suppose some day before you reach age sixty you meet with a mishap and become totally and permanently disabled through accident, illness or any cause. (Such a thing has happened soon after men have secured this new policy of the Canada Life.) Immediately, the payment of further premiums would be cancelled. The Canada Life would become responsible for sending you $50.00, $100, $200, $250, a month, as arranged, for the rest of your life.

There are many other benefits.

An average deposit of only a few dollars a month will return you $50.00 a month later on.

"BLACK OXEN"

by GERTRUDE ATHERTON

Published by arrangement with Associated First National Pictures, Inc. Watch for the screen version produced by Frank Lloyd with Corinne Griffith as Countess Zattiany.

(Copyright, 1923, by Gertrude Atherton.)

XXIX. (Continued)

"I know little of Englishmen. Zattiany was never appointed to St. James', and although, of course, I met many of them in the service on the continent, and even visited London several times, it must have happened that I was interested in some one else or in a state of profound reaction from love at the time—at least so I infer. It was a long time ago. I remember only the fact."

"Those whom I tried to love would soon have tired of me had I not played the game as adroitly as themselves, and if I had permitted them to feel sure of me. The last thing any of them wanted was depth of feeling, tragic passion. . . . My most desperate affair was my last—after a long interval. . . . I was in my early forties. I had thought myself too utterly disillusioned, ever to imagine myself in love again. Men are gross and ridiculous creatures in the main, and aside from my personal disappointments, I thought it was time for that chapter of my life to finish. I was amusing myself with diplomatic intrigue. I was in the Balkans at the timek that breeding ground of war microbes, and I was interested in a very delicate situation in which I played a certain part.

"The awakening was violent. He was an Austrian, with an important place in the Government; he came to Belgrade on a private mission. He was a very great person in many ways, and I think I really loved him, for he seemed to me entirely worthy of it. He certainly was mad enough about me for a time—for a year, to be exact. When he returned to Vienna it was not difficult for me to find an excuse to go also. Although Zattiany was a Hungarian, he never visited his Hungarian estates except for the boar hunting, and spent his time when on leave, or between appointments, in Vienna, where he had inherited a palace—I must tell you that the city residence of a nobleman in the Dual Empire was always called a palace, however much it might look like a house.

"I shall always remember this man with a certain pleasure and respect, for he is the only man who ever made me suffer. A woman forgets the lovers she has dismissed as quickly as possible. Their memory is hateful to her, like the memory of all mistakes. But this man made me suffer horribly. (He married a young girl, out of duty to his House, and unexpectedly fell in love with her.) Therefore, although I recovered, and completely, still do I sometimes dwell with a certain cynical pleasure on the memory of him—"

"Have you never seen him since?" asked Clavering sharply. He had returned to his chair. "How long ago was that?"

"Quite sixteen years ago. I did not visit Vienna again for several years; in fact, not until after my husband's death, when I returned there to live. But by that time I had lost both youth and beauty. His wife had died, but left him an heir, and he showed no disposition to marry again; certainly he was as indifferent to me as I to him. We often met, and as he respected my mind and my knowledge of European affairs, we talked politics together, and he sometimes asked my advice.

"But to go back. After that was over I determined to put love definitely out of my life. I believed then and finally that I had not the gift of inspiring love; nor would I ever risk humiliation and suffering again. I played the great game of life and politics. I was still beautiful—for a few years—I had an increasing great position, all the advantages, obvious and subtle, that money could procure. My maid was very clever. My gowns, as time went on, were of a magnificent simplicity; all frou-frous were renounced. I had no mind to invite the valuation I heard applied to certain American women in Paris: 'elderly and dressy.'

Clavering laughed for the first time. "I wonder you ever made a mistake of any sort. I also wonder if you are a type as well as an individual? I have, I think, followed intelligently your psychological involutions and convolutions so far. I am only hoping you will not get beyond my depth. What was your attitude toward your past mistakes—beyond what you have told me? Did you suffer remorse, as I am told women do when they either voluntarily renounce or are permitted to sin no more?"

"I neither regarded them as mistakes nor did I suffer remorse. Every human being makes what are called mistakes and those happened to be mine. Therefore I dismissed them to the limbo of the inevitable. . . . As your world, I am told, looks upon you as the coming dramatist, it may appeal to your imagination to visualize that secret and vital and dramatic undercurrent of what was on the surface a proud and splendid life. . . . Or, if there are regrets, it is for the weight of memories, the completeness of disillusion, the slaying of mental youth—which cannot survive brutal facts.

"I think that for women of my type—what may be called the intellectual siren—the lover phase is inevitable. We are goaded not only by the imperious demands of womanhood and the hope of the perfect companion, but by curiosity, love of adventure, ennui; possibly some more obscure complex—vengeance on the husband who has wrecked our first illusions—on Life itself. Bringing up, family and social traditions, have nothing to do with it. Only opportunity counts. Moreover, we are not the product of our immediate forebears, but of a thousand thousand unknown ancestors. . . .

"God! True enough!"

"Unfortunately, these women who have wasted so much time on love never realize the tragic futility until Time himself disposes of temptation, and then it is too late for anything but regrets of another sort. The war may have solved the problem for many a desperate spirit.

"My own case has assumed an entirely different complexion. With my youth restored I have the world at my feet once more, but safeguarded by the wisdom of experience—in so far as a mortal ever may be. The bare idea of that old game of prowling sex fills me with ennui and disgust. The body may be young again, but my mind, re-energized though it is, is packed with memories, a very Book of Life. When I found that my beauty was restored I thought of nothing less than returning to the conquest of men in the old manner, although quite aware of its powerful aid in the work I have made up my mind to do in Austria. Of late, of course, I have thought of little else but what this recrudescence of my youth means to you and to myself. But—please do not interrupt—this I shall not discuss with you again until Monday—if then.

"But once more I wish to impress you with the fact that I indulge in nothing so futile as regrets for my 'past.' 'Sackcloth and ashes' provoke nothing but a smile from women of my type and class. Moreover, I believe that my education would not be complete without that experience—mine, understand. I am not speaking for women of other temperaments, opportunities, of less intellect, of humbler character, weaker will. . . . And if I had persisted in virtue at that time I should probably make a fool of myself today, an even more complete fool than women do when they feel youth slipping but still are able with the aid of art and arts to fascinate younger men.

"That almost standardized chapter I renounced peremptorily. My pride was too great to permit me to be foolish even in the privacy of my mind over men half my age. Nor did I make any of the usual frantic attempts to keep looking young. I had seen too much of that, laughed at it too often. Nevertheless, I hated the approach of age, the decay of beauty, the death of magnetism, as bitterly as the silliest woman I had ever met.

"Some women merely fade: lose their complexions, the brightness of their eyes and hair. Others grow heavy, solid; stout or flabby; the muscles of the face and neck loosen and sag, the features alter. I seemed slowly to dry up—wither. There was no flesh to hang or loose skin to wrinkle, but it seemed to me that I had ten thousand lines. I thought it a horrid fate. I could not know that Nature, meaning to be cruel, had given me the best chance for the renewal of the appearance as well as the fact of youth

"I suppose all this seems trivial to you—this morning over lost youth—"

"Not at all. It must have been hell to a woman like you. As for women in general—they may make more fuss about it, but I fancy they hate it less than men."

"Yes, men are vainer than women," said Madame Zattiany indifferently. "But I have yet to waste any sympathy on men. . . .

"I suppose I only fully realized that my youth, my beauty, my magnetic charm, had gone when men ceased to make violent love to me. They still paid court, for I was a very important person, my great prestige was a sort of halo, and I had never neglected my mind. There was nothing of significance I had not read during all these years. I was as profoundly interested in the great political currents of Europe, seen and unseen, as any man—or as any intelligent woman of European society. Moreover, I had the art of life down to a fine point, and I had not forgotten that even in friendship men are drawn to the subtle woman who knows how to envelop herself in a certain mystery. And European men are always eager to talk with an accomplished woman, even if she has no longer the power to stir their facile passions.

"When I realized that my sex power had left me I adopted an entirely new set of tactics—never would I provoke a cynical smile on the faces I once had the power to distort! With no evidence of regret for my lost enchantment I remained merely the alert and always interested woman of the world, to whom men, if sufficiently entertaining, were welcome companions for the moment, nothing more."

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Clive Roberts Earton

THE CHRISTMAS-TREE HOUSE

"Why, we're on top of the church steeple!"

Away went the Twins on Daddy Gander's magic dustpan to Daddy Gander Land.

They could see it long before they arrived with its funny, lovely houses, and its dear, queer streets, and its odd, delightful lanes.

There was the house that Jack built, and the school house of the Ten-o'Clock-Scholar, and everything.

Suddenly Daddy Gander shaded his eyes from the sun and a worried look gathered upon his usually good-natured brow. "Yes, sir! That's it as sure as you're alive!" he declared, "and he promised me he wouldn't. What would I do if Mother Goose were to get back before me?"

"Whatever in the world are you talking about?" asked Nick. "Is it a secret?"

"No," answered Daddy Gander. "Look and see for yourselves. Secret! I should say not! It's the mill! Poppleton Bun, the miller, promised me that he wouldn't grind so much as a mustard seed while I was away and he's broken his promise. There will be chaff and flour dust over everything in the place and Mother Goose will be terribly peeved. She just finished sweeping up the whole place before she went away, and her last words were, 'Now, Daddy Gander, I'm leaving everything in your charge. I want you to keep everything as spick and span as you know how. And don't let that fat miller-man run his mill, and don't let the sandman spill any of his mussy sand.'"

"Well, you can't help it, can you?' said Nancy.

"Yes, at least I could have, but it's too late now," sighed Daddy Gander. "I should have stayed at home and looked after things, but I have the worst memory! I forgot."

At that minute they arrived. The magic dustpan stopped, and they were just about to jump off when Daddy Gander happened to look over the edge. "Mercy me on us. Why, we're on top of the church steeple!" he cried. "A single step would kill us! Duster," he scolded, "what's getting to be the matter with you? It's bad enough for me to be getting absent-minded, without you. Now take us out of here and put us down in front of the Christmas-Tree House that I fixed up for the Twins to live in. You know where it is! Next door to Bo Peep's and right across the street from Misses Sprat's. A Christmas-Tree House is a house you fix up with lights and doll furniture and put under a Christmas Tree."

The magic dustpan gave a wiggle and wiggled itself off the steeples. And after they'd all gone, the tin rooster that swung on a rod and told which way the wind blew, flapped his wings and crowed loudly and indignantly.

"Well, I declare!" he cackled. "Such an insult! To be treated like a door mat! It's high time Mother Goose was coming home!"

In the meantime the dustpan had taken the travelers down to the street and deposited them in front of the Christmas-Tree House.

THE EYE AND HEART

In speaking on Lamentations III: 49-58, Rev. A. E. Gregory said:

The book of Lamentations was written by a man who saw the ruin of Jerusalem with his own eyes, and what he saw affected his soul so that he dipped his pen in tears. The eye has a powerful influence on the heart, and it is said the impressions through the eye are many times faster than through the ear. If we could see the results of war in Europe, it would affect the heart, and make us pacifists. To see millions of crosses, and maimed bodies; undernourished children, blind and groping youths; ruined cities and fair lands ravaged, would so affect the heart that we would all work and pray for a warless world.

If we could see the heathen, and all their gross and unspeakable superstitions; their blinding fatalism, it would affect the heart and move the purse. We would soon be enthusiastic for missionary enterprise if we saw. What Livingstone saw in Africa affected his heart until it kept him there in sacrifice. If tourists would stand outside one of the London prisons and see over a thousand drunken women confined there they will not doubt the right and wrong of Prohibition. It was the sight of the evils of the United States saloon that eventually put it out. To see Jesus also affects the heart and it changes men. Zaccheus saw Him, and it affected his heart, and because his heart, his business, his public life and his home. See Jesus, it will change you!

Today's Quotations and Opinion and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 28.—(United Press). — Stocks were somewhat irreglar at the opening of the Stock Exchange with prices for the most part fractionally lower.

General Electric was up ¼ at 194 ¼ and quickly added an additional quarter to this.

The oils showed firmness, Standard Oil of New Jerey, being up ¼ at 39¼ and Marland up ⅜ at 34.

Trading continued active in the first half hour with considerable irregularity in prices. However, the market was not without leaders, Standard Oil of New Jersey being probably the most active and strongest stock on the list selling up to 39⅜ the highest in many months and a gain of nearly a full point net.

The improvement in oil trade continues and prices will benefit the New Jersey Company to a large degree, in as much as it is carrying the largest inventories of crude and refined oil and the advances in oil prices will cause a material appreciation in the value of this inventory.

Steel Common was firm and active around 97½ with the other Steels displaying a firm tone, helped undoubtedly by the recent improvement in the buying of steel products.

Steel organizations supplying alloy steels to the automobile trade are expanding operations and receiving a substantial increase in orders at good prices.

Along with strength in Standard Oil of New Jersey and Standard of California around 63, the South American Oils showed a good tone, with Maracaibo up a fraction at 27 and Asphalt at 40.

Made High Standing In Swine Judging

STRATFORD, Ont. December 28 C Made high wereionpaot?d ——Perth County's team which attended a special educational course in swine here this week made a splen did showing in competition with teams from Waterloo, Huron, Bruce and Wellington Counties. It beat the teams from the other counties in the grading competition and in judging live hogs, and won by a comfortable margin on the total of the three contests. Bruce county beat Perth team out by 45 points in the dressed carcasses competition.

The course was adjudged to be all that could be desired from an educational standpoint.

One unusual feature of the course was that hogs were given the same placings alive as they were after being killed.

In the judging of a pen of four live bacon hogs and four pens of pigs, Perth County obtained 1616 marks out of a possibl 1800, Wellington has 1141, Bruce 1134, Huron 1019, and Waterloo 935. The latter county had only eight men to a team whereas the other counties had ten.

MOVIE COLONY EXPLAINED TO KIWANIS CLUB

Miss Margery Wilson and Jules Brazil Among the Notables at To day's Club Luncheon.

G.N.GORDON HONORED

Miss Margery Wilson, noted motion picture actress, and Jules Brazil, well known entertainer of Toronto, were guests at to-day's Kiwanis Club luncheon. President J. A. McKone presided. Miss Wilson is appearing in person at the Grand Opera House in connection with a picture produced by her and called "Insinuation." Miss Wilson is an entertaining speaker and has addressed Rotary and Kiwanis Club meetings in all parts of Canada and the United States. Discussing Hollywood today, Miss Wilson said she was amused at some of the stories concerning the movie colony. She resides in Los Angeles, but as Hollywood is only a short distance away she has had every opportunity of familiarizing herself with the activities of the place. She has frequently heard of wild parties, but so far she said she had not even received an invitation much less seen one. "However, I still have hopes," said Miss Wilson. One time while visitinf Pennsylvania, Miss Wilson was the guest of a number of the legislators of the State. During the evening one intoxicated legislator remarked to Miss Wilson, "We are giving you a little bit of Hollywood" to which Miss Wilson replied "I had come to Pennsylvania to see this."

Turning to the question of censorship Miss Wilson said that the present craze towards censorship would kill the motion picture industry unless it was checked. In some parts of the States and in Quebec, Shakespeare could not get by the Board of Censors. The dagger scene would be one of the first to go. Real drama canot be produced without contrast and the contrast or high lights in the play is usually deleted by the censor. Some people who have a little money and not much to do, busy themselves with minding other peoples business. Miss Wilson said she believed in sensible censorship, but the most effective form of censorship originates in the home and not in the legislative halls. We are apt to repeat things we hear parrot fashion ,and the first thing we know we believe them. Commenting on the humorous side of life in Hollywood, Miss Wilson recalled the incongruity of seeing John the Baptist riding down street in a car with Abraham Lincoln and two other noted celebrities eating hotdogs on location.

In moving a vote of thanks Kiwanian G. N. Gordon said that censorship from a legislative point of view was necessary in many cases for the protection of subnormal persons. Charlie Cook seconded the motion which was heartily endorsed by the Club. "When you come out to California I want you all to come to my house for dinner," said Miss Wilson in replying to the vote of thanks.

Mr. Jules Brazil provided a running fire of comedy and concluded a ten minute entertainment with some harmony on the piano. He was given a hearty vote of thanks.

On motion of President-elect Jack Marshall and Kiwanian Charlie Cook, Kiwanian G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., was elected honorary president of the Kiwanis club. In accepting the honor Mr. Gordon said he was glad to know that there was at least one vacant job remaining in Peterborough. He thought they had all been filled. He promised to see that the Club was supplied with a number of good speakers during the coming session of the House.

It was announced that the Kiwanis Musical Revue will be repeated some time in January for the benefit of the Y.M.C.A.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—Would you kindly allow me space to add my little mite to our civic campaign. Upon us as citizens lies the responsibility of selecting our chief magistrate on Tuesday next. Last night after coming off the Port McNicol train one of the first things that drew my attention was a flag flying full mast with the words on it 50 years. Those word had a significance they spelt stability that it what the world is starving for at the present. Now as the women have a vote in this municipal election I am looking for a chief magistrate to be elected who will be a credit to our city at every public function. I don't thing that these women are going to stay at home and simply cook their husband's dinner but they are going to vote to give our city the distinction among the other towns and cities of the Province that she deserves.

Thanking you, I remain,
Yours truly.
W. H. MERRELL,

WOMEN REPRESENTED.

At the meeting to be held this evening in the hall of the Public Library, under the auspices of the Owners' and Tenants' Association, the Local Council of Women will be represented also, for the purpose of gaining information with regard to the policies of the Mayor and Councillors. A larger number of women than usual will vote this year on account of the inclusion in the voters' lists of names of wives of tenants and owners. The Local Council of Women is desirous of hearing the views of those nominated for various civic positions.

SAYS ELECTION WAS NOT VALID

Judges Concur With Petitioner in Declaration That Onus is on Respondent.

KITCHENER, Ont., Dec. 28.—Canadian Press.— Counsel for the petitioner, R. H. Greer, K.C., in South Waterloo election protest trial at County buildings to-day asked the judges to declare the election of Karl Homuth, invalid.

Having finished his case covering alleged irregularities in the way of 21 votes by people who did not have the right to vote, Mr. Greer said the onus was on the respondent to show why the election should not be declared invalid. Justices Kelly and Masten concurred in the view. Mr. Widdifield, counsel for Homuth then opened an argument which extended over 2 hours. He claimed that no election could be declared invalid owing to irregularities. The court had to govern itself by the controverted Elections Act under which corruption had to be proven as regards the voter.

GERMAN BUDGET IS BUSINESS PROBLEM

NEW YORK, Dec. 28—(Canadian Press).—Owen D. Young, directors chairman of the General Electric Company to-day officially announced his acceptance of the invitation of the reparations commission to serve with Brig. General Charles G. Dawes as United States representatives of the first committee to consider the balancing of Germany's budget.

Mr. Young's acceptance was cabled to the commission in Paris in answer to a cable message formally asking him to serve. Mr. Young announced that Gen. Dawes and he would sail for Paris on the steamship America to-morrow to attend the first committee meeting on January 14th. Mr. Young, who was to eet with Gen. Dawes for a discussion of their plans later to-day, said that he regarded the German budget balancing and currency stabilization questions as matters of business only and expressed the hope that they might be approached in that spirit with the determination to get a

EAST CITY MERCHANT VICTIM OF BURGLARS

T. B. Maniece, 99 Hunter street east, was a victim of burglars who on Christmas day broke into his store opened his safe, and got away with a steel box containing mortgages, deeds and insurance papers. No tracks were left by the maurauders, who effected their entrance by a cellar widow, forced a cellar door and entered the store, leaving by the back door, which they left open.

Mr. Maniece, interviewed by The Examiner, said if he left the safe unlocked that night it was the first time in 27 years. He is quite positive however, that he locked it, and in that event the burglars must have been experts in their business. The safe was locked when he arrived in the morning.

No cash was taken, a jar of coppers in safe being despised by the burglars.

QUEBEC DECEIVED IN THE ELECTION

Mr. Meighen Paid a Tribute to His Companion Hon. Rodolph Monty.

L'EPIPHANIE, Que., Dec. 28. —(Canadian Press.) — "Quebec is quickly learning that it had been deceived in the last election and that cries raised against the Conservative party had been for purely party political advantage of their foes," said Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, addressing a public gathering here yesterday. The Opposition leader is making a tour of the various constituencies in the Laurtenians.

Mr. Meighen paid a tribute to his companion, Hon. Rodolph Monty, who had sprung to his side in 1921 and, he said, has shown such great courage, vision and capacity in championing the cause of his party in the province.

One of the interesting little touches of the day was the presentation of a medal by Mr. Meighen to the Sister Superior of the Convent and one to the director of the College. These medals will be competed for by the children at the close of the scholastic year in June.

SEATS SELL WELL FOR MONDAY'S GAME

Tickets ase selling rapidly for the big basketball game on Monday night between the Association College team from Chicago and the Intermediate Petes.

The locals are practising hard, and can be counted on to give the visitors a hard battle, even if the Chicago team is of senior calibre.

Tom Pogue, who plays forward for the visitors, left a couple of days ago for Detroit, where the visitors play their first scheduled game of this year's trip.

The picture of the visiting team shows them to be rather heavy, and their reputation which has preceded them, proves them to be fast and as the Petes this year are somewhat heavier than usual, two fairly well matched teams should face each other when the opening whistle sounds.

One disadvantage that the visiting team will face is that of a strange floor ,and also the somewhat restricted space, for the majority of the cities in which they will play have a larger basketball floor.

Peterborough fans will be well advised to secure their seats early, and also to arrive at the Y.M.C.A. early on Monday night to see the fast preliminary games that will precede the big fixture.

POLICEMAN SHOT THREE PERSONS

Counsel Claims He Was Under Hypnotic Influence — Mesmerist Says Officer Was Drunk

VIENNA, Dec. 28. — (United Press). — Blame for the death of three persons shot by a policeman of Sebenco, Jugo-Slavia, while he was under the hypnotic influence of Professor Maximilian Langsner was ed on thelatter to-day by counsel for the policeman. If placed on trial and chared with murder the officer will argue that the mesmerist was solely responsible for the deaths.

While under Langsners spell, the policeman was handed a block of wood and told "this is a revolver, shoot" instead he drew his pistol and killed three of the spectators.

Langsners defence will be that the policeman was not hypnotized at all that he was drunk and that he merely feigned being under the influence of th mesmerist.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

FIVE REASONS why I still advocate a Combination Technical and High School Extension:

(1) —BECAUSE it would relieve the present overcrowding, and provide accommodation for many years.

(2)—BECAUSE it would give a large group of Students, who under the Adolescent Act must attend full time or part time day classes, the form of education which is better fitted to their needs than the Collegiate course.

(3)—BECAUSE if the city spends any money in the near future on increased facilities for Higher Education, the needs of all classes of Adolescents should be met.

(4)—BECAUSE an extension built at the rear of the Collegiate combining the two classes of Education, Technical and High School, would cost the city less because of the large Covernment grants given to Technical Education, to build, equip and maintain, than a smaller building used exclusively by Collegiate pupils.

(5)—BECAUSE when the city is large enough to support a Technical School, no part of the proposed extension need be scrapped, as all Technical work is carried on in ordinary class rooms, specially equipped. With the special equipment removed, these class rooms would be available for Collegiate purposes.

The plan I have outlined above, is the one generally followed by the smaller cities. It appeals to me as practical, economical, and fair to all classes of Students and Ratepayers.

1—Population of Peterborough, 1922 —21,661.

2—Total Debenture Debt, 1922 — $3,765,990.

3—If you own three houses valued at $4,000 each, city receives in taxes from same approximately $255.00 per year.

4—In other words, city has equal to a mortgage of $4,000 on the three houses at almost 6½ per cent., or equal to the city owning one of these houses.

5—The higher the taxes, the more rent landlord has to charge tenant.

6—In face of the above, I cannot support the building of a Technical School at the present time.

7—I would be in favour of building a Technical School when city makes a substantial growth, both in building of houses and factories, and in population, so that extra taxes would be paid to City Treasurer to take care of same.

8—If absolutely necessary to enlarge the Collegiate Institute, I would be in favour of same but for no other purpose.

Respectfully yours,

To the Electors :

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Having been nominated as a Candidate for your Board of Education, I have decided to accept same for the following reasons:

1—That I am strongly in favour of Technical Education.

3—That I am in favour, if necessary, of making any extension to the Collegiate, contain accommodation for Technical as well as Academic Education.

MANY VISITORS TO LUXOR TOMB

Influx Expected With the Beginning of the New Year--Dismantling Continues.

LUXOR, Egypt, Dec 2.—Howard Carter and the others of his expedition hope to begin early next week the task of dismantling the sides of the great wooden canopy or outer shrine over the sarcophagus of the Pharoah, Tutenkhamen, thereby fully disclosing to view the second shrine which at present is covered with a gold-embossed linen pall, hung over a wooden rack at either end.

Mr. Carter succeeded to-day in removing the second of the three sections of which the curved roof of the canopy consists. This, like the first section, is decorated with a series of protective devices in the shape of outspread hawk's wings, executed in the boldet style.

Sir Herbert Samuel, British High Commissioner in Palestine, visited the tomb Thursday in company with his wife and daughter. With the beginning of the new year Luxor is anticipating a large influx of visitors

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

At this season of the year, owing to change in temperature, habits and diet, many people experience what is known as body itching. It is a most uncomfortable and unhealthy condition, more pronounced at retiring or arising, also when sitting near a hot stove or other heater and noticeable under certain conditions when wearing heavy clothing.

Free perspiration and a moist skin, which is characteristic of most people during warmer weather, are often changed completely. The condition of the skin, owing to lack of proper exercise and also from absence of any adequate bathing facilities undergoes a great change and becomes dry, hard and irritated. This condition produces small surface scales. When the skin is rubbed or scratched these scales, which somewhat resemble dry, scaly dandruff, fall off.

Lack of activity in many ways causes this condition. Change in diet is another cause.

Reverse the casual habits, get good exercise, proper ventilation and avoid food excesses. The skin must function in winter as well as summer to insure skin health and proper elimination. Do not neglect frequent baths. They tone the skin in a way no other agent can.

Never sleep in the undergarments you have worn during the day. Above all, do not wear stockings in bed you have had on all day. Foot poisoning results from this habit, causing scaly condition and cracks between the toes with intense itching.

For body itching as a temporary relief, try a bath of soda. One-half pound of ordinary baking soda dissolved in a tub of tepid water will do the business. Have the soda bath of not more than ten minutes' duration, dry with a soft towel. Do not rub the body, but simply pat dry.

Blizzard Heaps Snow Over Fort William.

FORT WILLIAM, Dec. 27. — A strong north-easterly gale is raging to-day, bringing with it the first blizzard of the season. Drifts are piling up all over the city. It is reported that the steamer Jenkins has passed the Soo and there is nothing out on the lake that the storm could effect.

Ship Calls For Help With Hold Leaking.

BELIEVE DOUGHTY WILL SERVE TERM.

But Friends Have Not Abandoned Appeal For His Parole.

OTTAWA, December 28. — Canadian Press. — Attempts to have John Doughty, former secretary to Ambrose Small, freed from Kingston penitentiary on parole, have not been abandoned, according to reports in circulation here.

Doughty was sentenced to six years imprisonment on May 9, 1921, when convicted of theft and receiving.

A few weeks ago officials of the Solicitor-General's department considered the claims advanced for Loughty by his friends, and it is understood that the report based upon the investigation did not favor the application for parole. There is a prevailing opinion in semi-official circles here that Doughty will be left to serve his term.

When asked about the matter last night, Hon. E. J. McMurray, Solicitor-General, declined to offer any comment.

JAP COMMUNIST SHOT AT PRINCE

Had No Accomplice — Hoped to Cause Social Revolution.

TOKIO, December 28. — The assailant of the Prince Regent was identified some hours after his arrest as Daisuke Namba, aged 27, the son of a politician of minor note. He formerly was a student at Waseda University, but was driven by force of circumstances to work as a laborer.

In this ocupation he became interested in Communism.

Namba denied that he had any accomplices and told the police his act was committed in the hope that it would lead to a social revolution.

A stream of callers began flowing to the Regent's palace as soon as word of the attack got about, all of them seeking to express their congratulations to the prince on his escape.

IMPERIAL PALACE IS DINING PLACE.

Austrian Women Work Wonders in Former Imperial Residence—Help Intellectuals.

BERLIN, Dec. 38.—(Associated Press).—Mrs. Fritz Kreisler, the American wife of the Austrian violinist, and a number of other Austrian women have worked wonders in the kitchen of the old Imperial palace overlooking the Spree in Berlin. This kitchen, where the food of the Hohenzollerns was prepared for many generations, has been converted into a cheery dining room where middle-class Berliners may buy a mid-day meal at small cost. Professors, actors, doctors, lawyers, scientists and writers now sit in the renovated room where Hohenzollerns used to give instructions about their food.

There is no air of charity about the middle-class feeding established by the Austrian women. It isn't charity. They are merely assisting Berlin intellectuals to help themselves through a hard winter. Flowers stand on the dining tables in the great castle kitchen and volunteer workers assist in serving the food and giving the air of hospitality.

The meals are served only to persons who have a ticket, and a small charge is made for these. Applicants are inspected by a committee to make sure that only congenial persons will be admitted to this meal center.

The berries failed to take on the brilliant red color of the summer fruit, but grew to normal size and were sweet and edible, although many peasants refused to taste them. Scientific farmers say the favorable, warm autumn is responsible for the phenomenon.

FRENCH DIRIGIBLE IN MEDITERRANEAN

PARIS, Dec. 28.— (Canadian Press.)— The body of Captain Du Plexis De Grenada, commander of the ill-fated French naval "dirigible Dixmude," was found by fishermen in the Mediterranean sea off the Sicilian coast, it was officially announced to-day.

The Sicilians came upon the commanders' body as it floated in the sea some six miles off the little town of Siacca, near Girgenti.

Papers found in the pockets served to identify it. Whether Captain De Grenada had leaped overboard from the Dixmude or whether he and the 49 others who sailed in the dirigible from Cuers-Pierre-Feu ten days ago were carried down in a crash, was not at first made clear.

French warships were ordered immediately to patrol the waters between Tunis and the Sicilian coast, in the fear that others of the Dixmude crew may have been drowned and their bodies carried there in the storms of the last week end.

The announcement of the finding of Captain De Grenada's body comes at a moment when false hopes had been raised by reports from Insalah, an oasis in the Sahara desert, telling of the Dixmude having been seen south of there as late as Wednesday last.

Native tribesmen were reported to have ridden 200 kilometers across the desert to report the "big bird in the sky" to the French commander at Insalah and airplanes were immediately dispatched in search of the dirigible.

The finding of Captain De Grenada's body in the Mediterranean, some 225 miles north-east of Tunis, does not mean, the Ministry of Marine pointed out, that the Dixmude herself may not have drifted 1,000 miles to the southward, but it is considered unlikely that the young commander would have deserted his airship except in her last extremity.

The Ministry pointed out that in the event of the news from Insalah being correct and the airships being adrift over the heart of the Sahara, her occupants, if any, face experiences even more terrible than those feared for them.

Savage tribes inhabit the Hoggar region one thousand miles from Algiers, whether the natives reported having seen the dirigible drifting. Colonials recall a terrible massacre at the Flatters Mission years ago.

Word From Sahara.

Out of the heart of the Sahara, word came to the French wireless station at Bizerte last night that the missing dirigible Dixmude had been seen by Chouaff Arabs drifting southward toward the Hoggar mountain fastness. Racing their tough little desert ponies 150 miles over the sands to Insalah the Tribesmen informed the French outpost there of seeing "the big bird that flies without wings" high in the morning sky last Wednesday.

Hope that the French officers and men that sailed on the Dixmude more than ten days ago might be still alive stirred military officials here to instant action. Relief expeditions were started, airplanes covered the district over which the Dixmude was flying when last seen by white men and flights planned into the Sahara.

The district towards which the Dixmude was reported to be drifting is one of the most impenetrable of the Sahara wastes.

The Tribesmen's report, which officials here agreed seemed credible, said that at 8 a.m. December 25, the airship was headed south and was about 125 miles from Insalah.

DELEGATION HAD A ROUGH VOYAGE

On Way to Interview Venizelos the Members Spent Eight Days on Storm-Lashed Mediterranean.

PARIS, Dec. 28.— (Canadian Press.)—A delegation sent here from Greece to persuade ex-Premier Venizelos to return home and help unravel Greece's political tangle, arrived this morning, after an unpleasant voyage of eight day on the storm-lashed Mediterranean. Its members were happy to discover that their mission had been accomplished, for them by telegraph while they were on their way.

M. Venizelos gave a luncheon this afternoon in thir honor and subsequently began a conference with them regarding the situation.

His mind is absolutely made up, it is said, and his departure is fixed for some time within the next forty-eight hours.

The Greek delegation, headed by Professors Karoldis and Hadjidakis of Athens University, represents all classes of people and all Greek parties. General non-partisan sentiment is the factor that persuaded him to decide to return to Greece temporarily. It is said by his friends that he will decline any post which would involve responsibility for interior politics.

WOMAN'S ATTRACTION KILLED BY HER LACK OF RETICENCE

George Ade, in one of his slangy fables, tells the story of wily father who sought to disentangle the heart-strings of his young and susceptible daughter from those of a fortune-seeking young man. Instead of using the club method and thus cementing the alliance beyond any hope of disruption, the old gentleman invited the youth to the house on every possible occasion, and treated him with the utmost hospitality and generosity. Furthermore, he induced him to retail the same old stories every time he appeared. Seeing him with such regularity having him underfoot at all-times, the maiden grew to realize his true nature and finally turned altogether from her former infatuation. The moral, George Ade put it, was to the effect that a man who liked quails might grow sick of them if he ate a quail a day for thirty days and that even the best perfume might become monotonous if sprayed constantly from an atomizer.

All of which is somewhat beside the subject, which has to do with the age-old question of women's dresses. Here we have the modern woman, who has been gradually lessening her visible poundage by the use of fewer and fewer clothes, who has become emancipated absolutely from the enveloping garments of her grandmother, who has tossed the petticoat into the discard, and has glorified the era of emancipation in dress for women, here we have Mademoiselle Fuclose mourning over her lost fascination.

Time was when women went about in heavy apparel. They wore half a dozen skirts, and these down to the little feet "that peeped in and out," they clothed their ankles in heavy cashmere hose and serviceable shoes, they covered up their arms with bell sleeves and their hands with mittens, they wore caps on their hair and shawls on their shoulders and coal-scuttle bonnets on their heads. And they built up their head dresses with mounds of false hair and skinny 'rats.'

And they grew tired. The reign of the scissors began. They cut off their hair, and wore it bobbed, they trimmed the tops off their shoes and let their ankles swell in consequence, they chopped a foot or so from their skirts and the heavy linings from their dresses and the high necks from their gowns. Then they went a little steeper and cut the sleeves off altogether and exposed the most unromantic portion of the human frame, the raw and often red and bony elbow. Then the scissors cut the backs off their dresses and widened the decolletage of the bodice just a little more. They threw away their corsets and let their waists increase in size, they dispensed with extra skirts and extra underwear and demanded the thinnest of material for their hosiery.

And now comes the deluge. According to popular report, the men for whom the most women dress are growing tired of it all. They yearn for the romance, the mystery, the reserve of the days when women encased themselves in yards of material, when an ankle was almost an unknown quantity and the fair sex masked itself in whalebone and wool and wore stays and waterfalls and chignons. Along with the clothes that covered her all over the modern woman, so they say, has discarded her power of fascination. A successful author, speaking to a New York audience the other day, came out with the assertion that young men, and particularly those who attend universities, are not so much interested in women as they were ten or twenty years ago, and he says that the modern woman, with her knickers and her backless frock, has so cheapened and exploited herself that she has lost that most valuable little weapon in all a woman's bag of tricks—the power to fascinate a man! Women, he continues, have lost the mystery of the rose-hedged Victorian days and the freedom between the sexes is resulting in the loss of zest on the part of men and forfeiture of their interest.

Along with this English author, D. H. Lawrence, a noted actor, Leo Ditrichstein, known traditionally as the eternal lover of the stage, voices his feelings along the same line. He says:

"These women we see around us today have lost their fascination, their charm, their spell. What man looking about him can deny it? With all her efforts to lure with her unconventional way of dressing and talking, modern woman fails because she reveals all, both inwardly and outwardly. Mystery, reticence, reserve, holding him with riddles that are never quite told—that is the great secret of a woman's attraction for a man. Take one of our modern young women dressed in the height of fashion today. Watch her come down the street. It is obvious, she has none of these attributes. She is corsetless, her clothes reveal all the lines of her figure; her manner of walking is free. Who wants that sort of thing. It is disgusting.

"In the olden days a woman did not have to lure. The wise woman of all ages is the one who lets man know as little about herself as possible—she charms without effort because she is to man the unread book, the play to which he cannot guess the ending!

"It is very much changed today. Take the recent instance where Mrs. Henry Ford publicly reproved those young women out in Michigan for coming into town in cut-off overalls and short stockings. That is significant. I approved of Mrs. Ford's stand. I believe we have the war to blame for all this. It was the inevitable which came out of a suspension of conventionality."

Ditrichstein's general views on the subject of woman are worth noting. He believes personality and the ability to be interesting count far more than beauty or mere outward appearance. The prettiness of a woman, of course, attracts a man at first glance, but if there is nothing else there, in the long run seeing a pretty woman day after day becomes no different than seeing a homely woman day after day. In either event you get perfectly accustomed to her looks—therefore, standing alone, either beauty or ugliness becomes nullified.

"You may soon learn to read a pretty face by heart," he said. "It is the heart, the mind, the personality of a woman that a man may never know completely. These are what interest and hold in the last analysis. Each day he may be in the company of an interesting woman and find something new and delightful in her. How different it is with the merely pretty face. A man may learn it once and forever."

RANGERS' DUTIES ARE NO SINECURE

Fire Fighting Is Small Part of Their Manifold Duties.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 28 (Associated Press).—Fire fighting and fire prevention form but a small part of a forest ranger's duties, it is pointed out at headquarters of the California district of the United States forest service.

"Time was," said a ranger who works in one of the California national parks, "when if a fellow could wrangle horses and throw a diamond hitch he had about all the necessary qualifications to hold down the job of ranger. But no more.

"Mine is an ordinary-sized forest district, about 200,000 acres of rough mountainous country, mostly timbered, but with some grazing land, mining, water power sites and quite a number of summer homes and free public camps.

"Right now the best part of my work is handling timber sales, as I've got a gang of lumbermen cutting government timber on my district. I have to know all the trees and what they're good for; how to cruise and estimate the stand; how to mark green timber for cutting under forestry rules; all about scaling cut logs. I must see that the brush is piled and burned, and that the young trees left for a future crop are not injured or destroyed.

"Next comes supervision of cattle and sheep grazing. A ranger is supposed to be able to call all the forage plants by their first names; to know the different breeds of livestock; whether a range is under or over stocked and how much salt a steer or sheep ought to get in a season."

The hard and dangerous task of fire fighting, he explained, is a constant specter before the ranger. Combatting a forest fire he termed "the meanest job in the world—bar none."

He added: "And I have to know how to build roads and trails, telephone lines, cabins, bridges, fences, corrals and lookout towers.

"Surveying with a compass is supposed to be 'pie' for a ranger, and he's got to be able to tell all about land lines, section corners, mining and homestead laws.

"On the side I examine mineral claims, take stream-flow measurements, record weather data, lay out sites for camps, post fire and distance direction signs in the woods."

The ranger has to assist him a deputy ranger and eight guards. To fight serious fires he must recruit and direct small armies of men. Incidentally, at odd moments in his cabin, he must wield a busy typewriter, turning out frequent reports for the forest service.

MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

Certain businesses show wide fluctuation in net earnings from year to year. One such business is the steel industry. Just what is the cause of this condition?

There are two main reasons why net earnings of steel companies fluctuate so much:

First: The demand for steel products varies greatly, according to business in general.

Second: This fluctuation is accentuated by the fact that fixed charges and overhead are a larger per cent of operating costs than in the average type of business. There are interest charges and depreciation on millions of dollars invested in plant and equipment, and minimum labor charges which must be paid whether business is good or not.

All this means that in poor times when earnings of all sorts of companies are smaller, the steel companies, instead of merely showing a reduced net, may be forced to spend all earnings for these fixed expenses, and show no net at all. They cannot reduce operating costs in the same proportion that business falls off.

The net earnings of a steel company may jump from 0 to 20 per cent in a year, while those of another type range only from 5 to 10 per cent.

THE WORLD UNREST THROUGHOUT 1923

Ruhr Seizure Upsets Balance

Each year in history has its own particular interest or circumstance that in the power of its impression surpasses all other occurrences in the period. This does not imply that the same circumstance is equally potent in its influence on every nation alike or that the same incident is necessarily of leading importance in every country of the world. Yet one ever stands out above all others every year in the extent of its power to mould history.

During the year which is just about to close the outstanding event was the occupation of certain German territory in the Rhineland and the Ruhr by French troops. This has probably gravely affected more people and has had a greater influence on history than any single occurrence of 1923. There are some in Canada who might regard the signing of the Halibut Treaty or the holding of the Imperial Conference as of more vital importance to the Dominion, some in the U. S. who might regard the accession of President Coolidge to power as of more import. To Japan the cataclysma earthquake was probably the outstanding event, Jugo-Slav might think the signing of the Santa Margherita Treaty as the great event of the year. Yet on the whole the occupation of the Ruhr will probably go down in history as the key-note of the year's history.

CANADA

Outside of the Federal Government domain two provincial elections were held during the year. On June 25, in Ontario, the Government of Premier E. C. Drury, leader of the United Farmers of Ontario, was defeated by the Conservatives, led by G. Howard Ferguson. The result of the polling gave 75 Conservatives, 14 Liberals, 17 United Farmers, 4 Laborites and one Indipendent. On the following day Mr. Drury resigned and Mr Ferguson formed his new Cabinet.

One month later an election was held in Prince Edward Island, when the Liberal Government, headed by Mr. H. J. Bell, was defeated by the Conservatives in almost every constituency, and in most cases by large majorities.

A referendum on the liquor question was held in two provinces. On June 23 Manitoba voted against prohibition, and in support of the principle of the Government control of liquor sales, while subsequently, on July 11, a bill to legalize the drinking of beer and light wines in the dining rooms of licensed hotels was defeated by a large majority.

A referendum was held in Alberta on November 5, when the system of Government control of liquor sales was carried by a large majority. Later in the month petitions were presented to Premier Dunning, of Saskatchewan, by the Moderation League, asking that the question of prohibition be submitted to the electorate of the province.

World Famous Visitors

Two distinguished visitors came to Canada last fall. The Prince of Wales, traveling in official incognito as the Earl of Renfrew, arrived in Quebec on the Empress of France on September 12, and proceeded to his ranch in Calgary, where he enjoyed a holiday. He returned after less than a month in Alberta, reaching Montreal on October 10, and leaving for England aboard the Empress of France on October 13.

Former Premier David Lloyd George arrived on a visit to the chief cities of Eastern Canada and the United States on Saturday evening, October 6. He addressed ten thousand people in the Mount Royal Arena on Monday, October 8, and left for Ottawa the following day. He visited Toronto, Niagara Falls, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Winnipeg, and crossed the border into the United States through Emerson by the Soo line to Minneapolis. Both in Canada and the United States he was acclaimed by enormous and enthusiastic crowds.

Two conferences attended by representatives of all units of the British Empire were held in London this year, the Imperial Conference and the Economic Conference. Premier Mackenzie King, Sir Lomer Gouin and Hon. George P. Graham represented Canada, and the sittings lasted from October 1 to November 8. The range of subjects was broad, varying from naval defence to questions of citizenship and nationality, from the signing of treaties by separate units of the Empire to the extension of the three mile limit. The Government announced that a preference tax would be placed upon certain articles with a view to stimulating production within the Empire. These included tinned salmon, dried fruits, tobacco. No preference was given to Empire-grown wheat.

A Notorious Trial

A dramatic trial that excited interest throughout Canada was the charging of Father Delorme, an ordained priest of the Roman Catholic Church, with the murder of his half-brother. At a previous trial a plea of insanity had been brought in and upheld, but the priest was adjudged capable of standing trial later, and his case was heard from June 20 to July 23. Chief Justice Lemieux, of Quebec, presided. After hearing the evidence the jury disagreed, ten standing for conviction and two for acquittal. The accused was returned to jail without bail and the case will be heard again next year.

An important case was the hearing of the Freight Rate appeal by British Columbia against the decision of the Railway Commission. The issue was a complicated one, arising out of the old Crow's Nest Pass Agreement with the C.P.R., and in effect B.C. asked that the rate for freight haul from British Columbia over the Rockies be fixed on a mileage basis and not on any other consideration.

On October 31, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick finished his term of office as Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, and Hon. L. P. Brodeur was installed in office. The prairie provinces enjoyed a banner year, the estimated yield of the chief products being: Wheat, 469,761,000 bushels; oats, 345,797,000 bushels. An important conferof provincial premiers was held in Ottawa late in November, when immigration was discussed. The Minister of Immigration announced that the restrictions on immigration would be removed and intimated that artisans would be sought for abroad and that immigration in future would not be confined to agriculturalists.

A conference of the National Bureau of Education was held in Toronto in the first days of April, at which Sir Michael Sadler, Sir Henry Newbold and General Sir Robert Baden-Powell were speakers.

The Legislature

The second session of the fourteenth Parliament of Canada, which opened on January 31 and concluded on June 30, enacted very little major legislation. Outstanding in the great mass of government and private measures which eventually received approval were acts ratifying the commercial treaties negotiated by Hon. W. S. Fielding with France and Italy; the revision of the Bank Act, and the amendments to the Bankruptcy Act devised to bring it more in line with the English system and to do away with authorized trustees. The latter change came as a result of a persistent drive by members from the province of Quebec.

Of the three the Bank Act revision takes first place in importance to the whole Dominion. It was carried through in the face of long sustained opposition, both in the Banking and Commerce Committee, and on the floor of the House. The Progressive members from the prairie provinces were the leaders in the attack demanding a system of rural credits, and long term loans.

Another measure of importance and one which created a storm in the commercial world was the legislation calculated to control lake freight rates on grain. It has since suffered from near violation.

Attacks Trust

Another legislative measure was the Act for the Investigation of Combines, Trusts, Monopolies and Mergers fathered by the Prime Minister, and once which has not yet been invoked by the public whom it was intended to assist. The Act is generally regarded as weak in structure, and one, which if challenged, would meet a similar fate as that accorded the Combines and Fair Prices Act of the Borden and Meighen administrations.

A series of amendments to the Pension Act, in providing appeal boards, swept away much discontent among ex-service men and women.

The budget and its related fiscal legislation, notably the Act amending the Special War Revenue Act of 1915, containing the sales tax provisions, was passed after long discussion.

The session was remarkable for the fact that it witnessed the first occasion on which Canada signed a treaty with a foreign power without the concurring signature of a British ambassador. The Halibut Treaty, affecting the fisheries in the North Pacific, and concluded with the United States, was signed by Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, after an exchange of telegrams between the Canadian and British Governments. The treaty, as signed, was subsequently rejected by the United States Senate and is not yet in force.

Honors To Statesman

The session saw the elevation of Rt. Hon. W. S. Fielding to the rank of Imperial privy councillor, as a reward for his 50 years of public service.

Four changes in the federal cabinet have been made since the close of the session. Hon. J. A. Robb, who was Minister of Trade and Commerce, was appointed to the portfolio of Immigration and Colonization when it was decided to exhume that branch of government activity from its living grave in the Department of the Interior. Hon. T. A. Low, who was a minister without portfolio, was appointed to Trade and Commerce succeeding Mr. Robb. Hon. E. M. Macdonald, who was acting minister of the new Department of Defense, accepted his department permanently and E. J. McMurray achieved his ambition by securing the post of solicitor general made vacant by the appointment of Hon. D. D. Mackenzie to the bench of Nova Scotia.

GREAT BRITAIN

While Bonar Law was meeting with rebuff in Paris at the Allied Conference over Reparations in the opening days of the year, Stanley Baldwin was rapidly nearing New York as head of the British debt funding Commission and he arrived on American soil on January 4. On January 31 the British Cabinet decided to accept the American terms. On February 9 the British Funding Debt Act passed the lower house of Congress and on February 16 it passed the Senate. By the terms of the agreement Britain agreed to pay the sum of $175,000,000 a year for sixty-two years. On January 15 the welcome news of the engagement of Duke of York to Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon was made and the marriage took place on April 26, while on March 28, the betrothal of Lady Mary Cambridge to the Marquis of Worcester was made public. They were married on June 14. Strikes occurred in April in the Welsh mines while on April 7 the farm laborers of Norfolk struck and the movement spread throughout the eastern counties. On April 10 the British Government was defeated on a snap division and a crisis arose which the Labor party did their best to utilize but a vote of confidence was passed two days later, the Government agreeing to investigate certain grievances of the ex-service men.

British Finances

The British budget was introduced on April 16, calling for a reduction of sixpence in the income tax, lowering of the corporation tax and a penny a pint reduction in the price of beer. The estimated surplus was 36,000,000. On May 1 the House of Commons rejected a motion against the expenditures of 11,000,000 for the base at Siggapore. On May 8, Britain sent an ultimatum to Russia protesting against certain cumulative grievances and on May 23, the Russian Soviet Government yielded to the British demands. On May 20, Andrew Bonar Law resigned his post as Prime Minister and two days later the King sent for Stanley Baldwin who formed a Government. On May 28 Premier Baldwin was elected head of the Conservative party. Reginald McKenna accepted provisionally the post of Chancellor of the Exchequer but he never took office. On June 16 the largest submarine in the world, the XI, was launched from Chatham. On June 26 the 23rd annual conference of the Labor party opened in London, the party rejecting the application of the Communists for affiliation. On June 27 four Labor M.P.'s were expelled from the Commons. On July 2 an unauthorized strike of dockers began. On August 11 Britain sent a reply to the notes of France and Belgium in which she spoke of being "reluctant to contemplate the possibility that separate action may be required on the Ruhr." On September 19 Britain took up formally with the United States the question of extending the three mile limit for the prevention of liquor smuggling. On October 1 Premier Bruce of Australia openly advocated an imperial preference before the Conference. General Smuts on October 23 urged the calling of a conference of the Allies with America to discuss Reparations but the plan after nearly succeeding fell through on Nov. 9 owing to France's refusal to take part. On October 25 Premier Baldwin speaking at Plymouth let out the first hint of the adoption of a policy of a preferential tariff. On October 30 Andrew Bonar Law died and his ashes were buried in Westminster Abbey.

A speech of Premier Baldwin made at Plymouth early in November foreshadowed the holding of an early British election. The election campaign was one of the most violent in British history and as a result of the polling the Conservatines had 263 seats, the Labor Party 186 seats and 13. The polling took place on December 6.

UNITED STATES

The debt funding negotiations, which have been dealt with above, came to an end on February 16, when the Senate ratified the agreement reached between Britain and the United States. The action of the French in occupying certain German territory in the Ruhr area led to the withdrawal of the American troops from Coblentz on January 24. Nine days before this the first wireless telephone conversation across the Atlantic between New York and New Southgate was recorded. On February 1 the U. S. Senate passed the Lenroot-Anderson bill giving credits of $1,320,000,000 to farmers. On March 25 the Fifth Pan-American Congress in which the United States has always taken a leading part was opened at Santiago Chile. On April 30 the United States Supreme Court decided that American ships may carry liquor outside the three mile limit but no ship domestic or foreign could serve or transport liquor within U. S. Territorial waters. Following the death of President Harding while on a trip to the Pacific coast, during which he created a precedent by visiting Canada while in office, Calvin Coolidge was sworn in on August 3 as the new President of the United States at Plymouth, Vt., in the homestead of his father, a notary public. On August 24 Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania was designated by President Coolidge as federal mediator to prevent if possible a strike of anthracite workers while the full scale committee of the union voted to strike. On September 8 the strike was settled on the terms proposed by Pinchot. On September 15 Governor Walton proclaimed war on the Ku Klux Klan and put the State of Oklahoma under martial law. A long dispute arose until Governor Walton was finally indicted and was removed from office after impeachment. The fifteenth annual conference of State governors assembled at Baden, Indiana on October 17. On October 22 General Leonard Wood started for Mindanao to investigate a Moro uprising there. A naval court of enquiry invewtigating the case of the piling up of seven cruisers on the rocky coast of California finds that the accident was largely due to faulty seamanship on October 23. On November 10 former President Woodrow Wilson, in an address to thousands through the radio on the eve of Armistice Day, characterizes the United States attitude as cowardly and ignoble. Nov. 12 the United States Supreme Court upheld the courts of California in holding that Japanese are ineligible to hold land. Nov. 15 William McAdoo and Hiram Johnson announce that they will be candidates for election to the presidency at the polls next November. Nov. 9, after long negotiations the American Government refused to participate in a conference with the Allies if it was limited to Germany's "present" capacity to pay, upon which France insisted.

FRANCE AND THE RUHR

The year opened with the Allied conference at Paris and a last effort of Premier Bonar Law to reach an agreement with Poincare on the total amount of the indemnity which Germany should be forced to pay. The Conference opened on January 2, and on the following day France rejected the British proposal and the conference broke down. On January 8 French troops began their march into the Ruhr Valley and on the 11th Essen was occupied. Dortmund was occupied on January 16, and the mark took a spectacular drop to 80,000 to the dollar. On Jan. 19 France took control of the coal mines, and on January 25 Thyssen and other magnates were court-martialed and fined. On February 5 the German miners struck in the occupied areas. On February 22 Doumergues was elected president of the French Senate. On March 1, French and Belgian civil administration was set up for the whole of the occupied Rhineland. On March 29, all Paris went into mourning for the funeral of the great tragic actress Sarah Bernhardt. On March 31, there was a clash at Essen and seven persons were killed.

Grip Tightens

On April 12, France protested to the United States against the concession granted by the Angora Government of valuable oil leases to Rear Admiral Chester. The grip on the Ruhr gradually tightened during the next few months, and disorders were met with drastic and severe punishment. On July 11, the French Senate ratified the Washington Naval Treaty and the associate treaties.

On September 26, President Ebert and Chancellor Stresemann of Germany formally tell France that they will abandon the policy of passive resistance and on October 9, Germany invites Belgium and France to a further discussion of conditions. On October 12, German miners sign an agreement to work in the French mines. On November 13, the French Chamber, after a four month's recess, gives a vote of confidence to Premier Poincare. On November 12, Poincare proposes a committee of experts to investigate conditions and the negotiation's continue for a conference until they break down as detailed under the heading United States. On November 18, France is stated to be ready to lend a sum of 1,500,000,000 francs (which would pay 3 per cent of her debt to Britain) to the Little Entente, large credits having already been made to Poland, Rumania and Jugo-Slavia. On December 2, it is announced, in Paris by Poincare, that there would be a slight relaxation of the grip on the Ruhr. On December 4, President M. Millerand threatened to resign if the old electoral law was reverted to by action of the Chamber.

With the coming of December Poincare showed a more conciliatory spirit. On December 6 it was announced that under certain conditions a meeting of the Powers to arrange Reparations terms could be held and the year closes with this long deferred meeting a likely possibility. On December 13 the Chamber passed a vote of confidence in the Premier.

IRELAND

Ireland began the year in a state of revolt and disturbance; she closes it with peace practically established from end to end, with her first internal loan ever-subscribed and with the Free State Government gaining ground every day.

On January 6, a train was dynamited near Dublin and there was fighting in Cork, and on the day following the town of Sligo was partially destroyed by fire. On January 13, President Cosgrave's house was fired, and on the last day of the month more outrages were reported from Dublin. On February 2, Irish rebels burned many houses belonging to Free State members. On February 11, the Free State offered amnesty to all who would lay down their arms and swear allegiance. On February 28, Free State troops made their first important capture when they took Turledge, de Valera's Chief of Staff. On April 10 Liam Lynch, another leading rebel, was captured, and on April 12, Countess Markiewiez, Count Plunkett and Mary Macswiney were captured.

Peace Offer

On April 27 de Valera makes an offer of peace on certain terms and an end to hostilities. On August 15, at Ennis, County Clare, Eamonn de Valera was captured while preparing to make an election speech. He made no resistance. Irish delegates are welcomed to the Imperial Conference of the British dominions on October 1. A domestic loan of $10,000,000 is successfully floated in Ireland. As the year closes Ireland faces an era of quiet and prosperity with greater confidence than at any time in her long history.

ITALY

Italy agreed to lend at least her moral support to the occupation of the Ruhr district by France on January 1. On February 2, Italy resumed military operations in Tripoli. On April 9, Princess Yolande was married to an Italian cavalry officer. On May 9, Pope Pius XI received the British King and Queen at the Vatican, and the British sovereigns paid a state visit to the King and Queen of Italy. On May 31, Italian Protestants in the United States asked Premier Mussolini to modify the first article of the Italian constitution which makes Roman Catholicism the state religion with merely tolerance for others. On July 15, Premier Mussolini forced his electoral reform bill through the Italian Chamber and was given a vote of confidence and an ovation 303 for, 150 against. On September 15, the Governor of Fiume resigned and Mussolini appointed General Giardino as Governor. Jugo-Slavia sent angered protests against such an appointment. On September 26 the Council of Ambassadors decided that Italy must withdraw from the Greek island of Corfu which she had occupied in defiance of the protest of the League of Nations, and at the same time Italy was awarded 50,000,000 lire because the Ambassadors said that the Greeks had not shown sufficient diligence in getting after the Janina murderers. Mussolini argued that the trouble between Greece and Italy was a matter of national honor and was no concern of the League of Nations. It was thought at one time that a new European war might arise out of these differences. On November 15, the Premier of Spain and King Alfonso make a joint visit to Premier Mussolini and King Emmanuel and to the Vatican. It is said that as the outcome of the visit there will be closer relations between these two mediterranean powers in the near future.

RUSSIA

Little news of great importance came out of Russia during the twelve months now closing. On April 3, in spite of many protests, from all parts of the civilized world, high officials of the Russian Church were executed for alleged plotting against the Soviet Government, although Archbishop Tighon is reprieved and sentenced to a long term of imprisonment. On Spril 4 the Communists in parade added the last insult to the Christian Church by burlesquing the Passover in solemn procession through the streets of Moscow. Early in May Britain delivered an ultimatuffi to Soviet Russia demanding the redress of certain grievances These are dealt with above. On May 12 Lennid Krassin delivered the first replies of Moscow, travelling between London and the Russian capital by airplane. On June 8 Kameneff, acting Premier of Soviet Russia, expressed the gratitude of that country for the American Relief Administration. During the height of the Greek-Italian trouble late in August it was reported that Soviet armies were being mobilized. The harvest was reported to be beyond the highest estimate on September 30.

TURKEY

On January 23, a proposal was submitted by the Marquis Curzon on behalf of Britain at Turkey at the Lausanne Conference that the Mosul matter be left to arbitration by the League of Nations. Turkey refused. On January 30 a convention for the exchange of prisoners of war between Turkey and Greece was signed at Lausanne. On January 31 Britain formally presented the terms of peace to Turkey. On February 4, the Lausanne Conference ended in disagreement. On April 3 Constantinople went dry. The penalty for infringement of the law being whipping. On April 10 the Angora Assembly ratified the Chester Concession. On July 9 the Angora Government authorized Ismet Pasha to sign the Lausanne Treaty and, on August 6, a Turkish American Treaty of Commerce was signed. On September 15, the City of Karagatch is turned over to the Greeks under the terms of the Lausanne Treaty, and on October 2, all Allied troops had evacuated Constantinople. On October 29 Angora declared herself a Republic with Kemal Pasha as the first president.

IN OTHER COUNTRIES

In China there was military activity early in the New Year, and on January 2nd, Dr. Sin Yat Sen had occupied Foo Chow, moving on to Canton which he entered on January 17. On February 5, at Pekin, Huang Fu succeeded Dr. Sze. On April 1, in a speech at Canton, Dr. Sun Yat sen announced that modern capital would be employed to modernize China, but before he had much time to put the proposed reforms into execution, it was reported on May 30, that Dr. Sun Yat Sen was defeated on the South China front after being deserted by General li Lieh-chun. The new victor was General Chen Chiung Ming, who drove Sun Yat sen from Canton in the summer of 1922.

On August 18, a terrific typhoon visited Hong Kong, sinking 50 vessels in the harbor, killing about 200 persons and doing much damage to property.

On September 30, China threatened to withdraw from the League of Nations. On October 4 the diplomatic body at Pekin called China to task for not suppressing banditry. On November 11, General Li reported that the country was settling down and hinted at a closer repprochement with Japaa in the near future.

IN THE BALTIC

On January 11, the Lithuanians created a diversion in the Baltic by advancing on Memel, entering the city four days later. On February 3, the Allies issued an ultimatum to Lithuania ordering them to abandon Memel but the latter defied the League of Nations and threatened to withdraw from its deliberations. In turn Lithuania was threatened wit complete isolation if she persisted in her course. The dispute between Poland and Lithuania was the subject of a conference at Helsingfors on March 3, and a protocol fixing the boundaries was signed at Paris on March 15.

Two interesting events occurred in London late in January. On January 26 Miss N. A. Tata was admitted as the first woman barrister of Indian birth into the Inns of Court. Three days later the King received the paramount chief of Swaziland.

In Mexico City riots on February 2, were put down by Yaqui soldiers. There was further rioting in Mexico in late March and early April. On September 1, the United States Government recognized the Government of General Obregon for the first time since relations were broken off in 1917, but the year ended in turmoil with bloohshed between the two factions of Obregon and Huerta, each striving to jockey for position in view of the holding of the four yearly election for the presidency next year.

SPAIN'S REVOLUTION

In Spain, there was a general strike called at Barcelona following the murder of Squ Saqui, the Radical leader, but the city was quieted. On September 1, a crisis in the political life of the country suddenly developed when the Spanish Cabinet resigned, and on September 3, a Spanish junta or military group started a revolution at Barcelona headed by General Miguel Primo Rivera. King Alfonso refused to support his Prime Minister in punishing the revolting officers, and on September 15, Rivera took office as military dictator of Spain. Later in November accompanied by the King, Rivera paid his respects to the Pope and also to Mussolini and the Italian King.

On March 26, it was announced that Bagdad was almost surrounded by floods and grave fears were expressed for the safety of the people while on March 27 Zaghlul Pasha was ordered released from Gibraltar and allowed to return to Egypt. On April 6, judges in Bulgaria condemned six members of the Cabinet that took the country into war on the side of Germany to a term of life imprisonment.

On July 4, the World Court began its first hearing of the Kiel Canal case. On August 15, the four western provinces of Korea were visited by a tidal wave and typhoon which killed 346 persons and destroyed about 25,000 houses along the Yalu river. On September 1-2, the most disastrous earthquake in modern history occurred in Japan; estimated dead 150,000 and two-thirds of the population of Tokio or 1,356,000 persons rendered homeless.

On October 22, a royalist revolution was started in Greece by the military garrisons of Corinth and Patras, but by October 23, it had been suppressed. On November, the German Crown Prince returned to Germany amid the half-hearted protests of France and England. No great political significance was attached to his return. On December 10, there was further fighting in several parts of Mexico.

FLOWERED BLOUSE

Large flowers of black velvet are appliqued to a white crepe overblouse, which makes it an ideal companion for a black velvet skirt.

FUR POCKET

NINE LIVES?

"Pongee," white Persian cat belonging to B. A. Bone, Los Angeles photographer, must have the proverbial nine lives a felines supposed to possess. Anyway, she got up and walked aawy, apparently none the wors, for her experience, after a fall from a sixth-floor window ledge She missed her step while chasing pigeons.

WOMEN WILL HAVE INNING THIS YEAR.

The Remnants You Have Accumulated Slowly and Steadily Will Stand You In Good Stead.

By MARIAN HALE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Perhaps you too are the type of woman who cannot pass by a remnant counter unless guided by a stronger will than your own.

You find yourself with a gorgeous piece of silk, not quite enough for a frock or too much for a blouse. Or with a length of metal ribbon that was too alluring to leave behind. Or with two pieces of blue satin that matched nicely until you took them into the light. And you positively suffer when some practical friend asks bluntly, "Well, what are you going to do with them?"

Be comforted. This season you may have your inning. The remnants you have accumulated slowly and perhaps stealthily will all stand you in good stead, and you may be haunting the stores for more.

For one of the outstanding features of the Palm Beach collections shown in all the smart shops now is the use of combinations of material. When you see a frock of figured silk, you notice immediately that it has panels of plain silk. Or the frock of figured crepe is inevitably coupled with a jacket or cape of plain material.

The plain silk frock returns the compliment by using a figured or striped jacket of a different texture in preference to that of the frock, and thus reciprocity becomes the order of the day.

There seems to be no frock without a cape or coatee, though these vary in size and pretentiousness. Some of the capes are the length of the gown, others scarcely arrive at the waistline and show only in the back—about the general dimension of a man's kerchief—calling for only a half portion of material.

There is every indication that the jacquette which was so popular last year will be even more so this year, and that it will continue to make a costume with the pleated skirt.

With the fancy coatee of this season one may use the pleated or plain skirt, or the fashionable tiered one. Some coats are quite long, sleeveless and unbelted. Others give a long-waited effect and some of the newest have wide sashes that give an opportunity to use another remnant.

Ruffles of figured silk or georgette are added in generous number to plain-toned frocks, and inserts of fancy material are found on every type of costume from the chambray house dress to the evening gown.

Mr. White in a brief address stated that just as soon as the uniform franchise was agreed upon by the municipalities and the railway work would be commenced on reconstruction of the local lines. 9—He will work for a Substantial Reduction in Taxes.

To The Electors

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Many supporters of my election have requested me to make a statement on the disagreement between the City Council and the Police Commission.

No one regrets more than myself the disagreement which has occurred, which I think, might have been confined to our family circles, and not broadcasted abroad, or outside. The City Council, desiring to lower the tax rate, reduced the Police Department estimate by $3,000.00, expecting that the Police Department would so adjust itself to keep within the amount allotted. This was not done, for reasons unknown to the Council. The matter of authority for expenditures has been taken to Court, and a decision will be given in due time.

I believe that the present difficulty would not have occurred had the matter beenhandled tactfully, which emphasizes the necessity of selecting a Mayor and Board of Aldermen to represent the City properly, and be able to place the City side of all arguments and contentions before any tribunal, courteously, fairly and convincingly.

This apparently, was not done. The Council followed the remaining course at once open by going to the Courts, although if the Legislature had been applied to at its last session the expense and confusion of the Court action might have been avoided.

If the decision of the Court of Appeal does not clear up the situation and matter satisfactorily to the Council, I believe that an application should be made to the Legislature at its next session.

If elected it will be plainly my duty to do for the ratepayers such things as they, on the whole, are in favor of. I now find a very strongly held view, among all classes, that the Police Force is too large, and that the Department is costing more than it should cost. This impression now with the Public should be carefully considered, and a conclusion reached, and if the claim be justified, in the light of the evidence and decision reached, then put the conclusion into effect.

In conclusion let me say that I am vitally interested in the tax rate of the City, and if elected will do everything possible for economy in all Departments, consistent with efficien-y.

Yours sincerely,

J. J. Turner

LITTLE WANT ADS.

At this time of the year, there are any number of things that are badly needed, either by the man or woman.

These things can be done without, but the Summer is going to be not ... s happy without them, and they need not cost you nearly as much as you think, if you only use the Want Ads. to get them.

So many ... lose a vast amount of pleasure simply because they have never learned the value of a simple little appeal to the Examiner Want ... Column. Don't let this bright month of June go by without satisfying little extra Summer wants through the Want Ads.

THREE PERSONALITIES IN MEGAN LLOYD GEORGE

Had Curious Theory That She Was Kate Duffy, Dorothy Smith, and Megan Lloyd George

"I DON'T think Megan Lloyd George could have been more than five or six years of age when first I met her," says T. P. O'Connor, in T. P.'s and Cassell's Weekly. But even then she was such a winsome, picturesque, quaint little creature that I have remembered her ever since, and always with affection.

Megan Lloyd George

Her father brought me down for a week-end to a house he had just taken at Brighton. The family had only just got into the house, and its chief servant at the time was a good-but untrained and futile Irish boy, who wore a red flannel, collarless shirt, with a blazing brass stud the neck. They all thought him a treasure! It was a delightful example of the simple tastes of the family and of the man who even at that time was the second figure in the empire.

In the morning there entered into my room a little being who seemed like a sprite from another world, with her chubby little face, with her soft Welsh voice. She was possessed of sparkling, quizzical, searching eyes—the eyes of her father, to whom she bore a most striking resemblance—and she handed me daintily a cup of tea.

She was then a good deal of a dream-child, for she had a curious theory about herself—namely, that she was not one, but three personalities: she was Kate Duffy, an Irish girl, and Dorothy Smith, an English girl, and finally she was Megan Lloyd George.

I entered into this mystic spirit, and asked her whether I would be able to see at tea-time—Kate Duffy and Dorothy Smith, and would Megan Lloyd George also be there?

She answered with the same seriousness, and assured me that I would see all the three young ladies at tea-time. Even then she had something of the quick repartee of her father. Once she paid him back a little loan of money he was supposed to have given her.

"Megan," said the father, "you know our Welsh proverb, 'that the two bad payers are those who pay too soon and those who pay too late'."

"Yes," replied Megan promptly, "but what about the man who pays back?"

I did not see her again till many years afterwards, when I made a speech at a Welsh dinner. She introduced herself to me. There wasn't the smallest necessity, for I recognized again her familiar appearance, and especially those bright, quizzical eyes of hers.

I was delighted the other day when I found that she had lived up to my expectations; for here is an amusing account I find from the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph in New York—my friend, Mr. Bullen:

What does Mr. Lloyd George's daughter think about? Enterprising newspaper reporters have attempted to find out.

Much amused by the blunt intruding personal questions of the typical American newspapermen, Miss Megan made ready but reticent replies, like her father, not telling more than she wanted to.

"What do you want to be?" was one question.

"I haven't decided," was the answer.

"Well, are you going to get married or go into politics? Are you in love with anybody?"

"I am not in love now," declared Miss Megan, "and I may either go into politics or get married—or both."

"Perhaps you have some other sort of career in mind—literature, the stage, the movies, or what?"

"Perhaps I have," said Miss Megan.

"Do you approve of women smoking cigarets?" "I don't know anything about it," was the reply. Then Miss Megan took a turn at questioning her interrogators. "Why do reporters ask such silly questions?" she inquired. The newspapermen were unable to make as ready a reply as she had to their queries.

You see, Megan is a very real chip of the old block, T. P. concludes.

THERE is not a particle of doubt as to what Dr. Cook discovered in Texas.—Chicago Daily News.

Woman Builds 8 Room House

HERE is Mrs. Hetty Jane Cooper who is putting the finishing touches on the verandah of the house she built himself. It is at Crescent Lawn near Washington. It has taken her four years to build. She sawed every piece of lumber, drove every nail and is proud of her job.

Unsociable Socialist is Ramsey MacDonald, Feels Deeply, but Lacks Little Human Touches

Although Kind and Pleasant to Those Who Ask Favors, He Prefers to Keep to Himself—Wanted to Be a Barrister—Has the Eloquence of Balfour, the Lucidity of Asquith, and Fervor of Lloyd George—Desires Change of Society By Legislative and Not Revolutionary Means.

"THE man who undoubtedly will one day be prime minister of England." This was the way Sir Philip Gibbs described Ramsey MacDonald last February. And now, sooner than Gibbs expected perhaps, his prophecy seems about to be fulfilled.

The young Scottish lad who 42 years ago helped keep himself alive by being a stableboy is thus scheduled to become a prime minister of England. In other words, to a large section of England the end of things seems to be not far away.

"Society," in truth, has little sympathy to hope for from Ramsey MacDonald. He grew up to manhood fighting "Society." Repeatedly, he found the path of his hopes blocked by a supercilious snub. Even when he was still quite a young child he resolved to become a barrister, but for want of what is called "interest" he had to help in stables, to water horses, to run errands. It was useless to display talents that could not be cultivated or aptitudes that could not be exploited by an employer. John Bull, in the dark years of the war, even questioned his right to bear the name of MacDonald, reproducing a birth certificate in an attempt to show that he was registered as Ramsey, an illegitimate child. It was in the little Scottish fishing village of Lossiemouth that he was born 57 years ago. Nobody's parents could have been poorer. But his mother was a cultivated woman. A legacy of ambition and pure English speech uncommon in that neighborhood, she left to her son. Among his richest memories now is his mother's love and encouragement.

Naturally, MacDonald grew to manhood with a firm conviction that society was unjust to the worker. It was in that frame of mind that he launched himself on London at twenty years of age.

His progress was repaid, for he had brains, more than Lloyd George, more than one Tory of prominence has had to admit. Even in the old days, the village dominie had quickly discovered young MacDonald's extraordinary ability and inordinate industry, and prevailed upon the lad's parents to allow him to study for the profession of teaching.

MacDonald, as his critics are fond of reminding him, has never been, in the old accepted sense of the term, a laboring man. He has never labored in the workshop or in the fields. He was a clerk in a London warehouse, studying science in his spare hours. He was a leader writer on a Liberal evening paper. He became private secretary to Mr. Thomas Lough, M.P., making a preliminary acquaintance with parliamentary affairs in this way.

There was no stopping him. He wrote and spoke on socialism in his spare time. He edited a Socialist library, contributing to it a book of his own. Twice at Southampton and Leicester, he went down to defeat, but, once again, in 1906, he raised the Socialist flag again at Leicester and led the poll.

In a sense MacDonald is a mystery. He might be called the unsociable socialist. Even as a youth he was regarded by his fellow clerks as strange and mysterious. Although he was kind and pleasant to those who asked favors of him, he preferred to keep to himself and never made efforts to make friends.

Through reams of articles on Ramsey MacDonald you can search in vain for concrete human touches. He is the public man of only one anecdote.

Mr. Ramsey MacDonald with his three daughters (left to right), Sheila, Joan and Ishbel.

"If only he had those little touches of humanism about him that have made men like Lloyd George, he would have been a truly great man," David L. Blumenfeld has said, and the single anecdote is told by him.

It was at one of the recent conferences at Downing Street when the French delegates were present. A newspaper reporter, mistaking Mr. MacDonald for M. Phillipe Berthelot, French foreign secretary, approached him and began, in passably good French, to ask him his views on the reparation question.

Ramsey MacDonald stood and gaped at him. Then he gave a shrug and a gruff: "I am not Monsieur Berthelot," and walked away.

"What an opportunity missed!" comments Blumenthal. "Cannot you imagine the fun that a Winston Churchill, or a Birkenhead, would have had with that newspaper man?"

"If there were just that human something!" more than one visitor to the gallery has said. "For all other gifts, especially of human appearance, have been lavished upon the Labor leader. "I can recall his appearance in those early days," T. P. O'Connor writes. "A tall, raw-boned young Scotchman with the high cheek bones characteristic of his race; with an immense mass of coal black hair that rose in a mountain from his head; and very fine eyes, dark enough to look almost black; and an expression also typically Scotch in its combination of shrewdness and enthusiasm. Besides he always dressed well.

That the man does feel deeply is not questioned. Almost in a night his hair turned white and deep lines came in his face. The hand of sorrow had been laid heavy upon him, for in a brief period he lost a child and a wife—a woman of angelic sweetness of character, the niece of Lord Kelvin and closely related to W. E. Gladstone on the paternal side. Early in life the terrible conditions she had witnessed in work among the poor led her to become a socialist and throw in her lot with the Independent Labor party, of which her future husband was the head. She brought him money and perfect comradeship. With his three daughters now remaining, he lives in a colorless, standardized little villa at No. 9 Howitt road, Belsize Park, Hampstead.

This outward lack of friendliness is characteristic even to-day of the man in his relations to his party. He, like Parnell, holds himself aloof from his followers, and they are afraid of him. By sheer intellect and interest he rules them, principally because Ramsey MacDonald is the Labor leader who can address the Commons with the elegance of Balfour's own phrase making, with the lucidity of Asquith, and the fervor of Lloyd George.

After all, he is not perhaps the great Bogey that some parts of England would have us believe. He believes that socialism should be a political rather than a revolutionary movement. He is for the capital levy and gradual state ownership and operation of fundamental industries. But this he makes clear is to be extremely gradual. The socialistic state, in his opinion, can best be accomplished by legislative means. Bolshevism and communism have always met with his opposition by every means. The line of demarcation between Communism and Socialism, to him, is very clear. Under Communism, according to him, the state not only owns the land and its industries but owns the people as well. They are designated for certain work and assigned certain pay, whether they will or not. But under socialism the people are free. They can select their own work. They are no more the slaves of the government than are the present civil servants of the crown.

Perhaps no one quite knows Mr. MacDonald yet. From Lossiemouth recently, by request, he wrote a reply to the question: "Where shall we turn for joy?" "A good walking stick, a pipe and any weather are enough," he said.

And there are those who would question that J. Ramsey MacDonald is not endowed with personality.

W. B. YEATS A NIGHT HAWK KEPT TORONTO HOST UP

Also Forgot His Hair Brush and Pyjamas —Room Looked Like Premier Nitti's Wrecked House

WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS, the Irish poet, who was this year awarded a Nobel prize for literature, is remembered with something almost akin to terror by a Toronto man whom he compelled to keep a very unwelcome vigil. This gentleman was his host at the time of his last visit to Toronto. He expected that after the fatigue of his lecture at Hart House the poet would be ready for slumber, but Yeats proved to be a real Dublin night-hawk. Perhaps it would be more appropriate to call him a nightingale

W. B. Yeats

Anyway, his lecture had made him thoroughly wide-awake and put him in a wonderful conversational mood. He told literary anecdotes. He chanted his own poems. He crooned Erse sagas. One o'clock struck. Two o'clock struck. Yeats grew fresher than ever, but his host was yawning, hollow-eyed, on his chair. He was not accustomed to late sessions with the muses.

The only thing that kept him awake was a terrible fear that he might fall off his chair and disgrace himself for ever. At last, about four in the morning, either the poet became exhausted or he observed his host's somnolent condition. Anyway, he called the seance off and went to his bedroom.

He must have passed an exceedingly restless night, for in the morning it looked like ex-Premier Nitti's house after the Fascisti had got through with their visit. The bedclothes were strewn everywhere in great confusion. When it was all sorted out it was found that the poet had left behind his hair brush and pajamas and a few other articles indispensable to his toilette.

The host had to send these articles by special delivery to New York, so that Yeats might present his usual immaculate appearance to his next audience. In spite of the honor of entertaining a genius, this Toronto admirer of poetry in future will prefer for domestic comfort one of our more sedate Canadian poets.

Yeats recently received the Nobel prize in person at Stockholm. But Sweden's capital is famous for its night life. It may be that his Swedish host easily beat him in an all-night contest. In Toronto at any rate the poet was an easy winner. His host remembers him not as a nightingale, but as a nighthawk and a nightmare.

Dog Incident Gives Professor Fine Quip

Occasion Was Novel — Student Was Fearful, Foolish, Then Childish in Turn

PROF. W. J. ALEXANDER of the University of Toronto is greatly beloved by his students. One day several months ago the professor was late in reaching his class-room. In the interval of waiting one of the class, a young man who had a seat near the professorial desk, placed thereon a protesting small dog which had by chance wandered into the room. When the professor arrived, a few minutes later, and beheld the canine occupant, a comical picture of uncertainty and dismay, he was not only angry, but apparently very much hurt. He demanded at once to know who had put the dog in such a place, declaring that whoever had done so was a fool. With flashing eye he asserted that never in his life—and he had been teaching thirty years—had he been so insulted.

Prof. Alexander

He ceased speaking and for a moment there was a stricken silence. Then the young man who had played the prank rose to his feet, and looking the professor fearlessly in the eye, said:

"Professor Alexander, I put that dog on your desk, but I had no thought of offering you any insult."

"Why then did you do it?" demanded the professor.

"To amuse the class," was the retort.

Prof. Alexander's stern expression relaxed somewhat as he said in tones from which the harshness seemed suddenly to have evaporated:

"I retract what I said a minute ago. It was a brave thing to confess as you have done. I see you are not a fool—just childish."

NO PRICE TOO HIGH

THE United States ambassador in London, Mr. William Collier, tells the story of an American woman over there on a visit, who saw in a west end antique shop a splendid vase priced at two thousand guineas.

Her husband, a wealthy Chicago meat packer, was an enthusiastic collector of old pottery, and she promptly cabled to him a glowing account of her find, mentioned the price, and asked him to telegraph if he were prepared to pay so much.

Back came the reply. "No price too high."

The wife thereupon hastened to the shop in jubilation and became the proud possessor of the vase. It was afterwards she learned that what her husband had telegraphed was, "No. Price too high."

There Was Sir John Waiting at the Church When Graham Borrowed His Carriage

THE Hon. George P. Graham, minister of Canals and Railways served his political apprenticeship at Queen's Park. After the defeat of the Ross government he was in the cold shades of opposition but used to find a warm welcome at Government House then presided over by Sir John Gibson.

Once Sir John went to lay a corner stone for a church and took Mr. Graham along with him. When they got there Mr. Graham suddenly thought of an afternoon call which it was important that he should make.

"Go ahead," said Sir John and take my carriage. You will be back long before the ceremony is over." In those days it must be remembered the Lieutenant Governor went abroad not in a limousine but in a coach and pair wtih footmen and outriders.

Hon. Geo. P. Graham

Away jingled George Graham in this resplendent state equipage and left Sir John to lay the corner stone. He was so pleasantly entertained at the house he visited that he forgot all about Sir John. He awoke with a start several hours later when the drawing room began to grow dark in the dusk.

In great perturbation he drove back to the church. The masons had gone. The audience had gone. There was Sir John in the shades of evening waiting at the church and sitting patiently on his own corner stone. He had not dared to walk back through the streets in his robes of office and acquaint the whole world with Mr. Graham's lese-majeste.

His aide-de-camp was speechless with indignation but Sir John took the incident in good part and uttered no word of reproach. He drove Mr. Graham back to government house and on the way did his best to console him. Once there he quickly succeeded for those were the days before prohibition.

SALT-WATER GARGLING

GOOD tales of the sea come naturally to Earl Beatty. One of his best concerns a certain officer of the king's navy who had for many years suffered from chronic sore throat.

At last, while on leave in London, he determined to see a specialist about it, and accordingly paid a visit to Harley street.

The doctor he consulted, being a great believer in simple remedies, asked him if he had ever tried salt-water gargling.

"Well," was the reply, "I've been torpedoed six times."

THE GATES OF GAZA

Scripture lessons formed an important part of the education of a little Scots lad in those times, and there was one episode in Biblical history which puzzled him considerably.

Amongst his acquaintances was a grocer named Sampson, and to him the little lad went, intent on seeking a solution of the problem that was agitating his mind.

"I remember yet," said Lord Shaw, "the tinkling of the front door bell as I stalked boldly into his shop. The customers made way for me as I advanced. I was not so high as his counter, but I put my hand up to it, interrupting his business with the demand:

"Please, Mr. Sampson, are you the gentleman who carried away the gates of Gaza on his back, and, if so, will you please tell me how you managed it?"

It is perhaps unnecessary to explain that the youthful questioner had mixed up Mr. Sampson with the Samson of mighty strength.

DESERVED TO GET IN

WITH all eyes on the general election, the following story, told by the veteran Tom Mann, will bear repeating.

It concerns a candidate for a Welsh constituency who, when addressing a meeting of the electors, sought through his speech to discover the prevailing religious tendency of the constituency.

"My great-grandfather," he said, "was an Episcopalian" (stony silence), "but my great-grandmother belonged to the Presbyterian church" (continued silence). "My grandfather was a Baptist" (more silence) "but my grandmother was a Congregationalist" (still frigid silence).

"But I had a great-aunt who was a Wesleyan Methodist" (loud applause), "and—and I have always followed my great-aunt" (loud and prolonged cheering). He got in.

Anatole France Retains An Ironical Tongue

French Bernard Shaw Offers to Swap a Seat in the Academy for One in the Chamber

ANATOLE France the French Bernard Shaw, author of "Thais" and other famous novels, still retains his wit even in his seventy-fifth year.

It is as of old a subtle wit with a skilfully hidden barb of irony, like a hook in an innocent looking trout fly.

Recently a French deputy swallowed the hook. He had published a little brochure entitled "Why Germany Should Pay" which he thought a literary masterpiece. Accordingly he went to see Anatole France, who is an Academician, to get him to propose his name for membership in the French Academy.

Anatole France

To understand the audacity and self-assurance of the deputy one must remember that these forty immortals are a very exclusive literary club and have blackballed some of the most famous names in French literature.

"Your little tract," said Anatole in his most suave manner, is assuredly a literary gem that is worth many billion marks. It certainly entitles you to the immortality of the Academy. I can arrange things for you very easily, but on one simple condition."

The delighted deputy bowed profuse thanks and asked what was the simple condition.

"I will make you an Academician," said Anatole France with great gravity, "on condition that you make me a deputy."

Every one knows how difficult it would be for H. G. Wells or Bernard Shaw to get into parliament in England. But Anatole France has declared his sympathy for Russian communism. He could get to the moon more easily than he could get into the French Chamber.

THE SIN ON HER HEAD

APPARENTLY Japanese women are just as keen on pretty things to wear as are English women. Or at all events so it seems judging from a story that was told to me by Mr Sessue Hayakawa the famous film actor.

When in Paris recently with his wife, Tsuri Aoki, the lady treated herself to a new hat—price three hundred francs.

"What!" he exclaimed, "Three hundred francs for a hat! Why, it's a sin!"

"Never mind," replied Mrs. Hayakawa, "the sin will be on my head."

Carter Cut Off Escape of Eight Tomb Robbers

Shinning Down a Rope at Midnight Into a Nestful of Cutthroats Is Awkward Pastime

MR. HOWARD CARTER, in his "Tomb of Tut-ankh-Amen" tells wonderful tales of tomb robbers, who have plied their ghastly trade from the time of the Pharaohs till to-day without much variation of method. A few years ago he had an exciting experience with these gentry himself:

It was midnight when we arrived on the scene, and the guide pointed out to me the end of a rope which dangled sheer down the face of a cliff. Listening, we could hear the robbers actually at work, so I first severed their rope, thereby cutting off their means of escape, and then, making secure a good stout rope of my own, I lowered myself down the cliff.

Howard Carter

Shinning down a rope at midnight, into a nestful of industrious tomb-robbers is a pastime which at least does not lack excitement. There were eight at work, and when I reached the bottom there was an awkward moment or two. I gave them the alternative of clearing out by means of my rope, or else of staying where they were without a rope at all, and eventually they saw reason and departed.

ANOTHER TITLED DRESSMAKER

FOR some time past callers at a certain fashionable dress shop in Bond street, London, have been puzzled over the identity of the unusually attractive assistant who sometimes attends to their wants.

Now it transpires that she is Lady Rosamond Gallwey-Robertson, eldest daughter of the Earl and Countess of Carrick.

Lady Rosamond is a skilled designer of dresses, who could compete successfully with most of the better-known dress artists of the day. She has already had business experience, for she was employed for some time in an office in Victoria street. Her liking for dress designing, however, refused to be suppressed, and at last she obtained her parents' consent to fill the post she now occupies.

If Laughter Kills

A NOVEL insurance policy has just been issued by Lloyd's, the British underwriters. It insures cinema-goers against death from excessive laughter whilst in the theatre.

Recently several persons have been so affected by the hilarious nature of highly amusing films as to need medical attendance, and in more than one case death has resulted.

The policy, which is in the sum of £500 covers a period of six months and has been taken out by the Associated First National Pictures, Limited, to cover similar occurrences in the case of their new films.

While in no case has the proprietor of a picture been held liable for any untoward result of mirth upon the audience, the present policy is said to have been taken out to reassure the public and as a step forward in making the theatre safe for hilarity!

GOLFERS, CRIPPLED AND BLIND STILL GIVE COL. PAR A BATTLE

This is a story about cripples who have mastered golf, the most elusive and exacting of all sports.

It is not a recital of deeds of miracle workers, but of men who love the game, laugh at adversity and possess the will to carry on.

Once in a while you hear some perplexed golfer lamenting his physical deficiencies, "I'm too tall, or too short or too fat!"

Your physical build means nothing approximately in golf. It would be hard to find three men whose physical characteristics are more widely different than Barnes, Sarazen and Ouimet, yet each has won a national open championship.

Would you say a man without eyes to see could play golf?

A man without arms?

A man with but one arm to swing?

So much in golf, you know depends upon the correctness of your stance, the rhythmic beauty of your swing, the smoothness of body motion.

Harris Turner of Canada is totally blind, a pathetic victim of the world war. Turner plays golf, and plays it fairly well. He uses all the clubs, and plays all the shots that the average golfer employs. His caddy aids him only in teeing the ball and giving him the proper direction to the green. Turner seldom misses a shot completely. His greatest trouble comes on the greens in sinking the ball. Here is where his strokes mount up. One of his best scores was 105 over a course of championship length.

Tom McAuliffe of Buffalo was armless, except for two stubby remnants on his shoulders. Yet McAuliffe, by holding the club between his neck and his shoulder was able to develop a satisfactory swing and so keep up his play. McAuliffe was handicapped chiefly in playing the long shots. The restricted nature of his swing made distance impossible; but he played his short approaches and chip shots about as well as the average golfer, and his putting was well up to the standard.

One-armed golfers who core low are rather numerous. One of the best one-armed golfers in the country is Louis Martucci, a New Yo ' er,whose left arm is gone. Martucci is credited with a 68 over the Van Courtland links. A 68 with one arm! What would he do with two? Following Martucci's performance it is reported three physically perfect duffers who had never been under 90, went to a surgeon's office and arranged for immediate amputations!

Ohio has a one-armed amateur, Jack Allen of Massillon, who is good enough to play in the state championship, and is always a starter. Allen is going badly when he scores above 84. Chicago has a one armed professional, Ed. Reilly, who is a match for anybody. Four years ago Reilly went aroun the Marquette Park course in 71. Oklahoma offers John Funk of El Reno, another one-armed star, with three consecutive 80's to his credit.

One-legged golfers are less common. Perhaps the best in the game is Alex. Jones, a British professional—Jones uses crutches. When he plays a shot he hands the crutches to his caddy, balances himself on one leg and swings. Jones is reputed to be a 200-yard driver and an expert with the brassie and long irons. He scores in the 70s over some of England's toughest courses.

BOWLING

BRINTON CARPET LEAGUE.

Last night at Solomons' Alleys, the Windsors took two out of three from the Carletons. Some great bowling was turned in by some of the bowlers and the score of A. Taylor partcularly stood out. He rolled a grant total of 667 for his three games, had the high single of 246, and rolled over 200 in every game, which gave him a wonderful score for his three games. Zowie! G. Anderson was next highest with 587 for his three games, and he rolled over two hunderd in two of his games. Rooney also rolled 536. The Brinton Carpet bowlers have been hanging up some nice scores lately, and have a wonderful bunch of bowlers in their league. Following are the scores:

LISBON, Dec. 28.— There is no confirmation here of the recent official statement from Madrid that Portuguese Communists were involved in a revolutionary movement, planned to start simultaneously in Portugal and Spain on December 28. Winter Sports Are Delayed By Weather.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 28.—The very mild Christmas season, which is the joy of many a householder, is rather a disappointment to the younger set, who intended to enjoy the skating which is usually to be had in the holidays. The rink cannot be put in shape for skating until there is sufficient cold weather to make a firm foundation. The curlers and hockey players are a bit disconsolate, but probably with the New Year old man winter will get a grip on the weather and the rink, which is known as Lakefield's playhouse, will resume its place as a rendezvous for young and old.

A ONE-ARMED GOLF STAR

MEYERLING

One-armed. golf. star. of .Chicago playing a tee shot

Bill Meyerling of Chicago, used to shoot in the low 70's most of the time.

Meyerling was qualified to start in all the local championships and his game, geared to its highest forms, was good enough to match many of the stars.

Meyerling went away to the front, was in the thick of the fight and came back with a limp, empty sleeve dangling from his right shoulder.

When that right arm was shot away Meyerling's hopes to attain fame as a high-ranking golfer went with it. But his love for the game did not.

Meyerling is again a conspicious figure on Chicago courses, and while he isn't the golfer he used to be, he is still a formidable entry, his scores running, usually between 100 and 105.

RITOLA LOSS TO UNITED STATES

Distance Runner's Decision to Return to Finland Leaves Gap in American Squad.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The United States lost one of her outstanding prospects for Olympic distance running laurels yesterday when Willie Ritola, United States National ten-mile and cross-country champion, announced that he would carry the colors of Finland in the 1924 international meet at Paris.

Ritola's decision to return to his native land, probably for all time, came as a surprise to athletic followers, because the Finnish-American Club star has been a resident of the United States for ten years, making his first competitive appearance here in 1918 and developing into recognition during the last two years as the most consistent distance performer.

In addition, Ritola had already taken out first citizenship papers.

Ritola plans to sail for Finland on January 4, abandoning a prospective indoor campaign in the United States this winter in order to start early training abroad.

ZACK WHEAT

Like Eddie Roush, Zack Wheat of the Brooklyn club is usually numbered among the National League holdouts when gentle spring rolls around. Although a veteran. Wheat is still one of the best outfielders in the National League. He had one of his best years last season. It is said a certain industrial club has made Wheat a fancy offer which he is seriously considering.

NEW YORK, December 28. — Johnny Dundee, new junior lightweight champion, for many reasons, is the most remarkable fighter of his day. Perhaps his record might be extended so as to make him the most extraordinary boxer of all times and his field broadened to make him the most unusual type in any field of sport.

Considering what Dundee has done in the thirteen years he has been boxing, and what he is still doing, the use of superlatives is not at all unwarranted by the facts.

As an example of preservation and patience, there is nothing to equal that of Dundee, who kept plodding on for thirteen years to win a title, the world's featherweight championship, at an age, and after a career of hardships that should have shelved him as an old man.

Since he started boxing, Dundee has seen more than fifty champions of the ring rise to the top and then fade away. Only one-third of the boxers who have made names in those thirteen years are still boxing, and Dundee is a champion, and a good one .

Dundee started boxing two years before Jim Jeffries lost his title to Jack Johnson, and since then Johnson and Willard have gone.

In the middleweight class Papke, Klaus, Chip, McCoy, O'Dowd, and Johnny Wilson have come and gone, while Dundee was boxing.

The lightweight class had Gans, Nelson, Wolgast, Ritchie, Welsh, and Leonard as champions ,and Dundee fought Ritchie Welsh, and Leonard.

In the featherweight class the picture contained Abe Attell, Johnny Kilbane, and Eugene Criqui. Dundee fought Kilbane twice and took the title away from Criqui.

Johnny Conlon, Kid Williams, Pete Herman, Joe Lynch, and Johnny Buff lost the bantamweight championship, while Dundee was moving right along.

Patsy Wallace, Abe Goldstein, Johnny Buff, Pancho Villa, and Jimmy Wilde held and lost the lightly-regarded flyweight championship during Dundee's time, and the light heavyweight championship passed from Levinsky, Carpentier, Siki, cTigue, Tunney, and Greb durduring the same time.

As in the case of Jack Britton, who, over a stretch of twenty years could not give accurate numbers on the times he had fought, Dundee has boxed more than he can figure out.

He has fought as featherweight, a lightweight and a welterweight, and in his ability to fluctuate his weight from 150 pounds to 128 pounds lies the most extraordinary feature of a most unusual record.

It is beyond explanation how Dundee can reduce from 150 pounds to the featherweight limit and retain his strength and vitality. Other boxers might do it once or twice, but they would make a habit of it at the cost of their health. Dundee has been doing it for years without any apparent ill effects.

Up until last summer Dundee had been forced to campaign as a lightweight. He had engaged in two no-decision bouts with Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion, and those two experiences caused Kilbane to admit quite frankly that he would never risk his title again with Dundee.

Dundee was then forced out of the featherweight class because he was too good for the champion—and any contenders at the weight.

Taking on all the lightweights, Dundee made a most remarkable record. He fought Benny Leonard, the champion, more than a dozen times, and Leonard never did a thing to him.

Many smart boxing men still believe that Leonard will not fight Dundee in a decision fight, and there can be found some evidence to support such a belief.

Putting on weight to suit the competition that he was facing, Dundee even went up into the welterweight class and he was almost forgotten as a featherweight until he bobbed up and challenged Kilbane for the title.

Kilbane ignored the challenge and was ruled out of his title by the New York Boxing Commission, Dundee being named as his successor.

The Kilbane-Criqui fight was then arranged, and Dundee pulled down his challenge with the understanding that the winner of the fight would sign an agreement and post a forfeit that he would be given first chance at the title.

Criqui won the fight and the title from Kilbane, and he looked like a great fighter, tall and unusually strong for a feather-weight. When the Criqui-Dundee match was made it was figured that Dundee was old and campaign worn, that he would be weakened by making the weight and that he would have a hard time beating the rugged, bomb-proof Frenchman.

The fight came off, and Dundee gave Criqui one of the worst and saddest beatings that a champion has taken in any ring.

Dundee has taken expellent care of himself, and therein lies the secret of most of his success. He knows how to take care of himself, and therein lies the secret of most of his success. He knows how to take care of himself and he has done it well.

Although he is not a youngster, Dundee is not a tottering old man, and it would seem, after a glance over the list of his rivals, that Dundee will still be a champion, or at least still be fighting when another half-dozen champions pass along.

OLYMPIC DEFEAT STRATFORD 4 TO 3

LONDON, Dec. 28.— (Canadian Press.)—Over 3,000 fans saw Canada's Olympic hockey sextette win a fast exhibition game frrom Stratford Intermediate O.H.A. champions at New London arena last night by a score of 4 to 3.

Erstwhile Granites, senior champions of Canada, outclassed the Indians in the first two periods, but as the contest wore on and the Classic city aggregation gained confidence, they did not hesitate in measuring stride for stride with their supposedly superior opponents.

The sterling efforts of the Stratford forward line, augmented by the fine work of their defence, held the Olympics in check during the whole of the last period, while "Butch" Kelterborn stood of the strenuous checking of Smith and starred throughout this frame. He stick-handled his way through the Olympics on several occasions.

AURA LEE DEFEAT ST. MARY'S TEAM

After One of Those Thrilling Battles That You Long Remember.

TORONTO, December 28. Canadian Press. — As was expected the opening game of the local junior O.H.A. season at the Arena last night between St. Mary's Junior S.P.A. winners, and Aura Lee, was a thriller and had the crowd on their toes all the time, but the result was unexpected, for Bill Marsden's lads finished in front by 4 goals to 3.

The game attracted a good crowd and both teams had lots of supporters, and both were worked up to a fever pitch in the last period when St. Mary's quickly regained two-thirds of the three goal deficit, and carried the play to the winners end of the rink, but they could not get the equalizer.

The hero of the game was Stark, in the winners' goal, as he stopped many shots from close in, and several times out guessed an opponent, who had eluded the outer defense.

Towards the end the lighter Aura Lee lads weer on te verge of collapse and they were hard pressed to stave off their opponents, but the team managed to protect their goal for the last twelve minutes.

And sprays of Druid mistletoe
From ancient rites, and thus make gay

These gleaming garlands still we twine
That link us with the pagan days—
The leaf, the berry, and the vine
That mantled many a marble shrine—

To Him who once drew mortal breath
Upon the hills of Nazareth.

GRAND MASTER PRESENT

A Presentation.

During the evening Rt. W. Bro. R. C. Blagrave, on behalf of the three lodges, presented Grand Master W. J. Drope with a handsome silver tray; and the former, in an exceedingly appropriate speech stressed the fact that Peterborough citizens have the greatest and highest regard for Most Worshipful Bro. W. J. Drope, of whom Peterborough Masons are exceedingly proud because of the distinction he has won in Grand Lodge.

The Grand Master, in reply, thanked the craft most heartily for their gift, which he characterized as a really beautiful symbol he will appreciate for three reasons. First, because it expresses goodwill; secondly, because not only himself but his wife and family can enjoy it; and, thirdly, because it is something by which he shall always remember this Twenty-Seventh spent in Peterborough, the home of his mother lodge.

King and Craft.

Rt. Wor. Bro. D. Walker made an exceedingly capable chairman of the proceedings, and proposed the toast to the King, responded to with hearty Masonic loyalty.

A Masterly Effort.

Rt. Wor. Bro. H. R. H. Kenner's proposal of the toast to the Grand Master and the Grand Lodge of Canada, in the Province of Ontario, proved a masterpiece of oratory which thrilled his audience. Speaking of the composition of Grand Lodge, he reminded the company that to-day four members from Peterborough are included in its personnel. There are, he said, 590 subordinate lodges in Ontario with a membership of 100,000 Masons; and he emphasized the query, "what a force for good that body of men could be if they are all as exemplary as they should be." He here urged the study of the principles and teachings of Blue Lodges and advised young Masons to develop skill in their craft. To sympathize with the sorrows and sins of others; learn how to make and keep friends; see to it that no voice in distress ever reaches their ears in vain, and learn how to pray, love and hope.

Turning to Grand Master W. J. Drope, Mr. Kenner reviewed his life in part as follows: Born almost three score years ago on a farm in Northumberland County, the Grand Master was educated in the public schools, finally graduating from Victoria University. He then came to Peterborough and joined the Collegiate Institute staff of teachers at a time when the Institute was presided over by the late C. Fessenden. He married here young, as all men should, was initiated into Masonry at Peterborough Lodge 39 years ago, subsequently went to the Niagara district and engaged in fruit farming and teaching at Grimsby, where he now presides over the Lake Lodge Residential School. Always an ardent Mason, Mr. Drope was elected Deputy-Grand Master three years ago at Grand Lodge in Ottawa, in competition with Ottawa candidates, and was elevated to the supreme chair when Grand Lodge assembled in Toronto. He has held that position six months now, and this is his first visit to Peterborough since assuming the Grand Master's regalia.

In well-rounded, forceful sentences Mr. Kenner here went on to eulogize Grand Master Drope as a man who, with his Lake Lodge School, has contributed to Ontario one of the finest educational institutions in the Province, where boys are turned out to realize that they are here not only to make a living, but to live a life in which service stands above self. And, continued the speaker, eleven years from now, when the Grand Master of 232 McDonnel Street has passed his entrance, I shall send him to Grand Master Drope's School, providing there is no addition to Peterborough Collegiate by that time. (Laughter).

In conclusion, Mr. Kenner characterized the Grand Master as a real man of strict integrity and of honor, one who ever holds before him masonry's grand ideals—brotherly love, relief and truth.

Best Men in Country

Replying to this toast Grand Master Drope saw before him some dozen or more masons, whom as boys he had taught in school, a sight which revised happy memories of the dear old days, when he lived in this city. Paying a glowing tribute to Bro. Kenner's oratorical skill, he said, "his remarkably eloquent address which only could be delivered by Bro. Kenner."

It is no mean honor, declared the Grand Master, to be the head of 100,000 of the best men in the country, and he asked for co-operation in the great work in which Grand Lodge is engaged.

In a humorous vein, Mr. Drope emphasized that while travelling from one end of the province to the other he had met many strange men on trains and in hotels. For instance, one stranger asserted that he was going to find coal in Ontario in six months' time, and he promised the most startling revelations ever known in this country. "But the strangest man he had yet come across was a traveller on a train, who declared he was returning from a bootleggers' convention in Belleville. (Laughter).

Speaking of Masonry in the United States the speaker said there are more of the craft in that country than in all the rest of he world together—2,700,000 members all told. But he regretted that American Masons are credited with mixing politics and religion with Masonry, and he warned Canadians against falling into that error.

Touching on the disappointment in some respects attending this reconstruction period after the war, the Grand Master counseled a striving to cultivate a spirit of unity, good will and brotherhood among all men. There has been two little effort to understand each other, he complained, whereas the exercise of common sense and co-operation in settling disputes would make the world a better place to live in. Urging inculation of brotherly love and respect for the rights of others the exemplification of good will for all classes in the community in which we reside, he opined that there can be no Bolshevism in Canada, where people are better off than in any other place in the whole world, so long as such precepts obtain. "What the world needs to-day is help, cheer, laughter and song."

Talking to the newly installed officers, the Grand Master declared that Masons are the picked men of the country, and he besought them to live up to that standard and to keep in mind that service is the keynote of Masonry. Following this train of thought and appreciating the work of the splendid choir present, he eulogized its master, Bro. John Crane, as a man who really knows what service is. In conclusion of an eloquent ad informative talk, he hoped that during 1924 his hearers would have health in their homes, friendships old and new to cheer, experience pleasure in the performance of every task, and have good luck the whole year long.

Absent Brethren

In proposing the toast to the absent brethren, Wor. Bro. R. B. Grobb, touchingly referred to those kept away through no fault of their own—by sickness or divers misfortune—and to them, he said, "our hearts go out in true Masonic sympathy." As to the great host, who have passed on before, he thought of them with reverence, and believed they are not really absent, but that such gatherings as this are dominated by their spiritual presence.

Regarding the brethren absent by wilful intent, he emphasized that "those days count most in a man's life in which he lives in close fellowship with his fellow man."

The toast to visiting brethren was fittingly proposed by Wor. Bro. A. Weddell and responded to by Bro. F. J. Sawers, of Cobourg, whose address replete with humour, found an enthusiastically responsive audience.

HEAVY FIRE LOSS LANSING, MICHIGAN

Six Storey Office Building and Theatre Destroyed

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 28.—(Canadain Press.)— The six storey Oakland building and the Regent theatre, one of Lansing's leading office and theatre buildings, were practically wiped out by fire of unknown origin this morning. One fireman was seriously injured and removed to the hospital. The loss is estimated at three hundred thousand dollars.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

One of the popular Zane Grey stories makes the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for this week end, in "The Call of the Canyon." Richard Dix, Lois Wilson and Marjorie Daw are featured in the cast, Dix playing the role of the hero, Glenn Kilbourne, a war veteran who returns from Europe determined to live the simple life in the Western States. His sweetheart, Carley Burch, (Lois Wilson) comes West to visit him and becomes disgusted with the rough life of the canyon which Glenn lives. The sheep-killing the pig-feeding, the uncouth existence in the midst of scnes of natural grandeur, repel the luxury-loving girl, and she returns home. There she meets a former war 'buddy' of Kilbourne, who tells her the story of the girl who forgot him for a richer man, and she realizes that she has been a quitter. She goes back once more, in time to see Glenn, who has given her up altogether, about to be married to Flo Hutter (Marjorie Daw) a Western girl who has fallen in love with him. As in the picture which featured Mabel Normand at the Capitol in the earlier part of the week, this production contains a sensational wedding scene, with the bride relinquishing the bridegroom at the very altar, so that everything ends happily for the principals.

A feature of the programme is the Larry Semon comedy, one of the best that the popular comedian has made in some time. It is a scream from start to finish and includes some excellent work in trick photography, in the scenes where Larry is pursued by lightning that dogs his footsteps with uncanny speed.

ST. ELMO GREATEST LOVE STORY IN CENTURY

Every man has his vulnerable spot—his Achilles heel.

St. Elmo, the Augusta Evans hero of the popular novel of that name, produced by William Fox and coming to the Capitol Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, with John Gilbert in the title role, was no exception.

St. Elmo considered his life wrecked because of the perfidy of the woman he had loved. His temper, formerly the neuter trait in his character, became the flaming, ascendant force. He brooked no argument with his orders. He distrusted every woman. He despised all his old friends. His life was an inferno of his own diabolic creation which, in turn, disturbed the lives of those around him.

Yet St. Elmo, while laughing at those who hated him, shrank from the idea of being pitied. He turned his eyes away from sincerity and faithfulness. But all these characteristics he found in Edna Earle (played by Bessie Love), the wistful girl from the country who lived with his mother. Unconscious of the power she wielded over him, Edna Earl lived her life according to her uprighteous code. And in the end .....The story is worked out with dramatic intensity.

AT THE ROYAL.

HOOT GIBSON GOES OVER IN "THRILL CHASER" AT THE ROYAL

Hoot Gibson gallops and spears his away through seven reels of rollicking comedy and dashing melodrama at the Royal Theatre this week in his latest feature, "The Thrill Chaser," which opened last night.

The picture might also be labeled, "The Gloom Chaser," for its exceptionally refreshing; the kind of a picture that leaves one pleased—pleased with the star and director and company concerned in its making, and pleased with himself for going to the show. Part of the picture is very funny and some of its titles are immense.

The picture doesn't take itself seriously and it is to be presumed that the public isn't to take it seriously, either. It certainly is acceptable entertainment, whatever the object of its creation.

Gibson is introduced in the cowboy garb which is so much a part of him and his screen career. But he forsakes the regalia of cattleland early in the play for the limited dress of a Roman guard. In other words, the cowboy leaves the wide open spaces of his native haunts for the motion picture manufacturing plants of Hollywood. He trails his saddle up to the casting office at Universal City and casually asks for a job at $3000 a week. He is given a job as an extra at $3.00 a day. Hoot accepts the job, but says that he won't rescue any maidens on horseback or do any thrill stuff around trains for less than a thousand weekly.

From this point, for several reels the scenes shift rapidly to different points around the big studio lot. Hoot, as a Roman guard in a Hobart Henley production of "The Last Days of Pompeii," starring Reginald Denny and Laura La Plante, wrecks everything.

In the ensuing chase he breaks in an a set where King Baggot is directing Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry in a melodramatic something or other and again incurs terrible directorial wrath.

These studio shots are exceptionally mirthful.

The action changes from farce comedy to comedy-drama in the latter half of the picture. Here the cow boy extra deserts his vocation and volunteers to "double" for an Arabian prince in a desert war. The locale shifts from Universal City to Arabia and a war is staged. The cowboy falls in love with the daughter of a Sheik, a situation not listed in his contract, but he wins the girl in spite of that.

Gibson does some excellent acting in the featured role and Billie Dove is very beautiful and capable in the role of the Arabian princess.

AT THE GRAND.

MISS MARGERY WILSON.

The Grand is offering its patrons an unusual attraction for the balance of the week in the appearance both on the screen and in person of Miss Margery Wilson, well known film star, who has been seen here in the picture "Intolerance," and in films with Douglas Fairbanks, and other celebrities. Miss Wilson is seen on the screen in "Insinuation," a picture for which she is almost entirely responsible, inasmuch as she wrote the scenario, directed the production, and stars in the acting. It is an appealing little drama, with a New England village as a background, and a set of characters skilfully etched and convincing in their trueness to life. Many of the scenes are taken in midwinter, and the protography of the snow pictures is remarkably good, while Miss Wilson's finished acting is well supported by an adequate cast, with special honours going to the little four-year-old girl discovered by Miss Wilson in the village where the picture was "shot." "Insinuation" is an interesting, well connected and entertaining picture, and even without the personal appearance of the star would be well worth a visit to the Grand.

Miss Wilson, who was introduced by City Solicitor Jos. Wearing, addressed the audience at the conclusion of the picture, There was nothing formal in her speech, merely a delightful chat, in which she talked most entertainingly about the moving picture industry and people whose names are familiar to motion picture patrons. She said that Jackie Coogan had no idea of his real value and saved his coppers and his pickels just like any other small boy; that Lilian Gish was coming into her own as one of the greatest film actresses, because she was natural in her wrok, that D. W. Griffith was a most delightful personality, who had poetry and knowledge of art at his finger tips, that Wally Reid had been loved by everybody and none of his friends could understand the dreadful thing that had happened to him; and that Doug. Fairbanks and Mary Pickford had nothing to do with breaking up each other's homes.

Miss Wilson has a most pleasing stage presence, and her delightful manner of chatting breezily on interesting topics, made her adress most enjoyable.

She will be seen at the Grand again to-night and to-morrow.

COCONADA, British India, Dec. 28. — If Mahatma Gandhi is not released from prison within a year to receive the charter of Swaraj or the home rule party, the natives of India should without hesitation unfurl the flag of the India Republic, said the non-cooperationist leader Mohamet Ali in opening the 38th Indian National Congres here yesterday.

NO NEWSPAPER TRUST EXISTS IN BRITAIN

NEW YORK, December 28. Canadian Press. — No newspaper trust exist in Britain, Lord Beaverbrook, the famous British publisher visiting here, said in an interview yesterday.

"Lord Rothermore and I cannot be compard. He owns many more papers than I do. It is not true that our newspapers have acted as a unit in supporting the same men in politics. I was unswerving in my support of Bonar Law. Rothermore opposed him. Our only point of agreement was that we recognized that Premier Baldwin's decision to hold the recent election was a calamity."

FRENCH SEARCH FOR SURVIVORS OF DIRIGIBLE

PARIS REGARDS "DIXMUDE" LOST HOPE FOR CREW

Finding of Commander's Body in Fishermen's Nets Prepares the Ministry of Marine For Disaster — Mystery Intensified.

EFFORTS PRESSED.

PARIS, December 29.—"The Dixmude is lost beyond return, but we have not yet given up hope of finding some of the survivors," said an official spokesman for the French Ministry of Marine, a high ranking officer, last evening.

"This department will make every effort to search every nook and corner of the North African wilds, and to inspect every mile of water between Sicily and the Gulf of Gabes, before all hope is abandoned."

Further details have not reached official circles in Paris other than contained in a brief telegram telling of the discovery by fishermen off Sciacca, Sicily, of the body of Lieut. Du Plessis De Grenadan, commander of the missing dirigible. The Ministry of Marine however is confident that with the arrival at Sciacca of the French Naval Attache from Rome, the mystery will be at least partially solved.

The officials are convinced that unless the commander was killed in a sudden accident before striking the water he wil have about his person the log of the Dixmude, or at least written notes which explain the lack of advices from the craft since it was last heard from just a week ago when a radio message gave its position as 100 kilometers (62 miles) southeast of Touggourt, in Algeria.

LACK OF WORK NOT CAUSE OF THE TROUBLES

Old Country Harvesters Could Have Been Provided With Work But They Sought Town Life.

LONDON, December 29 (Canadian Press Cable). — The Canadian official press bureau has sent the London Star a reply to the article which recently appeared in the Star under the heading, "Canada No Place for Emigrants."

The reply points out that actual unemployment in the whole Dominion a month ago, according to official figures, totalled a little over 8,000. These unemployed men were all concentrated in the towns and the bureau says the unemployment was due, not to lack of work, but to craving for the amenities of town life.

The reply points out that when the Immigration Department in October last made an organised effort to provide work for British harvesters who wished to remain in the Dominion, the number of openings available exceeded the number aof men by over 2,000.

It is also pointed out that out of 11,871 harvesters only 871 returned to Great Britain.

The Ontario Minister of Agriculture, says the Bureau's reply, recently reported 4,000 winter jobs on the land available.

Finally the Bureau cautions the Star in regard to the reliability of letters received in England. It says: "Individuals nursing grievances, real or imaginary, are apt to give too ready credence to current gossip, and report it as fact," and that there are parties in the Dominion who are interested in opposing immigration.

The Star retorts that ths does not answer the statement of the Vancouver newspaper which it quoted on 24th December, and adds that labour conditions in Ontario have no hearing upon the question of the conditions in British Columba.

On 24th December the Star published an article dealing with labour conditions in Canada, basing its views on a letter received from a Vancouver reader, who enclosed a clipping from a Vancouver paper of 2nd December, stating that unemployed were flocking to Vancouver. The letter writer asked the Star to tell its readers that "there is positively no work for them in any Canadian city."

RESCUERS WERE BURNED IN SAVING BABY SISTER

TORONTO, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press.)—In saving their baby sister from serious injury, when a stove overturned in the dining room of their home here last night, Margaret Lowe, aged 21, and her brother, Raymond, aged 19, were badly burned.

"Man From Ape--Ape From Molecule, Probably"

GAP IN THEORY OF EVOLUTION IS EMPHASIZED

From Lowest Form of Man to Highest Form of Ape Too Great to Be Passed By Mutation, Says Anthropologist.

SCIENTISTS MEET.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 29.—Man, although the product of evolution, did not descend directly from the ape of to-day, and had his origin in Europe 400,000 years ago, instead of Asia as generally is presumed, Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, of the National Museum, Washington, D. C., and a leading anthropologist, declared before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, in convention here yesterday. The relationship of the existant ape to man probably is that of a "cousin," Dr. Hrdlicka said, the two having sprung from branches of the same family hundreds of thousands of years ago.

"If we went far enough back, however, both probably would be found to have had their origin in the state of a simple, double molecule," he added.

The development of the human race, he pictured as similar to that of a tree, all of which is the product of a central trunk. Man, he said, might be compared to the top which had grown and developed to the supreme point, while all the branches and offshoots could be considered as the lower animals—all originating from a common source but developing along different lines.

Period of Transition.

While some sort of anthropoid or man-like ape probably was the precursor of the present human race, Dr. Hrdlicka said, there must have been a transition period during which man existed in various grades down to the animal state.

"The distance between the lowest form of man and the highest form of ape, however, is too great even to be passed by mutation," he declared.

Three trips to Europe during which he studied the results of excavations made in central European countries have convinced him, said Dr. Hrdlicka, that that district, and not Asia or Africa, was "the cradle of humanity."

Indisputable traces of men who existed almost at the beginning of the "ice" period of 400,000 to 500,000 years ago, have been found in various places in Europe, he declared, "and even these are not the first traces of the existence of the human race there. Stone implements of a more primitive type than those used by the people and which apparently were the tools of men ages before also have been discovered."

Discovery of the "Piltdown Jaw," apparently a part of a primitive man, in England, also indicates that humans existed there in some form during the early periods of history, he said.

Evolution Attacked.

Declaring that the last several years have witnessed a retrograde movement against these branchos of science which deal with human evolution — "as if it were a horrid something of which we should be ashamed." Dr. Hrdlicka said that critics of the theory could "find a wealth of evidence to prove the truth of evolution and the beauty and complexity of the development of man," if they would devote a half

FURTHER SALES TAX EXEMPTIONS

STATEMENT IN FULL.

OTTAWA, December 29 (Canadian Press). — Important additions to the list of goods exempt under the Sales Tax were announced by the Government last night.

Included in the list are usual coverings for tax-exempt products. This will benefit the fishing industry of the country. Had the regulations gone into effect in their original form the shippers of fish would have been compelled to pay an impost on wooden containers in which their product was packed for export. This exemption is also considered of great importance to the cheese and butter industry.

A 50 per cent. reduction of the tax applies to newsprint paper, under certain conditions, the effect of which is to leave that industry practically as it was under the old Act.

Collections of old coins, stamps, medals and trophies are added to the exempted list. This step, it is explained, was taken because the operation of the tax would not have produced sufficient revenue to justify the nuisance it would have caused collectors.

Other articles mentioned include certain syrups, confectionery, and woollen rolls.

The Order-in-Council providing for the changes becomes effective upon the same day as the new Tax Act, 1st January. The text of the statement issued by the Government follows:

1—Usual coverings for goods not subject to the consumption or sales tax. The principal goods covered by this item would be coverings for flour, sugar, cheese, butter, lard, oatmeal, cornmeal, fruit fish and condensed milk.

2—The materials for the manufacture of usual coverings. This would also apply to the same products as the usual coverings referred to in Clause 1.

3—Woollen rolls or wool yarn milled by a producer of wool from such wool supplied by him for his own use.

4—Articles enumerated in Customs Tariff item 692, namely: Coins, cabinets of; collections of medals and collections of postage stamps; trophies and prizes received and accepted as honorary distinction or won in bona-fide competition.

5—Goods enumerated in Customs Tariff item 139, namely: Glucose or grape sugar, glucose syrup and corn syrup or any syrups containing an admixture thereof. Corn syrups and other syrups closely resembling syrups and molasses now exempt from the sales tax puts the producers of syrup at a serious disadvantage with the producer or importer of other syrups and molasses.

6—Bakers' cake and pies not to include biscuits.

The rate of the consumption or sales tax on printing paper for use exclusively in producing newspapers, quarterly, monthly, and semi-monthly magazines, weekly literary papers unbound, hymn books, religious tracts, as, Sunday School lesson pictures, is to be reduced by 50 per cent. on the amount of said consumption or sales tax.

NEWSPRINT AND WOOLLEN ROLLS ON LATEST LIST

The Fishing, Cheese and Dairy Industries Are Benefitted — Syrups, Cakes and Pies.

Workmen Died in Each Other's Arms

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press)—Workmen discovered the bodies of John A. Metzger, 50, and Henry J. Erb, 54, locked together in each other's arms here late yesterday in the smouldering ruins of W. J. Hughes and Sons Company lumber plant that was destroyed by fire Thursday at an estimated loss of $425,000. The bodies were found near a door and it was thought the two men had crashed against the door together in an attempt to force it open and flee from the flames.

POINCARE FELT SHARP CENSURE

Anxiety Over Results of Ruhr Occupation Indicated—Value of Franc Hits New Low Level.

PARIS, Dec. 28.—Premier Poincare last evening read in the Chamber of Deputies a decree adjourning the parliamentary session. Both houses will reconvene January 8.

Previously the Premier had listened to caustic criticisms of his foreign policy from Deputy Paul Reynuad and Edouard Herriot, the leader of the Radicals. He interrupted the speakers several times to deny assertions, but instead of making a detailed answer and demanding a vote of confidence, as was anticipated, he closed the debate by adjourning the session.

M. Reynaud laid stress on France's financial difficulties and the need of British support. M. Herriot said the failure to obtain results from the occupation of the Ruhr, "will be a disaster and a mortal blow to our finances."

Franc at Five Cents.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The American value of the French franc yesterday broke below 5 cents, reaching the lowest price on record. An especially significant factor in the continued decline in francs is the growing realization among international bankers that a good deal of the selling recently has been done by the French themselves. A wave of pessimism has spread over France and much criticism is heard of the continued rise in the cost of living there. French Government securities have suffered from the liquidation by French investors and yesterday the 3 per cent. rentes sold at 52. The volume of selling on the Paris Bourse is extremely heavy.

A policy of inflation is under serious consideration in France, although the Government remains opposed to any such remedy of the present difficulties. Notwithstanding this opposition, however, the Government has been forced to sanction an additional expenditure of 500,000 francs in 1924 for increased military pensions and outlays for State employes, although it has rejected demands made by the latter for bonuses aggregating 1,250,000,000 francs.

New taxation is impossible now owing to the proximity of elections. It is almost certain thereafter, according to political observers.

PAYS BROADWAY FIDDLER AFTER YOUTHS' DANCE

Young Porto Rican's Reckless Career Amid the Bright Lights Ends With Three Years In Prison.

DEFRAUDED PUBLIC.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—"He who dances must pay the fiddler," the old adage runs—and Albert E. Guimares, who danced up and down Broadway for two years, danced on the heart of the murdered cloak model, Dorothy King, and danced through uncounted thousands of easy money, began to pay yesterday.

He was taken from the Tombs and started for Atlanta with his partner, Henry W. Fields, to serve the three-year sentence meted out to them for defrauding the public through the mail.

With the Port Rican was his bride, Betty, and Mrs. Fields, wife of the other convict. The women will accompany the pair as far as Washington, then will return—to wait.

It took the fiddler a long time to collect from Guimares. Twice the fiddler presented a bill for the dance and twice the dancer bluffed him off. He never guessed of course, that this fiddler was Fate.

Shared His Apartment.

Guimares did not kill Dot King the authorities are agreed, but they are also agreed that he shared an apartment with her, that he permitted her to lavish gifts from other men on him—that she loved him. They had danced together, this reckless young couple, unaware that it was a danse macabre, the dance of despair and death, but confident with the confidence of youth that the music would go on, forever for them.

A hand reached out of nowhere one night to grip the beautiful white throat of the model and it choked the breath from her body. Whose hand it was remains as deep a mystery today.

There are those who think they saw the finger marks of Fate the Fiddler on the girl's throat then, as if she had also too often refused to pay. But immediately the police turned to Guimares, her dancing partner of the splendid idle Forties. He scorned the suggestion. He defied the prosecutors to connect him with the killing. He offered explanations and this aplenty and they turned him loose. He was paying no fiddlers then.

Lived Without Fear.

For a while he lived without fear; and then a policeman gathered him in again on a charge of illegally owning a pistol. The charge was absurb, Guimares said, and laughed it off. The courts agreed with him, and he was discharged.

Fate the Fiddler was still unsatisfied, but Guimares began to dance again, and this time he danced with "Betty," danced with her and into her heart, and they were married.

It just happened—as the other incidents had just happened—that the post office inspectors checked up Guimares' activities in the brokerage business last month. They found he was stealing money of his customers and persuading them to send more that he might spend it among the dancers of Broadway. They indicted and arrested him, tearing him from the arms of his bride and flinging him into jail, with three of his partners.

He blamed the newspapers, who had told of his connection with the murdered girl; he blamed the prosecution—he blamed everybody he thought of, but he never thought of the Fiddler, who last night, as the broken young broker started South, checked off as paid another account on his ledger.

Pouring Oil From Lamp to Heater Burns Block.

SASKATOON, Sask., Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press)—The third disastrous face reported from Spalding, Sask., east of here, within a year, demolished the hotel and North Star Lumber Company's office and warehouse yesterday morning.

The fire started when J. Bullock owner of the hotel, poured coal oil from a lamp into a heater. The lamp exploded, and the walls and ceiling of the room were instantly a mass of flames. Bullock saved his wife and child and a few bits of clothing. The building was valued at $4,000 and $2,000 insurance was carried.

Moscow Deports Many Prisoners

MOSCOW, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press)— Christmas Eve saw another deportation of a large group of "undesirables" from Moscow. Their families and friends gathered at the stations to see the prisoners off, but were kept back by the guards and only permitted to wave their handkerchiefs in farewell and the prisoners, behind the iron bars of the prison cars were unable to see their relatives.

To refute rumors that the mass arrests marked liquidation of the new economic policy of the Soviets, an official statement issued by Dzerjinsky, head of the political police, declares that nearly 1,000 arrests and deportations were made only in the cases of people accused of using the new economic policy for their own ends. The statement says the Government measures will not affect people paying their taxes and carrying on legal trade, thus assuring the stability of the new policy.

BEGS FOR FOOD BUYING COPPER

Germany Has Spent Enormous Sums the French Allege, Opposing Food Credits in America.

PARIS, Dec. 29.— The French Government is opposed to Germany's proposal to obtain food credits in the United States, it is learned, because he is satisfied that Germany does not lack food.

The Government, however, probably will delay taking final action until a report on food conditions in Germany is made to the Reparation Commission on Guarantees.

The Allied Governments meanwhile are changing views regarding Germany's demand for priority for these projected food credits. The French opposition is due not only to the conviction that food is not lacking in the Reich, but because the French say they know that during the past few months Germany has spent enormous sums for copper, buying beyond all her ordinary industrial requirements. The question is raised as to what use this material is to be put.

Spanish Communists Plot With Portuguese.

LISBON, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press)—The Minister of the Interior said yesterday he had informed the Spanish authorities of the discovery of certain conspiracies between Portuguese and Spanish Communists, but he had no fear of the possiblity of an uprising in this country, where the subversive elements are neither strong nor united.

Two leading Portuguese agitators are understood to have succeeded in passing the frontiers with members of a football team going to Spain, by means of false documents, and a strict inquiry is being made into the circumstances.

Restoration of Racing Proposed By Rickard.

TRENTON, N.J., Dec. 28.—Governor Silzer to-day admitted receipt of a proposal from Tex Rickard for restoration of thoroughbred racing in New Jersey with pari-mutual betting but indicated that he was not giving it serious consideration.

At the Governor's office it was said the proposal, calling for erection of two racing plants, one near New York, and the other in proximity to Atlantic City, had been sent to Governor Silzer some time ago and acknowledged with the notation that "the Governor had expressed no opinion on the question."

Governor Silzer, who declined to make public the details of Rickard's plan, also referred to the State Constitution's ban against betting as a barrier to the scheme.

MILK FED HOUNDS FOR SALE PRODUCE MARKET

Buyers Exhibited a Finicky Trend This Morning—Prodnce Scarce on Open Market.

Prices for fowl were higher on the farmers' market this morning. One woman selling fat chickens asked 35 cents a pound, but the general price was 28 or 30 cents, with the quotations petering down to 24 cents, in one instance .Turkeys were firm at 35, with a few at 30 cents a pound. Geese were up also, asking 28 and 30 cents a pound, and a few lone ducks were 30 cents a pound. Cream was 30 cents a pint, butter from 4 0to 43 cents a pound, and eggs ranged in price from 45 cents a dozen to 50 cents for pullets and 60 cents for "strictly fresh." One lady ,eyeing her stock of noble birds with a disdainful look, declared that she had turned against fowl altogether, "what with the picking and cleaning and seeing them around so much."

Supplies and buyers alike were not as plentiful as on last week's Christmas market, and the buyers exhibited a finicky trend this morning. Much smelling and tasting of butter and sundry poking of breastbones and pinching of fat flesh went on, with rather languid buying.

On the open market, produce was scarce. The gentleman with the apple supply was cheerfully sampling some of his own wares, and there was a crowd about the two little tan brown and white puppies that could be purchased for a dollar apiece. "Collie and hound" was the answer to enquiries regarding breed of the odd-looking, jolly little pair, "milkfed, that's what makes them so good natured. If you give them meat they get cross."

Baby beef was 10 and 12 cents a pound ,pork 14 and 16, and 15 and 17 ,and lamb 20 and 23 cents. A solitary Barred Rock in an open crate was $1.50 and a group of little pigs were $4 apiece. A few bags of potatoes were in evidence at $1.50. The auctioneers were busy with numerous articles. One sold a lot of fowl, mostly Plymouth Rocks, at 65 cents each. Some little boys were entertaining themselves with the unintelligible records ground out by an ancient gramaphone.

Hay on the market this morning was $14, and good-looking, stovelength wood could be bought for ten, eleven and twelve dollars a load.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press)— The 1923 Board of Education at its final meeting yesterday took first steps toward reducing the number of members with a view to adopting a commission form of administration. A resolution was adopted to be forwarded to the Urban School Trustees' Association asking that the legislature make provision for the reduction of municipal school boards to 5 to 7 members.

COURT CHEMONG HAD A MEETING

Social Evening and a Christmas Tree Provided for Youngsters.

The monthly meeting of Court Chemong 530, I.O.F., was held on Thursday evening in the W. O. W. hall. Bro. E. C Styles, Chief Ranger, having put the business quickly through, the meeting took the form of a social evening. There was a good attendance of members and their friends, including about 35 children of the members, as a feature of the entertainment was a Christmas tree, prepared especially for the juniors.

Bro. J. W. Buyers, recording secretary, acted as chairman for a musical programme. Vocal solos were given by Mrs .B. Scholey and Mr. T. Chapman, a reading by Bro. W. T. Linn, and a piano solo by Master Harold Sowden. All the numbers were well received and applauded, and all joined heartily in the community singing which followed. Companion Mrs. Bradshaw presided very acceptably at the piano.

The treasurer, Bro. W .Madill, addressed the children briefly, alluding to their influence as stars brightening various homes. He then distributed fruit and candy to the children from a decorated tree, followed later by refreshments, abundant and excellent, prepared and served by the ladies. The committee in charge was composed of Companions Mrs. Millard, Mrs. Bradshaw, Mrs. Brady, Mrs. Davis, Miss Jacobs, and Bros. Styles, Cooper, Bradshaw, Buyers and Madill.

JUDGMENT FOR MISS MOFFATT

Case Concerns Will of North Monaghan Farmer Who Required a Lot of Attention.

The following judgments have been given by His Honor Judge Huycke in actions brought against the estate of the late George Lockie, who before his death was probably the oldest resident of North Monaghan:

In the Surrogate Court of the County of Peterboro, in the matter of the estate of George Lockie, deceased.

Elizabeth Moffatt, plaintiff, and Jos. Madill and Herbert Cunningham, executors of the last will and testament of George Lockie, deceased, defendants.

Mr. Huycke for the plaintiff. Mr. Wearing for the defendants.

This is an action to recover payment for services rendered.

In April, 1910, the plaintiff went to live with the deceased Lockie, as his housekeeper. He was then an old man, and she stayed with him in this capacity until August, 1923, when he died at the very advanced age of ninety-five years.

No specific bargain seems to have been made as to what compensation she was to receive. The parties were very distantly related, but not so as to bring into effect the implication that the services were rendered gratuitously. There was a specific arrangement that she was to be paid. A short time after she went there he gave her a cheque for $1,000, which she was not to use and did not use. His instructions were that it was to be used in case of his death, apparently not knowing that his death would cancel the cheque. He also made provision for her in various wills that he made, and some two or three years ago paid her $300 on account. This is the only payment that was made, except that she bought and raised some fowl, which were kept on Lockie's farm — he provided the food and the two of them divided the proceeds of the chicken business. It is not shown what this amounted to, probably not very much.

Mr. Lockie, apparently a very estimable gentleman, did naturally become feeble during the later years of his life and increasingly unable to perform the work of the farm or even to look afted it. He sometimes had help on the farm, and sometimes not. The result was that Miss Moffatt, in addition to being housekeeper and cook, became chief assistant in outside work on the farm as well—she plowed, harrowed, helping in the harvest, mowing away hay and grain, drawing it in, milking the cows, even cleaning stables, and much other work which no woman should be expected to do, and which she doubtless would not have had to do but for the failing health and strength of her employer. In addition to that, during the later years of his life, he became increasingly weak and dependent upon her for personal services. The result was that, as some of the witnesses stated, in the early years of her employment there, she was both housekeeper and hired man—in the later years she was housekeeper and practical nurse, with some of the duties of hired man thrown in as well.

During the last year of his life he was very ill, requiring constant attention and the personal and intimate services such as would be required by a person of his age and condition, and to be performed usually only by a professional nurse. Some of these services were undoubtedly unpleasant. The plaintiff seems to have performed her duties well, and much more than her duties. There is no doubt that Mr. Lockie realized this, but perhaps did not appraise her services at their proper value. In his last will he left her $2,500 and left her various other devises and bequests and made her residuady legatee as well. What this residue may amount to is not definitely stated now, but from papers filed I would judge it to be little or nothing. In any case that is a matter of administration and not for me to consider now.

The plaintiff and her counsel both admit that the legacy should go as compensation in part for services rendered, also crediting the $300 paid. If such admission were not made I would have to consider whether or not Miss Moffatt was not entitled to the compensation and this specific legacy in addition. Fortunately I do not have to consider that legal problem. The $2,500 legacy and $300 payment must be allowed as part payment for such services. The only question that I have to determine is—how much were the services worth?

The plaintiff claims $2,000 still owing over and above the sums mentioned. I think her claim is somewhat extravagant, although I am sure the services rendered were most valuable and very carefully and conscientiously rendered.

I allow her at the rate of $240 a year from April, 1910, to 1920—

10 Years at $240	$2,400.00
To April, 1922, 2 years at $300	600.00
To April, 1923, one year	450.00
And to August, 1923, the date of the death	300.00
	$3,750.00

From this sum I deduct the amount of the legacy $2,500 and $300 cash and for a cow bequeathed to her, say $50, total payments $2,850.00

Balance $900.00

Reference may be made to Walker vs. Boughner, 18 O.R. 448; Mercantile vs. Campbell, 43 O.R. 57; Peckham vs. Depotty, 17 A.R. 273; Smith vs. McGugan, 21 A.R. 542 and 21 S.C.R. 263, and Murdock vs. West, 24 S.C.R. 305.

Judgment will go for the plaintiff for $900 with costs to be taxed on the Supreme Court scale.

Dated at Peterboro this 24th day of December, 1923.

E. C. S. Huycke, Judge.

Peter Moffatt, plaintiff, and Jos. Madill and Herbert Cunningham, executors of the last will and testament of Geo. Lockie, deceased, defendants.

Mr. McElderry for the plaintiff. Mr. Wearing for the defendants.

This is an action for services rendered to the late George Lockie, and brought against the executors of his estate. Peter Moffatt, the plaintiff, is an aged man, and during some of the last months of Geo. Lockie's life lived at his home in the Township of Monaghan. Moffatt's sister was Mr. Lockie's housekeeper.

I think Moffatt went there in the first instance more at his own suggestion than at the request of Lockie; but he did later make himself useful to Lockie, and there is some evidence to indicate that Lockie knew or expected he must be paid for his services. I do not think these services were very great nor very valuable; but there were some services rendered, and the relations of the parties were such as to indicate the necessity for payment. He was there nearly a year. He says he bought sufficient supplies to the home for his board. There is no doubt he bought some things, but I do not think he bought sufficient for his own purposes. He received some trifling amounts for some potatoes and other farm produce which he sold, but these amounts do not exceed $20 in all.

His work consisted of choring around the place, and assisting Miss Moffatt to some slight extent in looking after the deceased George Lockie. I allow the plaintiff the sum of $125 with Division Court costs. No set off to be allowed. As a part of these costs I allow a counsel fee of $25.

Dated at Peterboro this 22nd day of December, 1923.

Edward Huycke, Judge.

Geo. J. Sherry, Registrar.

THE LAST STRAW.

Recently a tramp taken up in a New York police court for drunkenness gave his birthplace as Boston.

"Yours," said the magistrate, "is a sad case. Yet you don't seem to thoroughly realize how low you have sunk."

The prisoner struck his brow with a pained gesture. "Heavens!" he exclaimed devoutly. "I have stood many indignities, but to be sentenced by a magistrate that splits his infinitives; This is the last blow!"

HOCKEY OUTLOOK AROUND HASTINGS

Each Town in League Expect to Win the Championship.

HASTINGS, Dec. 29.—A meeting of the hockey executive of the following towns will be called the first of the week: Campbellford, Keene, Warkworth and Hastings.

The Campbellford boys are waiting eagerly for ice as their junior O.H.A. team of last winter is still intact and with a few new faces on the line-up, Charlie Davidson is sure to make a strong bid for district honours.

Campbellford may not use the covered rink as prospects look bright, according to Secretary P. Saunders, of an open air rink for the season's sport.

Warkworth is not saying much, but can be counted on having as good a hockey team as they had baseball last summer.

Keene has always been the home of good hockey players and with good railroad connections is an easy town to reach. They will be right up with the leaders at the end of the season.

Billy Clapper, manager of the Hastings team ,has about 15 men signed up and will have no easy task to pick a strong aggregation when they are lined up on the ice, as Hastinges has never had such good hockey material as they have this year.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 29.—A very pleasing event took place on Christmas Eve at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Garside, when the Golden Wedding anniversary of Mrs. Garside's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Crossley, was celebrated. Fifty year ago, on December 24th, 173, at the Methodist church, Cavanville, the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Crossley took place. The late Mr. Amos Wragg acted as groomsman and his wife, (nee Miss Christina Mullen), was bridesmaid. Rev. Calvin Shaw, performed the ceremony.

Only the immediate relatives were present including Mr. and Mrs. Gar side and two children, Audrey and Frederick, Mr. Louis Crossley and daughter, Miss Dorothy of Port Hope, his son, Mr. Edward Crossley, of Minden and Mr. T. H. Crossley of Port Hope.

During the social festivities of the evening Mr. and Mrs. Crossley presented with an address, read by their grandson, Edward, and a purse of gold, their son, Mr. Thomas Crossley, making the presentation. The "bride and groom" of fifty years companionship now make their home in Millbrook occupying part of the house with Mr. and Mrs. Garside, King street east.

DEATH CLAIMS HARRY WEBBER

Was Kicked by a Horse Three Weeks Ago and Poisoning Set In.

Harry Webber, prominent agriculturist, members of the Peterborough Fair Board, Plowmen's Association and the Liberal-Conservative Association ,died last night as a result of a kick which he received from a horse three weeks ago. Poisoning set in ,and this proved fatal.

Mr. Webber was born in Peterborough, where his father had homesteaded the property farmed by Harry Webber about one and a half miles out of the city on the gravel road. He lived here all his life, and was known as a progressive business-like farmer, interesting himself in the introduction and propagation of the best in agriculture and live stock.

As a vice president of the Peterborough Fair Board since its re-organization he rendered good service to the city and county. Roland Denne, president of the board, describes him as a "born leader of men, and a man whose counsel was valuable to anyone he favored with it."

"He was one of the best farmers in the district," Mr. Denne continued, and took a leading part in the agricultural end of the Fair Board management. He was at all times ready to do a good turn, and will be greatly missed in the city and in the rural districts."

Mr. Webber was vice-president of the Liberal-Conservative Association ,and was appreciated there for his untiring efforts in behalf of the organiaztion and his perpetual good will.

He was also a member of the Peterborough Plowmens' Association, at one time leading that body.

In fraternal circles Mr. Webber was a member of Royal Arthur Masonic Lodge, and in Murray street Baptist church, where he held the office of deacon, he was believed to be the oldest member still directly connected with the church.

There are left to mourn his loss his widow and four children. They are Elizabeth, Harvey, Daisy and James. A brother Frank, of Calgary, and a sister, Mrs. (Rev.) Harris Wright, Dunnville, also survive.

Definite arrangements for the funeral, which will take place Monday, will be announced later.

MONCTON CONSERVATIVES HELD A LARGE BANQUET

MONCTON, N. B., December 29. —Canadian Press. — A largely attended banquet was held here last night under the auspices of the Conservatives of Moncton, to do honor to the recent Conservative victories of the bye-elections in Kent and Halifax, A. J. Doucet and W. A. Black respectively.

The function was termed a "Maritime Rights Banquet," and in the course of their speeches the speakers referred particularly to the necessity of the maritime provinces receiving a square deal in regard to matters which affected them vitally. Discrimination against the Atlantic Maritime Provinces was charged in relation to the cutting off at Riviere Du Loup and Monk, of the Atlantic Region of the Canadian National Railways. Discrimination was also charged in the matter of freight rates.

JUDGMENT RESERVED IN ELECTION TRIAL

Judges Agree That Election Should Be Voided for Disqualification of Voters, But Reserve Decision.

KITCHENER, December 29. — Canadian Press. — Judgment was reserved here by Justices Masten and Kelly in the appeal of A. W. Mercer of Galt to have the re-election of Karl Homuth, M.P.P., for South Waterloo, invalidated on account of various alleged irregularities in connection with the last June election.

"We reserve our judgment," said Mr. Justice Kelly after seven hours of argument and evidence taking, "and while not making any final decision our first impression, insofar as disqualification of voters is concerned, is that the election should be voided. However we wish to look over the evidence carefully especially in regard to the other phases of the trial."

In summing up R. H. Greer, K.C., of Toronto, counsel for A. W. Mercer rested his case solely on the alleged irregularities, stating that he would admit that the evidence had not shown that Mr. Homuth had been guilty of corruption of voters. He therefore waived his application to have Homuth's vote reduced, and confined his efforts to have the election invalidated, basing his appeal on irregularities in different parts of the riding, openness in voting at North Dumfries, and the alleged intimidation of voters.

"These isolated cases throughout the riding show that the election was not conducted according to the principal of the Act," said Mr. Greer, who especially referred to the open voting at North Dumfries, stating that if there was that, there might be intimidation.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Weather Sharp's Prophecy Fulfilled—Masons Had a Big Night.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 29. — Some time ago Edward Stephens, the local weather prophet, predicted that the first fall of snow would occur during the week between Christmas and New Year's. That prophecy was fulfilled yesterday when the earth was blanketed with about four inches of snow, the heavy variety that remains where it falls. There is excellent sleighing in town, and many sleighs and cutters were out yesterday, the air being filled with the melody of jingling bells. The roads in the country are reported in excellent condition, and the merchants are looking forward to a large number of visitors from the rural sections this afternoon.

Mr. Stephens says that according to his system of forecasting the weather the snow that fell yesterday will not last long, and that the winter will be one of the mildest that has been experienced for years.

MADRID, Dec. 29. —(Canadian Press.)—Canada not having adhered to the Anglo-Spanish treaty last year, and negotiations for a separate treaty not having been opened, the Spanish government announces that Canadian goods must pay first column duty rates, which are the highest imposed, and are practically prohibitive. Move Michigan Central Employees to Windsor.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 29. — In connection with the many contemplated changes in the local division of the Michigan Central Railway it was reported that 35 men and their families employed by the railroad in St. Thomas would be moved, and a majority sent here. This is the indirect result of operating trains from border to border without being changed at St. Thomas. The plan has been in operation for some time and has been very successful.

ELECTRIC MICROPHONE IS GREAT INVENTION

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press).—The perfection of an electric ultra-audible microphone, invented by Dr. Phillips Thomas, which, it is claimed, will permit scientists to record sound vibrations which now are too rapid or too faint for the human ear to catch, was announced last night. It was declared that the device had been perfected and simplified to a point where it could be used by vessels at sea in picking up the warnings of foghorns or other sound warnings beyond the range of the human ear, and in studying the finer vibrations of the heart and brain.

In other words, it may enable others to accurately and definitely read one's thoughts.

SHERIFF JAMES A HALL.

The death of Sheriff James A. Hall is the dropping of another link from the chain that unites the Peterborough of today with the Peterborough of the long ago.

For fifty-one years Mr. Hall had been Sheriff of Peterborough County, and in that span of over half a century had enjoyed the respect and the liking of the whole community, not only because of the faithful discharge of his duties, but because of those fine personal qualities that made him always stand out from among his fellows.

He was one of the city's oldest residents, a treasure trove of reminiscences of the early days in the history of this community, and few citizens knew Peterborough as well—or loved it as much—as did the late Sheriff.

This city has been the better because of his long residence here, for his citizenship was of the highest type and an example to the rest of the community.

Few men have been before the public so long as Sheriff Hall, who for over five decades had been a familiar figure at the Court House, and who had attended no fewer than fifty-one December sessions.

His death will be regretted by the whole community.

THE REWARD FOR SERVICE.

One of the difficulties that keep many people from entering public life is the realization of the fact that the moment a man does so he becomes the target for an endless amount of criticism and seldom receives credit for what he has done.

Of course, a certain measure of fault finding must be expected, for it would be a miracle if policies could be decided upon that which woud please everybody, and after all Aldermen are but human and therefore make mistakes now and then.

So the man in public life must be prepared for some criticism.

There is reason, however, to think that there is perhaps too much—and not enough recognition of service.

Men go into the Council with some idea of progressive measures they mean to introduce, and they find when they get on the inside that it is not easy to carry out such ideas, that it is not possible to do all they planned.

But they stick on the job, sacrificing their pleasure and their time to the city's business, spend night after night at the City Hall, working many hours without remuneration on behalf of their fellow-citizens, using their best judgment in dealing with the various probems that confront them, and in the end receive nothing that in any way resembles thanks.

No wonder there is difficulty in getting men to stand for office—when the satisfaction of knowing that they have done their best for the community is the only reward for the service they render.

TUESDAY'S ELECTION.

With contests for the mayoralty, aldermen and Board of Education to be decided, local electors surely have incentive enough to induce them to exercise their franchise on Tuesday next.

The day is a holiday, there are plenty of polling booths so that no voter will have very far to travel, and nothing but sheer indifference will keep electors away from the polls.

In this connection it is well to point out again for the benefit of newcomers to Peterborough, the women who are voting for the first time and the many people who contrive to forget between one election and another that in the election of aldermen it is necessary that the voter shall mark his ballot for at least four candidates—otherwise the ballot will be spoiled.

There are six candidates, five to be elected, and the voter must vote for four.

He can, of course, vote for five if he so wishes.

The case is different with the Board of Education campaign, in which ten aspirants are battling for five positions.

The elector can vote for one, two, three, four or five candidates as he sees fit, there being no provision against "plumpers."

The citizen who is anxious to make an intelligent use of his franchise will not, however, take advantage of this opportunity to vote for one or two Board of Education candidates.

If he really wants to have a voice in the selection of the board he will pick out the five he considers the best and mark his ballot accordingly.

Otherwise he will be merely throwing away four-fifths of the value of his franchise.

THE PRICE OF COAL.

The spectacular movements in the matter of our coal supply during recent years have fired the public, which gapes at the still-coming reports of the United States Coal Commission and, in an embarrassment of information, wonders what it is all about.

Such a conference as was staged at Philadelphia last week by the American Academy of Political and Social Science, offered a forum where the proponents of either side of the many questions involved presented their arguments for the consideration of the Ultimate Consumer. There were representatives of the operators and the miners and the public. The most dramatic session was that at which Governor Pinchot spoke from the same platform with S. D. Warriner, President of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, with whom he had been exchanging courtesies in the public press. The Governor's address dealt with the questions:

Whether the increase which he granted the coal miners in the recent settlement was justified; and

Whether or not it ought to be passed on to the consumer.

All but two per cent. of the workers were already on an eight-hour schedule. The experts of the Coal Commission advised him that the cost of extending it to all workers would be between one and two cents a ton. There was no question of the justice of the change. He recommended it and it was adopted.

The wage increase that he suggested was just and necessary to provide a decent American standard of living to match the going wages in similar industries and to compensate in part, but only in part, for the extra hazards of an industry in which twenty thousand men are hurt each year. The ten per cent. increase was fully warranted, not only because a supply of anthracite, even at a small increase of cost, was intinitely better than no anthracite at all, but also upon its own merits.

The ten per cent. increase would add about forty cents a ton on an average, but the steam sizes have to be favored because they sell in competition with bituminous, so that more than its own proportion of this increase is put on the domestic sizes. The largest increase in cost per ton chargeable to domestic sizes is fifty-five cents. In view of the increase due to the eight-hour day, Governor Pinchot had said to the public that this increased cost should not exceed sixty cents.

hTe least advance by the operators was seventy cents. Some added ninety cents, a few more than a dollar.

The report of the Federal Trade Commission says that on the week ended October 13 last wholesalers took margins reaching as high as $1.75 per gross ton (twelve times the average pre-war margins) and in the week ended October 20 as high as $1.50 per gross ton.

The gross margins of retail dealers in anthracite in Boston in November of last year ranged, according to the United States Coal Commission, from $4.07 to $6.22 a ton on stove sizes. In New England margins ranged from 13 cents to $6.05. In New York from $2.50 to $4.51.

It cerntainly looks as if there were several chances along the line for taking up sixty cents' worth of slack. —Power.

THE DANGER TO DAIRYING.

Farmers in the Campbellford district who send their milk to the cheese factories—and there is no better dairying section in Ontario—declare that the dairy cow is all that stands between them and the poorhouse. With wheat selling at less than $1.00 a bushel and the price of other grains in proportion, it is impossible to make ends meet by following the old system of farming, while everything that the farmer has to buy remains at the present figures. There is no longer a living profit, they say, in raising hogs, and the market for fat cattle has been shot to pieces.

Dairying then is the one great hope of the farmer. A new and formidable competitor to the Canadian dairyman has arisen in recent years, and now New Zealand threatens to crowd the Canadian producers of cheese out of the British market. The climate of New Zealand, to begin with, gives the dairyman of that country an advantage over the producer in Canada, as in the former place the dairying industry can be carried on throughout the year instead of being limited to a few months.

If the Canadian farmers lose the British market for her cheese it will not be from lack of warning. Government experts pass up and down the country telling them just what they are up against. No class in Canada after all have been made the beneficiaries of parental legislation as have the farmers. The advice of trained men in the business is always available.

These departmental experts have told, and are still telling, the farmer that in order to hold their own in the British market they must improve the quality of their output, and it seems that this can be accomplished without any extraordinary outlay. All that is required is a little more care in securing the purest raw material and in preparing the finished product for market.

If Canadian cheese once establishes the same reputation as the wheat produced in the Prairie Provinces the dairymen of this country need fear no competition that may meet them in the foreign markets. It is however the climate that sets the high grade of Northern wheat, whereas the quality of butter and cheese depends upon the care and intelligence displayed in its production.

Artificial means to keep up the price of cheese at home and abroad have been suggested. One proposition was to store the product and put it upon the market only when there was a keen demand for it, just as the growers of California do with their fruit. It has been demonstrated, however, that these cases are not parallel. California has a practical monopoly of the fruit industry of the North American Continent, and so is in a position to regulate the supply according to the demand.

It would avail the Canadian cheesemaker little to store his output in Montreal, waiting for an increase in the price, thus leaving the British market wide open to the New Zealanders.

AS A TALE THAT IS TOLD.

"We spend our years as a tale that is told." How often we quote those words with a half sigh as if the hurrying past of the years in itself were some strange and unpreventable tragedy, says the Christian Guardian. In reality, is there not some better way of looking at the matter than that? Even a tale that is told may have its joy and laughter and inspiration, all the more so, perhaps, because it is not too long, and life that doesn't stay, but passes on such swift feet, is still life with infinite zest and possibility and goodness. If it isn't long neither is it for most of us very tedious; if it is very fleeting, does that not make it all the more likely that at least it will not grow very stale. Calling names at life—searching out its limiitations and imperfections and disadvantages—is seldom a very sensible performance; indeed it is scarcely using it fairly. There are a few negative things we may say about it, but did you ever try to reckon up how many of the other kind there were? If you haven't, there probably is a great surprise in store for you. And there will not likely be a better time for beginning such an exercise than the present. If in these closing days of the old year you absolutely refuse to think upon the depressing and sad and tragic view of life, and insist on seeing and dwelling upon its goodness, 1923 will end much more joyously and 1924 will begin much more hopefully. Let us try it, at any rate.

Failed to Get License As Required By By-Law.

Alderman M. J. Maher took the trail yesterday in a search for two visitors to the city said to be peddling suitings without a license, but did not succeed in running them to earth. The license is $250, Alderman Maher said, required by a city by-law.

These men were dressed in uniforms resembling English sailors' although store-keepers on whom they called said they spoke with a Scotch accent. They carried the suitings in a kit bag and paid attention to East City in the forenoon, calling on George street pool rooms in the afternoon.

Alderman Maher, with Sergeant Thomas and Constable Bromley went to the C.P.R. station in the police car to intercept the men at the 3.50 train, but did not see them.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 29.—The top for heavy and medium weight steers this week was $7.50 a cwt. and choice handy weight steers and heifers made within 25 cents a cwt. of this. Good butchers are up around $6.50 a cwt. and medium butchers are selling at $5.50. For common butchers, which have not been stabled, $4.50 has been paid. The change in the market means about one dollar a cwt. within three weeks, and this includes all qualities of butchers' steers and heifers.

The market for butchers' cows has not been so favorably influenced. The explanation of this is by the large number of cows which are coming to the abattoirs direct from the West. Western cows, for some reason, are being sold almost regardless of price, and until there is a let up in this supply there is not much hope for higher prices for domestic cows. A choice heifer cows is good for $5 a cwt., but good cows are hard to sell much over $4.

There were no extra choice calves on offer since a week ago, and the top reached was 12 cents a pound. Other good calves sold at 11 cents, and mediums at 9 to 10 cents. A number of heavy Western calves went around 5 cents.

The lamb market has been very tame, but prices stiffened about 50 cents a cwt. for good lambs, which sold at 11¼ cents a pound. Heavy lambs are selling at 10½ cents, and handyweight sheep at 6½ cents.

With the heavy runs of hogs, over prices have firmed up distinctly, and are now 75 cents to one dollar a cwt., about that of three weeks ago. Prices on Thursday were $8.25 a cwt. f.o.b., and cases were cited where $8.50 was being asked.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, December 29 (Canadian Press). — Influenced more or less by opinions expressed in some quarters that a betterment of prices would be seen after the beginning of the New Year, the wheat market showed an upward slant yesterday.

Closing prices were steady, a shade to 3-8c net higher, May $1.06 3-4 to 7-8c to $1.06 7-8, and July $1.03 3-8 to 1-2c.

Corn made a gain of a shade to 1-2c; oats finished at 1-8c off to a changed to 12c up.

An unexpected rise in wheat prices at Liverpool, together with word that the new Argentine crop would be later than usual and that the yield in Australia was likely to be reduced, helped to start the market here upward. Spreading operations between Chicago and Winnipeg were also a factor, and there were predictions that world shipments as shown in the weekly statement Monday next would be relatively light. Besides, a reduction in the amount of wheat on ocean passage was forecast. Moderate bulges in price here, however, were promptly followed by profit-taking sales, and by consequent fractional setbacks from the day's top level.

Regulating Bathing Attire in Atlantic City

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. Dec. 28—(United Press)—Although winter winds are blowing over the sand beaches of America's Playground, city officials are busy preparing an ordinance to regulate bathing attire next season. Stockingless nymphs will cavort over the sands in the summer of 1924, according to Mayor Edward L. Bader. Heretofore bare-legs and rolltops were taboo.

TESTING AND FILLING SERVICE FOR ALL MAKES OF Storage Batteries

The price of batteries to the consumers having been greatly reduced, while the price to the dealer remains the same, it is inevitable that a "charge for service" policy be inaugurated.

The undersigned Battery Service Stations of the city will issue cards to car owners to cover seven inspections at a cost of one dollar and fifty cents ($1.50). Single inspections, twenty-five cents (25c).

Inspections will include testing cells with hydrometer, adding pure water and cleaning and putting vaseline on terminals where necessary. Where the battery has to be removed for recharging or repairs there will be no charge for inspection.

The undersigned trust that the motoring public will appreciate the reason for doing away with the so-called "free service," and they can be assured that the new policy will mean for them still better service and longer life for their batteries.

DAMAGED ROOF OF TUT'S SHRINE

Finally Dismantled After Week's Work—Tourists Flock to Valley of Kings

LUXOR, Egypt, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press)—The roof of the canopy over the sarcophagus of King Tutenkhamen has finally been dismantled after about a weeks work. The last of the three sections was taken off Friday morning. The task was most difficult, owing to the shrinkage of the wood, and Howard Carter, the head of the expedition, had to summon the assistance of a native carpenter before he could pry free the last wide and heavy section.

This section, like the others, is decorated with the protective device of hawks with outspread rings—there are six hawks in all—incised in gold on the black, probably bitumized, background. The three sections now repose in the antechamber of the tomb and there they will remain for the present, owing to the seeming impossibility of getting them off through the narrow entrance without cutting a way through the steps. It is understood the roof of the shrine suffered some little damage in the process of dismantling.

Large number of tourists visited the Valley of Tombs yesterday morning.

MEN AND HORSES

How closely related is man to the more intelligent of the animals is seen in many of the ailments to which both are prone and the remedies to which they answer.

Doctors and veterinarians are oftentimes surprised to learn of the similarity of their methods of handling the ailments of man and beast.

Sprains, burns, scalds, scratches and many other minor injuries, many everyday ailments, too in men and animals take the same course, and both answer immediately to the same treatment—Absorbine Jr.

Absorbine was first discovered by a very close student of the horse, W. F. Young, and by him, devoted to its cause. Its very exceptional benefits, however, were promptly seized upon for the human race and, in a milder form, the preparation is sold all over the continent today as Absorbine Jr. It is used for men, women and children everywhere as a positive germicide—a germ killer—and a prompt and certain healer of all hurts. It is useful not only for all the purposes served by ordinary liniments and embrocations, but as a mouth-wash and for anything else where a germicide is needed. Don't wait until you need it. Get it in the house today. $1.25 at your druggist's.

NEWS HASTINGS TOWN, DISTRICT

Municipal Contest Not Creating Much Interest --Personal Mention.

HASTINGS, Dec. 28.—There is no evidence that the electors are regarding the Municipal elections any more serious than usual despite the fact that Reeve Fowlds and Ex-Reeve Hess are opponents for the Reeve chair.

Last year the closest contest in Northumberland County took place here when W. M. Fowlds and Dr. J. Hess had their annual battle. Reeve Fowlds was returned by a majority of one.

A couple of new candidates are spoken of for Council honors. Hastings needs a good Council for 1924 as the school question will likely have to be dealt with besides other important questions.

Hockey News

With the change of weather the hockey boys are wearing a smile. Parry Saunders, of Campbellford, has handed out the word that the boys down there have dropped out of the O.H.A. and are willing to accept a group with Warkworth, Keene and Hastings.

There are some good hockey players in these towns and it would prove a merry battle for first place honors.

A meeting of these four towns will be called in a few days to schedule.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. McFarland left on Thursday for Brockville, after an extended visit with friends here.

Mr. F. Mason, of Campbellford, spent the Christmas holidays with friends in town.

Mr. Arthur Parker, of Roseneath, is spending a few days in town with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Parker.

PROGRESS FOR CAMPBELLFORD

Increase in Assesses Value of Property and Population.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 29.—Campbellford has made substantial progress during the year 1923, showing as it does an increase both in the assessed value of property and in population. The vital statistics on file in the office of Town Clerk McGregor record the number of births as 77. There were 40 deaths and 26 marriages, but a number of weddings of Campbellford people were celebrated outside of town.

The carefully compiled returns of Assessor Mulhearn show that in 1923 there was a total increase in the population of 182, while the advance in the assessed value of property was over $25,000. The latter figures would have been greater if the new buildings in process of construction when the assessment was made, had been placed on the roll, but the usual procedure in such cases was followed and there will be no levy on these until they are completed. Thirty new residences is a good year's record for a town and that is the number put up during the past summer. Even at that it is a difficult matter for people who desire to move, as strangers coming to town to find a habitation, an infallible sign of a prosperous community.

The extended operations of the Campbellford Cloth Company are responsible for a large percentage of the growth in the town's population. Several families, the heads of which are experts in the manufacture of cloth, came to the town direct from the old land. The company secured considerable working space in the factory by the erection of a large warehouse for the storing of these goods.

Early in the summer the Hydro Commission let a contract at a sum approximating a quarter of a million dollars to the Sinclair Construction Company of Toronto for the excavation of a tail race as the first step in the erection of a power house. This work which called for the employing of a large number of men, the majority of them skilled and highly paid workmen, is more than half finished. The building of the plant will entail a heavy outlay. The Hydro Commission has recently started the building on another electrical plant nearer to the town and when the new ones are completed, with the one now in operation, Campbellford will be second only to Niagara Falls as a centre for the distribution of electric energy. This town certainly has a bright future.

A live chamber of commerce, including in its membership all the leading business and professional men of the town, was organized last winter and regular meetings will soon be resumed for the season. This organization, among other public questions, dealt with the question of holding an old boys' re-union, but as the winter was fairly well advanced at the time the matter was postponed. It is likely to be one of the topics dealt with during the early months of 1924.

Among the noted pioneers who passed away in 1923 were R. J. Sykes, one of the oldest and most successful teachers of his day; R. Linton, once a leading business man, and E. C. West, for years the capable and faithful clerk of the town.

The new High school, the building of which was started early in the summer, after a controversy that lasted for years, is now nearing completion as the plasterers will begin work in a few days. The building is modern in every detail and will be fitted out with the most up-to-date equipment.

Campbellford's greatest asset, the civic power plant, has had a successful year and considerable new machinery has been added to the equipment. It will continue to furnish the residents with low priced commercial and domestic light and manufacturers with the cheapest power in Ontario. During the year many letters have been received from as far away as France and Germany, asking how the local commissioners manage to produce electric energy at such a figure.

The council has come through the year with a surplus. Considerable money was expended on the roadways, in the construction of new sidewalks and sewers and other public improvements have been planned.

Even the Campbellford fall Fair was bigger and better than ever in 1923, although everyone believed that the peak had been attained. Altogether the town may not have experienced anything in the nature of a boom ,but on every hand it showed a steady and healthy growth throughout the year now so near a close.

PREMIERS TO DISCUSS TRADE OF DOMINIONS

Massey of New Zealand Arrives in Ottawa For Brief Visit and Bruce of Australia Comes in January.

EXTEND PREFERENCE.

OTTAWA, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Premier Massey of New Zealand arrived here last night. While in Ottawa he will discuss trade relations between Canada and New Zealand with Premier King and will advocate steps to improve the mail service between the two countries.

The New Zealand Premier declined to indicate the nature of the questions he would take up with Premier King except to say that they referred to trade and the mail system.

Premier Massey was met at the Central Station by Premier King. After a short conversation the Premiers parted to prepare for the dinner which the Canadian Government tendered to the distinguished New Zealand visitor at the Country Club.

Upon his arrival in Montreal and Ottawa Premier Massey found the cities under a mantle of snow. This interested him because his other visits to the Dominion took place at seasons of the year when there was no snow upon the ground.

Premier Massey will be the guest of Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Byng at Government House, to-day, where a dinner will be given in his honor at night. He leaves upon his journey across Canada, Sunday night.

Extend Preferences

The visit of Premier Massey of New Zealand and more particularly that of Premier Bruce of Australia at the end of next month may result in an extension of Canada's trade preferences. Such an outcome is looked for hopefully, at all events. At the present time there are preferential tariffs between Canada and New Zealand. There are none between Canada and Australia, and all attempts to conclude a preferential tariff treaty have proved abortive.

A year ago Canada offered to give Australia her preferential tariff in return for the preferences Australia gives to Great Britain. But Australia did not think the offer good enough then and there has since been no indication that Premier Bruce will take a different view if the offer is repeated during his coming visit. Indeed, Canada has already gone further. Last session the Dominion Government proposed to give Empire raisins and dried currants free entry to Canada and to raise the duty on these articles, under the intermediate and general tariffs, from 2-3 cents per pound to three cents per pound. The purpose was to give Australian dried fruits an added preference in Canadian markets, and to supply an added attraction to a treaty.

Objections were raised in the Canadian Parliament that the new rates would increase the cost of raisins to the Canadian housewife. Parliament approved the new rates, but a proviso was added that they would become effective only after publication of an order-in-council which would be passed when a trade treaty with Australia was concluded.

COBOURG AND DISTRICT

COBOURG, Dec. 29.—On Saturday evening the friends and neighbours of Mr. and Mrs. Sam McColl, Hillier, gathered at their home to say goodbye before the removal of their host and hostess to Bethany. Mr. and Mrs. McColl were presented, at an opportune time, with a serving tray and beautiful reading lamp, to which tribute of esteem and regard the recipients made appropriate reply. Mr. McColl for three years now has efficiently discharged the duties of reeve of Brighton township. He and Mrs. McColl will be much missed in church and social circles. A pleasant evening was spent with games and music and dainty refreshments were served.

Interest in Baby Clinics

The baby clinics held weekly in the Town Council Chamber here in connection with the local Child Welfare work are rapidly growing in interest. For the month of April the average attendance was 40, while for the month just past it was 120. In addition there are five junior Health League classes in connection with school work.

4,886,000 Autos is Estimate for 1924

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Leaders in the automobile industry are predicting that 1924 will equal, if not exceed the property it experienced this year—the best year in its history.

Automobile men expressing this opinion, according to the Standard Daily Trade Service, include Henry Ford, of the Ford Company; C. S. Mott, of the General Motors Corporation, H. M. Jewett, of the Paige-Detroit Motor Company, and Edward S. Jordon, of the Jordon Motor Car Company.

A tentative schedule of 1924 production of fourteen large companies calls for 4,886,500 cars.

MEIGHEN AGAIN VISITS QUEBEC

Says Solid Political Blocs Are Source of Danger to a Country.

ST. JEROME, Que., Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press).—"Solid blocs in the political life of a country were a dangerous condition of affairs," said the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen talking to a group of friends at a luncheon here yesterday. The leader of the opposition is at present making a tour of the Laurentians.

Hon. Rodolphe Monty also referred to this question and said that if Mr. Meighen were not an honest man and a statesman he would have answered the cry against him in Quebec by forming a bloc in the other provinces against Quebec. The Conservative leader, however, said Mr. Monty, was a man who did not wish to get into power by the aid of a policy of passion. One of the reasons for the lack of success in Quebec in 1921, said Mr. Meighen, had been that the press had frmed one solid bloc in opposition to the Conservative cause and it had been impossible to keep the Conservative case before the public.

It was not wise to form blocs for the formation of a bloc is one section of the country, was liable to have its logical conclusion in the formation of counter-blocs and thereby bring about the ruin of the country and end Confederation.

MAN AND WIFE RECEIVE SENTENCES FOR MURDER

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press.)—Ernest and Marie Vetter, who were convicted of first degree manslaughter for the killing of Alonzo J. Storey last May, were each sentenced to eight to fifteen years in prison to-day by Judge Humphrey in Long Island City.

Before the sentence of eight to fifteen years was pronounced Mrs. Vetter declared she had nothing to say, but her husband pleaded for leniency.

Mrs. Vetter will serve her term in Auburn prison and her husband in Sing Sing.

Storey, former suitor of Mrs. Vetter, was killed in the Vetter home and his body wrapped in newspapers and sacks and thrown into Jamaica Bay.

hour to study of the question.

"It would be a sad affair if we should have to take ourselves and some of our more primitive brethren as the finished product of God's diety," he declared. "It would be almost a sacrilege. What incentive would there be for bettermen if we were to be regarded as complete?"

Dynamic Evolution.

Creation of the universe did not take place at any particular time, but is an infinite process, started many millions of years ago and still continuing, Professor F. R. Moulton, of Chicago University, told the scientists.

In almost every respect the universe is infinite, Pro. Moulton declared, and although it has been in existence in one form or another for probably hundreds of millions of years, it is still changing and will be doing so hundreds of millions of years hence.

Dynamic evolution probably is the process through which the universe known to the human mind was created, Prof. Moulton said. Illustrating his theory with a picture of a group of "Suns," which he estimated to contain 10,000 separate bodies and to be thousands of times as great in light-giving power as the sun itself, he declared that they were oscillating in a special group about a definite centre and that a gradual process of dynamic evolution was taking place, such as occurs in the formation of a raindrop. There probably are from 60,000 to 100,000 such "suns" gathered in similar groups in the heavens, he said.

The infinity of the process, he said, was illustrated by the fact that it required one of the bodies one thousand years to make the circuit of the constantly revolving group and that in spite of their apparent proximity, one body would revolve about the group ten thousand times before its course would be perceptibly varied by collision with another.

Science and Food.

Science was urged to solve or stave off a world-wide food shortage problem by Dr. Ross Aiken Gortner, head of the Biochemistry Division of the Minnesota College of Agriculture, who said "Scientists are gravely about the situation, now not very far in the future."

He explained that with the growth of population so rapidly overtaking production for man's subsistence, it cannot be more than a few generations until the world will have more mouths than it can feed, unless something is done. The development of such a situation had been reaffirmed by research in the last two years, he said, adding that "it behooves us to take stock of our supply of knowledge and see whether we can find new tools which may be enlisted in the service of agriculture."

Fat cattle may roam the desert and semi-desert regions, drought resistant food plants would cover the arid and semi-arid regions and airplanes would spray new compounds to destroy insects and fungi, if science meets the situation, Dr. Gortner indicated.

Young Thief "Sentenced" to Technical School.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 29.— On the condition that he would attend technical school three nights each week and report to the Chief of Police at regular intervals, Walter Sepner, 17 years old, 23 Aylmer avenue, was given his freedom on a charge of theft by Judge Gundy in Windsor police court yesterday. Sepner was convicted on a charge of being implicated in the theft of $25 worth of auto accessories from the store of H. N. Fox, Pitt street. He was arrested shortly after the theft, having first denied the charge. A number of juveniles who were also rounded up by the police for being implicated testified against him.

Sepner was also ordered to pay the cost of the prosecution, amounting to $18.

SICKENING HEADACHES ENDED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Effect was splendid when she tried this Fruit Medicine

East Ship Harbour, N. S.

"For years, I was a dreadful sufferer from Constipation and Headaches, and I was miserable in every way. Nothing in the way of medicines seemed to help me and I was almost discouraged.

Then I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and the effect was splendid; and after taking one box, I can safely say I am well. I feel like a new person in every way and I am deeply thankful to have relief from those sickening headaches".

Would not be Without Zutoo Tablets At Any Cost

Mr. A. O. Norton, the millionaire Jack Manufacturer, of Boston, who recently died, was a great "booster" for Zutoo Tablets.

He suffered from headaches from childhood and when he found Zutoo Tablets stopped these headaches in a few minutes and left no bad effect, he began recommending them to his family and friends. In an unsolicited letter, Mr. Norton says in closing:

"My family use them when ever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from Headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I always carry Zutoo Tablets in my grip on the road and WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THEM AT ANY COST."

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

C.P.C. BANQUET SALESMEN OF LOCAL BRANCH

Management Dined and Entertained Some 60 Guests and They Did It Handsomely Indeed.

A MERRY EVENING

It would be difficult indeed to conceive of a jollier, or more all-round entertaining and gastronomically tempting banquet than that tendered last night in the Empress Hotel by the manageemnt of the Canadian Packing Co. to the salesmen of the local branch, and other employees.

The occasion was an outstanding feature of the salesmen's anual convention here, a function when, with accustomed generosity, the management "did it handsomely," so to speak, in the words of Gilbert and Sullivan's koko. Served with a menu of seven exclusively delectable courses, to say nothing of nuts, raisins, Roquefort cheese, dry ginger ale, Sanitaris, cigarettes and cigars, the happiest of happy companies enjoyed a dinner but rarely excelled. And during the evening, between different courses and programme numbers, the guests indulged in unconfined joys under the direction of that prince of good fellows, Jules Brazil, a Toronto entertainer, who thoroughly understands the art of making merry. Mr. Brazil, true to his reputation, kept the 68 guests convulsed with his irresistible stunts, such as good natured bandinage, original comedy and stirring song and music, into which he inveigled his audience to enter with whole-hearted enthusiasm. Then one must not forget G. A. Jobbitt's stepdance,altogether quite unique and quite a scream. The C. P. C. orchestra also contributed several splendid numbers while a song by Frank Pratt and recitations by H. S. Bell won warm commendation.

This year the company's plant foremen, plant engineer and retail store managers were added guests, while among the visitors, K. L. Rice, credit manager at the head office, Toronto, and W. H. Green, branch manager, Sydney, Nova Scotia, found places of honor.

Jolly Good Fellows.

This well known refrain is hardly expressive enough of the warm reception tendered to T. F. Matthews, president of the company, and G. S. Matthews, local manager—father and son—for, perahps, no employers of labor in Canada hold a warmer spot in the hearts of their employees than do these gentlemen. And hearty in truth were the acclaims for Gordon Matthews who has but recently returned to his post of duty after a long illness.

"Our Company."

This toast was the most popular one of the evening, and very capably proposed by Mr. Rosenberg, the local branches' senior salesman, who expressed unqualified pleasure that his esteemed manager, Gordon Matthews was sufficiently recovered from his six months' illness to be present on this auspicious occasion. He hoped that his getting into harness again would stimulate a return to his former health and strength in the very near future. Mr. Rosenburgh though every employee should be proud of his connection with the C. P. C., which starting from a small origin, is to-day the largest packing concern in Canada and the British Empire. This enviable standing he attributed to the fact that the company always conducted their business on honorable principles, and thus enjoyed a good and reliable name universally. Extolling the Matthews as men of large hearts and founders of the C.P.C., he wished growth and prosperity for the company, whose heads he hoped would be long spared to guide its affairs.f (Prolonged applause.)

In response, T. F. Matthews, president of the C.P.C., formerly of Peterborough, and now resident in Toronto, highly apreciated Mr. Rosenburgh's remarks, and considered it an honor to be connected with a packing concern, whose volume of business, with that of its associates in the U. S., ranks sixth in the whole world. He lauded Peterboro plant as setting the standard for all C.P.C. plants in the country.

Following a talk on busines matters of interest to salesmen, Mr. Matthews expressed pleasure that the local retail managers were present, for he considered C.P.C. retail houses to be very important branches of the whole business. "These managers have been with us for years," he continued, and he extolled them as men of ability and honesty, occupying positions of considerable trust. His assurance that auditors' reports from all branches gave the Peterborough plant first place eleven months out of twelve created enthusiasm; as also did his optimism for improved trading conditions and a successful year in 1924. "On the whole," he said, "things seem to be swinging around toward business prosperity again."

In conclusion the President warmly appreciated the presence of travellers from a distance, and hoped these branch salesmen conventions may eventually result in one central gathering each year, attended by all the company's salesmen.

They Carried On.

Gordon Matthews, in a brief but appropriate speech, warmly thanked the whole local organization for their loyal support to him during his illness, and for the really wonderful way his subordinates had carried on. Returning home to Peterborough after six months' enforced absence, had he declared, made this Christmas the best that he had ever enjoyed. Nothing if not optimistic for the future, the speaker hoped next year will be one of the best in the firm's history.

Efficient Staff.

Proposing the toast to the Sales Department, A. Dryland asserted that the local C.P.C. branch enjoyed an efficient staff of salesmen with whom it was a pleasure to associate.

R. S .Hall, local sales manager, who presided over the proceedings, in response, also spoke warmly of staff cooperation during Gordon Matthews' illness and touched on the progress made in producing high grade products, feeling that the C.P. C., were offering goods a little better in quality than those of their competitors. Salesmen, he pointed out, relied on cooperation of every department of their house, including the office, and he urged for the setting of a new progressive objective each year. "Buy right, make right and sell right," is a slogan all departments should adhere to, he said.

M. J. Shea was pleased to see Gordon Matthews back again in pretty good health, and he was glad that the local branch had put across a 15 per cent. increase last year, which increase he hoped would be enlarged to 25 per cent. in 1924. W. R. Draffin and M. Shaw also spoke acceptably to this toast.

The toast to "Our Guests" was proposed by C. McLean in exceedingly fitting terms, and duly responded to.

OFFICERS REDUCED FOR NAVY DISASTER.

Captain Watson and Commander Hunter Lose 150 and 100 Points Respectively.

WASHINGTON, December 29. — Secretary of the Navy Denby yesterday announced the sentences imposed by the naval court martial on Capt E. H. Watson and Lieutenant Commander Donald T. Hunter, officers in command of the destroyer squadron which crashed into the rocks off the Califonia coast several months ago, resulting in the loss of more than a score of lives.

In reporting to Secretary Denby on the findings of the court martial, the Judge Advocate General's office and the Bureau of Navigation declared they found the "sentences too lenient," and the secretary approved the findings "subject to the comment" of the two bureaus.

Captain Watson now stands 66th on the list of captains. He will be placed at the bottom of the list where he will remain until 150 officers have been promoted ahead of him.

Unofficially it is reported he will retire, having more than 30 years of service to his credit.

"TWINS" WHO'VE NEVER GROWN.

BRIGHTON, Eng — For more than ten years a young woman has been wheeling her "twins" along the front here daily. Neighbors wondered why they never grew up. Now the secret is out. They are dolls. And they satisfy, in some measure, the young woman's longing for kiddies of her own. Every day she washes their dainty dresses. Every meal they sit in high chairs at her table. Once she was engaged to be married. She broke off her engagement when she remembered a vow to remain with a widowed mother The desire for children persisted, however, and she bought the dolls. Ever since she has lavished a mother's care upon them.

NO MORE WORD OF DIRIGIBLE

All France Awaits Word of Airship's Fate--News Kept From Wife.

(By Webb Miller, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PARIS, Dec. 29.— France's mystery of the skies remained complete to-day. At 9.40 a.m. the Ministry of Marine said: "No additional information has been received regarding the fate of the dirigible Dixmude. There is no confirming of reports that additional bodies of the crew have been found .The only body recovered is that of the commander."

The huge dirigible, turned over to France by Germany at the armistice ending the world war, has been missing since last Saturday.

All France continued in the wildest speculatiton of what may have happened aboard the giant dirigible, which set off on her fateful voyage 11 days ago under command of Capt. Du Plexis De Grenada, the fifty men aboard, crew and passengers.

The body of the commander was picked up yesterday off the northern coast of Sicily, more than 200 miles east and north of where the dirigible was last sighted. Attention was directed to-day to an article which the commander printed in 1920 in the Technical Revue L'Aeronautque, just after he had piloted the big ship from Germany to France.

The captain pointed out at that time certain dangers in the construction of the Dixmude, then the German L-72, and said: "Talk of average of 15,000 kilometers with passengers to America is foolish."

The Dixmude was not built for such a cruise. It is far from being a perfect model of a giant aerial cruiser, it needs much greater resistance endurance and solidity.

"The Dixmude was built for war service in raids only. She was not intended for long intensive use.

Father Guards Home.

A grim old Frenchman, hiding a breaking heart, stood on the stoop of a little house here to-day and guarded an expectant young mother from a horde of curious who would see the wife of the man who commanded the dirigible Dixmude on her last fateful voyage into unchartered skies. As all France waited anxiously for further news of the great air ship, missing since a week ago to-day, the father of its youthful commander, Captain Du Plexis De Grenada, stood guard at the doorway, of the captain's house, to see that his wife should not know of her husband's death until after the expected child is born.

"You cannot pass," he said shortly to all who came.

In the house the young wife, serenely awaiting the birth of another soldier of France, knitted tiny clothes and planned the joy her child would bring her hero husband.

She cannot be told yet," the old man outside said, refusing to shed a single tear when the news was brought to him that the body of his son had been given up by the sea off the coast of Sicily.

"The shock would kill her. She must not know. We must wait."

Then the father, himself once a soldier, told of the experiences of a boy in who he had lived over again the military glory of France.

"He brought the Dixmude home from Germany," the old man said.

"We were all very proud. We were all very proud of him, but I knew he never trusted the ship. He saw her faults from the first.

"Last year his wife fell sick. He lived for her and the children and he made a vow that if the good God brought her safe back to health he would go afoot to the shrine at Lourdes," and he did, when she recovered, he walked 500 miles in 12 days to give thanks to the saint.

"This flight was to have been his last on the Dixmude. He was to have been promoted and assigned to more important work."

The old man looked up at the sky —a great vaulted space of blue that had taken his son from him—and shook his head sadly.

"She must not know yet," he said; "there must be another son for France."

IRRITABLENESS IS CAUSED BY HUNGER

As Soon As the Craving of the Stomach Is Satisfied You Feel at Peace.

Do you feel irritable and aggressive when you need food? Most people do, especially nervous temperaments. As soon as they satisfy the cravings of the stomach they relax and feel at peace with the world.

All this is inherited from ancient times when man was in the animal state or not far removed from it. Nature made animals and primitive men aggressive and wrathful when they needed food, so they'd be incited to go out into the jungle and kill.

Hunger appeased, they relaxed, became drowsy—nature again asserting her cunning by making them want to lie down and doze, giving the stomach unrestricted blood supply to aid digestion and rebuild the exhausted cells of the body.

We no longer have to go out and kill animal life with bow and arrow or spear or hand-to-hand combat. We simply go to a restaurant or open the lunch pail—and get what we want. If the service is slow and appetite ferocious, we occasionally revert to jungle type and feel like going out and man-handling the chef and waiter to rush our meal.

Obviously there's no longer any physical or other necessity for irritability and aggressiveness accompanying hunger. These unpleasant sensations are superfluous. But nature hasn't quite kept up with our rapid advancement. Jungle days are gone, but she hasn't eliminated jungle emotions.

In many other ways, civilized man has "outgrown" his physical body. We've become civilized fast. Nature's evolution is slower, so we haven't shaken off jungle emotions and jungle physique. Our bodies and emotions are like driving a stage coach in an age of airplanes.

That's what the highbrows mean when they claim the machinery and systems of civilization have developed faster than man's ability to handle them.

It pays to buy standard necessities at special sales, but it is well to know the regular price of the regular quality.

LOCAL MARKETS ARE SLOWING UP

Sugar is Again on the Downgrade Now That the Holiday is Over.

After the holiday rush, local markets are slowing up a trifle. The fruit store probably have as much patronage after as before the big Christmas festival, however. Patrons of the lordly turkey and the succulent but dream-producing mince pie probably turn with relief to the cool, refreshing green of head lettuce and the plentiful juice of citrus fruit as an antidote to too much chocolate and rich, heavy cake. A new arrival in the fruit stores is the pineapple, from Cuba. Most people, possibly are ignorant of the fact that local greenhouses in our own town keep some of the fruit vendors supplied throughout the cold weather with leaf lettuce and parsley, with green onions and water cress. This is the first year, however, that tomatoes have been grown throughout the winter, in local greenhouses.

Mincemeat in big canisters is prominent in the local stores just now, and sauerkraut, the dish so much loved by the Germans, that goes so well with their national beer and pretzels.

Sugar, after the holiday season is over, shows its usual slightly downward tendency. A graph of the rise and fall of sugar prices in the year 1923 is interesting. In January of a year ago granulated sugar was worth $8.00 wholesale. Now it it somewhe e in the neighborhood of $10.20 in Montreal. A gradually ascending curved line shows the upward tendency to the month of Aprils and May, when the price stood around $11.35. From the first of May until the end of July, speculators kept the price of the granulated product at $10.70, while raw sugars fell from a peak of $11.35 on the 27th of April to $9.10 on July 31st. Then the granulated rocketed down to the same price, $9.10, on August 23rd, when the raws were down to $8.15, gradually ascending to a price for granulated in October of $10.70 once more. On November 28th, when granulated sugar was selling for $10.30, raws were $10.70.

INSULIN TREATMENT IS DISCUSSED AT MEETING

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press). — Recent experiments with insulin in the treatment of diabetes were discussed at the joint session of the Federation of American societies for experimental biology in convention here.

Dr. Max Hellis, of University of Missouri, who has experjenced with insulin on corn sprouts and seedlings showed that condition almost exactly like diabetes in humans exists in corn. In this condition a small tip of corn leaf which ordinarily gives off water, gives off sugar solution instead. If seedling is immersed in an insulin solution some of seedlings show phenomenal growth, twice that of normal plant. In other cases metabolism of consumption of the food is so rapid that seedlings practically burn up.

MARY S. SHAPIRO INSURANCE AGENT.

States That Successful Business Women Must Disassociate Social and Business Life.

By MARIAN HALE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—"The successful business woman must disassociate her social and business life," says Mary S. Shapiro, who ranks among the first women specialists in insurance in the United States.

"She must realize from the start that the very thing that will help a man in business—that is, the cultivation of men friends—will hurt her own career.

"A man may pave his way with a friendly pat on the shoulder, a cocktail or a cigar, but let a woman try to put a business proposition on basis of friendliness and it destroys her totally. She must regard men impersonally if she is to succeed."

Beats Men.

Miss Shapiro is qualified to speak with authority. During the first eight months of 1923 she wrote $100,000 worth of insurance. Her first big contract came in 1920 when she insured a Wall Street financier for a quarter of a million—in competion with four other insurance agents—four men with years of experience behind them.

When I asked her for an elaboration of her contentions she went on:

"Matrimony and maternity are the natural and logical career for a woman. The good wife and mother makes a greater contribution to life than any merely professional woman.

"But if a woman must earn her living, then she must prepare herself for the work. If she must be a bread winner, she must make herself so efficient she can meet any man in his chosen field and compete with him to her advantage.

Brain Work.

"She must learn her job so well that nothing will faze her in what she has to say. She must never approach a prospect without knowing her facts. 'Just like a woman' is a man's opinion when a woman has only vague ideas and unsupported theories to offer. And he doesn't consider her proposition seriously.

"Femininity is all very well in social life, and of course it is part of a good business woman's stock in trade, but it is worthless unless directed by good grey matter. Most women know how to use their feminine tricks cleverly enough, but fame and fortune are realized only by the woman who knows how to use her brain as well."

Miss Shapiro, though she travels a great deal and specializes in corporation and business insurance, keeps house too.

"To keep me well balanced," she laughed.

TOM MOORE SENDS LABOR MESSAGE.

"Happy and Prosperous New Year" Incorporates Ideals of Labor.

OTTAWA, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Tom Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, gives the following New Years message to the workers of the Dominion:

"No message that I could give to the workers of Canada at this time is more appropriate than the age-old wish for 'A Happy and Prosperous New Year.' This is not a mere platitude neither is it uttered without giving thought to the conditions of those who are faced with distress and disappointment caused by involuntary unemployment—sickness, or old age.

"It is a sincere expression of the ideals and fundamental principles of labor organizations. The expressed wish that everyone may enjoy 'a happy and prosperous New Year' incorporates fully that for which labor is striving.

"Labors platform is built upon this ideal of bringing prosperity into the homes, and happiness into the lives of all who labor. Let the New Year's resolve be to strengthen our opinions and use our power individually and collectively to the end that from January 1 to Dec. 31, 1924, may be—more than any previous one —a really happy and prosperous year."

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

In the New York Nursery and Child's Hospital, good music will henceforth form a part of the regular program. As a result of musical treatment in this institution during a recent period of sixty days, it was quite definitely established that its value as a curative and restorative agent was very marked. The test was tried at first with mothers in the maternity wards but also with the babies and sick children.

The tests have amply demonstrated that music of the right kind has a marked theapeutic effect on the spirits and general morals of these hospital patients. Music seems to create a desire to get well and enjoy the promised hope music instills in their souls.

Just what it is in good music that causes patients to sit up and take notice or to forget for the time being and undoubtedly for a much longer period, the pain that is gnawing at their vital health condition is hard for a physician to diagnose.

But this we do know—the heart beats faster in full health when a brass band strikes up a stirring march. The same holds true when we are ill or convalescing. Mother's song of other days brought peace to the heart of childhood when she sang away the pain of cuts, aches or bumps.

There is a peculiar gland action in the human body that responds to the stimulus of music. The pituitary gland of the sphenoid bone in the cranium has been accused of sending out the stimulus in music to which the body responds during periods of depression for renewed hope, health and happiness. Medical science is not so sure of this, however, but let us hope it is true.

This situation is a positive one. Health may be hastened for many patients by the use of music or a concord of sweet sounds. The writer is well acquainted with a woman over sixty years of age who has been ill in bed for almost two years. Music by means of radio has restored her health to a marked degree.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

THE DUSTY MILLER

"Hoity-toity," she was saying.

"I'll have to leave you for a few minutes!" said Daddy Gander to the Twins. "I must go and stop that fat old miller from making so much dust and dirt while Mother Goose is away."

The magic dust-pan had shrunk up again to its proper size and Daddy Gander tucked it under his arm. "Make yourselves at home!" he said. "I'll be back as soon as I can. You'll find everything complete, from rough towels to smooth towels in the bathroom to coffee-tea cups in the dining room. Goodby."

"Oh, wait a minute!" cried Nancy, and she dived into the tiny kitchen of her new Christmas-tree house and came out again with a brand-new broom. "We're going along, Nick and I are, aren't we, Nick? We're going along to help you clean up after the dusty miller before Mother Goose comes home, so she'll find everything spick and span and not scold."

So off they went to Poppleton Bun's mill.

On the way they passed the house that Jack built. And Jack's mother was out on her porch.

"Lock a daisy me! What a muss!" she declared. "No sooner had I put my pail away after my morning's scrubbing, when puff, poof! Along comes a great cloud of flour dust and chaff like white soot, and settles over everything. The miller ought to be sued."

And they passed the shoe house of the Old - Woman - Who - Had - So - Many - Children.

And there she was!

"Hoity-toity!" she was saying. "All this dirt, and only an hour ago the children and I got our shoe-house nicely polished, as we are going to have company! The miller ought to be jailed."

And so it went. Everyone in Mother-Goose Land, or I should say, since Mother Goose was away, everyone in Daddy Gander Land was so put out that nobody thought of being specially civil to the Twins. That's always the way. We're so busy bemoaning the horrid things that nice things pass by us unnoticed. And we do lose a lot by it.

But anyway!

Daddy Gander and his magic dust-pan and the Twins and their broom finally did reach the screeching, groaning, clattering, grinding mill, with flour dust coming out of all its windows, and went inside.

And what a sight met their eyes. No wonder the chaff and flour dust were flying so. Poppleton Bun, the fat old miller, was sound asleep and snoring. And every time he snored out he blew a great cloud of flour dust all over town.

Daddy Gander and the Twins got everything brushed up finally, but by the time they got the old miller awake and everything, it was time for tea.

XXIX. (Continued)

"I cemented many friendships, I cultivated a cynical philosophy—for my own private succor—and although, for a time, there were moments of bewildered groping and of intense rebellion, or a sudden and hideous sense of inferiority, I twisted the necks of those noxious weeds thrusting themselves upward into my consciousness and threatening to strangle it, and trampled them under the heel of my will. It was by no means the least happy interval of my life, for I was very healthy, I took a great deal of outdoor exercise, and there was a sense of freedom I never had experienced before. Love is slavery, and I was no longer a slave.

"After my husband's death, as I told you, I opened the Zattiany palace in Vienna once more (my nephew and his wife preferred Paris, and I leased it from them), expecting to follow the life I had mapped out, until I was too old for interests of any sort. I had a brilliant salon and I was something of a political power. Of course, I knew that the war was coming long before hatreds and ambitions reached their climax, and advised this man of whom I have spoken, Mathilde Loyos, and other friends, to invest large sums of money in the United States. Judge Trent arranged the trusteeship in each case——"

"Where is this man?"

"I do not know. He went down with the old regime, of course, and would be a pauper but for these American investments and a small amount in Switzerland. He has occupied no position in the new Government, although he was a Liberal in politics. What he is doing I have no idea. I have not seen him for years."

"Well—go on."

"It was only when I became aware of a growing mental lassitude, a constant sense of effort in talking everlastingly on subjects that called for constant alertness and often reorientation, that I was really aghast and began to look toward the future not only with a sense of helplessness but of intolerable weariness. I used to feel an inclination to turn my head away with an actual physical gesture when concentration was imperative. I thought that my condition was psychological, that I had lived too much and too hard, that my memory was overburdened and my sense of the futility and meaninglessness of life too overwhelming. But I know now that the condition was physical, the result of the degeneration of certain cells.

"I spent the summer alone on my estate in Hungary, and when it was over I determined to close the palace, in Vienna and remain in the country. I could not go back to that restless high-pitched life, with its ceaseless gaiety on the one hand and its feverish politics and portentous rumblings on the other. My tired mind rebelled. And the long strain had told on my health.

"I lived an almost completely outdoor life, riding, walking, swimming in the lake, hunting, but careful not to overtax my returning strength. I was not in love with life, far from it! But I had no intention of adding invalidism to my other disintegrations. In the evening I played cards with my secretary or practiced at the piano, with some revival of my old interest in music I read little, even in the newspapers. I was become, save perhaps for my music, an automaton. But, although I did not improve in appearance, my health was completely restored, and when the war came I was in perfect condition for the arduous task I immediately undertook. Moreover, my mind, torpid for a year, was free and refreshed for those practical details it must grapple with at once. I turned the Zattiany palace in Buda Pesth into a hospital. And then for four years I was again an automaton, but this time a necessary and useful one. When I thought about myself at all, it seemed to me that this selfless and strenuous interval was the final severance from my old life. If Society in Europe today were miraculously restored to its pre-war brilliancy—indifferent to little but excitement and pleasure—there would be nothing in it for me.

"Now I come to the miracle." And while she recapitulated what she had told the women at Mrs. Oglethorpe's luncheon, Clavering listened without chaos in his accompanying thoughts. "Certainly, man's span is too brief now," she concluded. "He withers and dies at an age when, if he has lived sanely—and when a man abuses his natural functions he generally dies before old age, anyhow—he is beginning to see life as a whole, with that detachment that comes when his personal hold on life and affairs is relaxing, when he has realized his mistakes, and has attained a mental and moral orientation which could be of inestimable service to his fellow men, and to civilization in general. What you call crankiness in old people, so trying to the younger generations, does not arise from natural hatefulness of disposition and a released congential selfishness, but from atrophying glands, and, no doubt, a subtle rebellion against nature for consigning men to ineptitude when they should be entering upon their best period of usefulness, and philosophical as well as active enjoyment of life.

"Science has defeated nature at many points. The isolation of germs, the discovery of toxins and serums the triumph over diseases that once wasted whole nations and brought about the fall of empires, the arrest of infant mortality, the marvels of vivisection and surgery—the list is endless. It is entirely logical, and no more marvellous, that science should be able to arrest senescence, put back the clock. The wonder is that it had not been done before."

She rose, still looking down at the fire, which Clavering had replenished twice. "I am going now. And I have no fear that you will not keep your promise! But remember this when thinking it over: I do not merely look young again, I am young. I am not the years I have passed in this world, I am the age of the rejuvenated glands in my body. Some day we shall have the proverb: 'A man is as old as his endocrines.'

Of course I cannot have children. The treatment is identical with that for sterilization. This consideration may influence you. I shall use no arguments nor seductions. You will have decided upon all that before we meet again. Good night." And she was gone.

METHODIST CHURCHES MADE MANY STRANGE FINDS DURING THE YEAR

Methodist Name Is About to Vanish—The Year 1923 Was a Year of Research, Centenaries and Feasts.

Now that the Methodist name is about to vanish from Canada under church union, the erstwhile adherents of the Wesleyan system are displaying an unusual activity in discovering their own history. Some disclosures were quite unanticipated. One of the events of the past year was the 130th anniversary of the church at Liverpool, Nova Scotia. Research has revealed that in 1793 the Methodists there paid their workmen partially in rum.

Queen Square Church, St. John, N. B., made a celebration during the year because of its 132nd anniversary, without uncovering an alcoholic past. Slightly more infantile are the years of the Hay Bay Church in Ontario, built 130 years ago and in use today only for the annual observance of its origin.

Four Centenaries.

The year that has just gone, possibly the last of the Methodist regime, has witnessed three centenaries in Ontario and one in Quebec, according to information received at church offices in Toronto. Odelltown, in the eastern townships, recalled the erection in 1823 of a Methodist Church which received its baptism of fire as a fort in a battle of the Papineau Rebellion.

The three Ontario centenaries, those of Prospect, West Oxford and Stittsville churches, carried the people back to the year when the first Canada conference was held and the Methodist Missionary Society founded. Since 1823 Stittsville in the Richmond circuit near Ottawa has had 7,000 members. Prospect celebrated its century with pageantry. West Oxford, sturdy amid its gravestones bearing forgotten names, was honored by Methodists of Woodstock and Oxford County as "the mother of the churches."

Varied Origins.

With the celebrations in all the older churches of Ottawa were associated two factors, reminiscences of the early revivals and dates of the arrival of pioneer families. In the Western Provinces such minor affairs as silver anniversaries were kept with much eclat, the church's story in most cases dating from the advent of railways. British Columbia churches, however, seem to have traced their beginnings to the party of missionaries who went out from Upper Canada via the isthmus of Panama in '59.

Two churches of historic interest were closed in the year, the Mount Olivet near Brampton, a settlement whence the faithful Crawfords and other pioneers had departed, and the church at Pictou, Nova Scotia, given over to Presbyterians in view of the imminence of union.

Eloquence and Feasting.

What feastings were interlarded with recitals of historical records! Chickens and pumpkin pie vanished as clerical orators told how West Oxford gave birth to Ingersoll and Woodstock Methodism. At Hastings, Ontario, on the 60th anniversary of the first brick church, the diners had to adjourn to the town hall to find room for sufficient tables.

Family reunions colored many such events. Descendants of the Way and Hart families who brought Methodist ideals into Brock Township, Ontario County, ninety years ago, gathered into the Wilfrid Church anniversary. Uxbridge Town traced its Methodism past the 70 years of its own organized church to the class meetings held in the homes of the Bassingthwaite settlement.

In Barn and Depot.

Boasts of humble beginnings were made by Grace Church, St. Thomas, first assembled in a railway station; by First Church, Hamilton, harking back to services in Richard Springer's barn in Corktown; by Grace Church, Port Dover, which was at first too poor to finish the church it had started and was rescued through a Presbyterian offer of co-operation, and by Central Church, Calgary, which began in a store in 1877.

These regularly recurring "special occasions" are fine opportunities for ladies' aids—and small boys. The chairman of the silver jubilee at Thornton, Simcoe County, remarked that at the opening the ladies had regaled all the crowds that came and still had forty turkeys left untouched. But they were not being outdone by the folk of twenty-five years ago, for he was authorized to state that on the present occasion there were twenty huge chicken pies left in the same unhappy state and that on the next evening the children of the Sunday school, being very good children, would be welcomed to a free feast to wind up the proceedings. (Cheers from those most immediately concerned).

The 75th anniversary at St. Mary's was quite sufficient excuse for a monumental chicken supper. The custom appears to have spread West, for at Carman, Manitoba, the supply of hot fowl seemed inexhaustible. Nor were the programs confined to reminiscences and feasting. At Grace Church, St. Thomas, which first met in a railway station, the club of boys and girls put on a pageant play illustrating their activities. For the centenary at West Oxford the little girls were costumed in styles of fifty and a hundred years ago. Central Church, Windsor, recounted its growth from 75 to 1,300 members in the half-century and the founding of three daughter churches.

In a Calgary Store.

Methodism entered Calgary in 1875, when the future city was a Mounted Police post. The first missionary of any denomination on the ground was the late Rev. John McDougall, D.D. He held the first service in the police barracks and continued after that for two years in the I. G. Baker Company store. In those days stores were ordinarily kept open all day Sunday but they made an exception for the time of service.

In the summer of 1877 Dr. McDougall built the first Methodist church, a log building with shingle roof, the original Central Church, which last year took occasion to hold special services in honor of its founding. Central Church is the mother of twelve Calgary churches.

Historians Are Few.

Unlike most Methodist churches, Carman in Manitoba had an historian for recording steward, and at the last anniversary, probably anticipating the consummation of union, Dr. A. L. McLauchlan presented to the congregation the records which he had compiled from 1877 to the present, covering his own and his successor's term as keeper of the minutes.

Nanaimo, B. C., apparently needs no written records, for there were present at its sixty-fourth anniversary nine of the thirty-six persons who attended the first service on June 26, 1859, and who remember the arrival of the missionary, Arthur Browning from Upper Canada.

So busy were the people with all these local happenings and arrangements that there was quite overlooked the fact that 1923 was the fortieth year since the memorable day, August 29, 1883, when the Methodist Church of Canada, the Methodist Episcopal Church in Canada, the Primitive Methodist Church in Canada and the Bible Christian Church in Canada met in Bridge Street Church, Belleville, and agreed to consummate the last of those many unions which made Methodism one in Canada, Newfoundland and Bermuda.

Punshon and Robson.

Neither did the passing of Mrs. Punshon, a name linked with romance and political struggle, occasion much comment. An article in the Winnipeg Tribune recalls how Rev. W. Morley Punshon, LL.D., desiring to marry the sister of his deceased wife, had to leave England. Coming to Canada as president of the Canada Wesleyan Conference, he was able to marry her here and to return in 1873, after the bitterly contested Deceased Wife's Sister Bill had passed.

There also died Mrs. Robson, widow of the late Ebenezer Robson, D.D., the last living link with British Columbia Methodism in 1859. Going out in 1860 to marry her fiance, then a young missionary, she outlived her husband, first president of the British Columbia Conference, and his brother, Hon. John Robson, Premier of the Province.

Odelltown Church in the eastern townships has two great dates to recall, 1838 when the loyal militia defended its walls in a pitched battle with Papineau's rebels, and 1923 when Rev. John De Putron came from the Channel Islands to organize its Methodist classes into a society of 150 members. At the centennial monuments were unveiled to the officers who by making the church a fort, saved the day in '38 and to the forty-nine pastors who held the church against Satan through 100 years.

Memorials Needed.

Shall such historic places be forgotten as denominational interests wane? The Department of Historical Records, Ottawa, has promised a tablet in front of Odelltown Church. The Ontario Historical Society waits to put a monument at Hay Bay Church until the place, scene of Upper Canada's first Court of Sessions and of her first revival meeting, is properly restored. But what of the abandoned churches on the side lines or the superseded churches in the towns? There is no Methodist society concerned with them or their story.

In Ottawa last year it was left to the newspapers to settle for themselves the problem of deciding whether Dominion Church should date from the completion of the present building in 1874 or from the separation of the Richmond parish from the By Town circuit in 1824.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

ANTI-UNION TRAGEDIES

To the Editor.

Dear Sir,—Your readers, no doubt, read the two recent letters written by E. Scott of Montreal against church union. The first characterized the union as a "backward step" at every turn. This is followed by a worse turn in the disease, and the union is now said to be a series of "tragedies." Both articles are full of sentiment, showing a stubborn opposition to the union, and especially a bitterness against and contempt for the leaders of the union movement. One can scarcely realize that the mind and pen that speaks through the "church record," edited by E. Scott, M.A., D.D., can be the same that can conceive and put in press such extreme contempt for this forward movement, which leaders of Christian thought in three branches of the Church of Christ have inaugurated, and through the courts of the different churches are carrying on to completion. We are reminded of the question of James the Apostle, "Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter?"

But let us examine a few of his so-called "tragedies." The only tragedy we see in "No. 1" is that of organized stubbornness, and the shame that this opposition is all among our Presbyterian brethren. In No. 2 and No. 3 this is a special thrust at the "Moderator of Assembly." The tragedy we see here is in the fact that any Presbyterian can thus pour contempt upon one whom God has so honored "in raising him to the highest honor among his brethren."

In No. 4, with respect to the vote of the members. The tragedy is again in the fact that the opposition has been for twenty years all within the Presbyterian Church. I am ashamed to think that as Presbyterians we should adopt any "holier than thou" attitude. This "eight-year-old vote" spoken of is a long-drawn scheme to shelve the union movement, which should have been consummated years ago. Those who state that the soldiers have not had a chance to vote must know very well that the church member who went overseas did not come back a stickler for denominationalism. A very large part of the increase in membership spoken of are recruits from our Sunday schools, and these, we hope, have not been trained to take any exclusive stand in church matters, but the opposite is true, and the opposition is largely from older people.

In Nos. 5, 6 and 7 the tragedy seen is in the suspicion of our trusted leaders and those of the affiliated churches. The effect on men outside the church will naturally be a commonsense one, as the division of the Protestant Church has been always a source of criticism by the outside world.

No. 10, "The empty church treasury and the hindrance to mission work." It takes a very small excuse to hinder some people from contributing to missions. Christ's Church will continue, never fear. The feeble effort of these people who are diverting their money from His cause and using it to obstruct His work can never succeed in dividing His people. Why should Christian people foster such a spirit of opposition? Our Methodist brethren are engaged in similar mission work in the preaching of the gospel, and thus carrying out Christ's last command. The people in rural charges can find plenty of room for every dollar they can give in paying the minimum stipend, and in doing all they can to help our mission schemes, and the average rural charge is glad of the prospect of union. I have driven five miles to church all my lifetime, and all of this time I have driven past a Methodist Church and through a community of Methodist and Presbyterian brethren. This means more to me than it does to the town man who walks possibly across another block or two on a cement sidewalk in order that he may worship in the church of his choice, and I welcome the day of union, not that we may be nearer to church, but that this community as described may be able to get together in one church, making over rural Canada stronger churches, able to pay good stipends to ministers and saving much more of our givings for the mission schemes of our church. Every rural Presbytery has this same problem. It applies to Ontario as well as the West or the East. It is easily seen if we want to see it.

No. 13, had Dr. Scott been at the great Massey Hall rally in Toronto recently he would have been condemned for such setiment, and would have seen something of the "uplift" that came to those of us unfortunate enough to be there.

No. 14 "The last tragedy." The bill becoming law. The disruption of churches and W. M. societies! Shame on such a proposition! The man who is in the spirit of the man who asked the Saviour, "What wilt thou have me to do?" will never think of disrupting His church, but will be glad to fall in with the majority of his brethren. Don't worry about our women. They were always loyal to Christ and surely not ready to be disrupted, and should be ready to join in a larger field of labor. Besides many a man has been saved through the influence of a godly wife, and has been saved from bitterness and opposition by the quiet good sense of that same woman. They are used to changing their name, and do not worry about it as their love goes along with the change. As an elder of our church I have been honored and helped by it, and it is my duty as such to take up no "divisive course," but to be faithful to her courts, as I have promised to do in my ordination service, to cast no reproach on our beloved leaders who are chosen of God for his service. It is plainly my duty to my church and to my master to obey the voice that so plainly speaks to me. To do otherwise and to accuse our courts and leaders of unfairness, and to call this great spiritual movement at "tragedy" would to me be a tragedy indeed.

Peterborough, Dec. 24, /23.

Dear Sir, — In reference to ad. signed G. A. Leader in Voice of People, would say if the electors endorse J. J. Turner for chief magistrate for 1924, what is his platform in connection with the police department. Taylor and Halloway by their past record state a re-organization is necessary. This means, as anyone knows, a new Chief who will govern himself and run this city with a police force capable of protecting it, but not increasing such force out of all proportion with growth of same. As everyone knows, the ratepayers pay, not the police commissioners. Now what the electors would like to know, how does Mr Turner stand on this question. Is he in favour of a change and what kind of one, or is he supported by a party who would like to run things to suit themselves and have an axe to grind. We want the truth and if every candidate cant' give his opinion on this special subject electors can't be expected to endorse his candidature.

GRADING LAWS NOT OBSERVED IN PETERBORO

Recent Legislation in Regard to Eggs Almost a Dead Letter Here — Inspectors Still Come Around.

NEWS ABOUT EGGS.

Thirty-three years ago Frederik Moller, who died recently, started a campaign for the improvement in quality and production of the Danish egg. He organized egg collecting stations and circles throughout the country, introducing a simple control system where, by means of a number stamped on the egg, it was easy to trace the producer of every single egg. Moller's efforts to improve the quantity and quality of the Danish egg aroused a great deal of criticism and opposition, but he stuck to his task, and succeeded finally in greatly improving the quality of the egg, and in making a good deal of money for his own concern, the "Danish Andels Egg Export."

The efforts of the present Government in Canada to carry out their recent legislation with regard to egg grading are not meeting with any great degree of success, evidently. A Toronto paper of recent date published an article which declared that these regulations are a dead letter as far as the bulk of egg consumers in that city are concerned. "The retail trade of this city have lost confidence in the egg-grading law," says the article, "and many of the storekeepers are making no pretense at keeping it."

"The Government inspectors keep coming around every little while warning us," said one grocer. "I am always civil to them and smile pleasantly at their threats, but I know they have instructions not to go further in enforcing the law."

The "Canadian Grocer," in its December issue, says: "The grading of eggs and the selling of same according to grade is apparently not working out as satisfactorily as the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa anticipated when the Act was enforced. There are many merchants who are endeavoring to carry out the instructions of the department, but on many farmers' markets no attempt is being made in that regard." The article goes on to say that on some farmers' markets all eggs are taken to the market hall and graded by a Government inspector, who issues a card to the grader, with the date of issue stamped on the back. An example of the ingenious manner in which one vendor overruled this precaution was given, in the case of a woman who kept a card, issued for bonafide "fresh extras" on November 24th, and used it on December 18th to replace a card given her for "storage firsts." Customers of this lady were paying 75 cents a dozen, that day's price for "fresh extras," for "storage firsts" that were worth only 35 to 40 cents a dozen. "This woman," says the article, "could have been prosecuted under the Live Stock Products Act, and probably will be if caught again."

One large retail dealer of Peterborough is of the opinion that the Act, if properly and rigidly enforced, would be a great benefit to the buying public. Another makes the assertion that enforcement is almost impossible unless under circumstances working great inconvenience to the grocer, on whom, as open market regulations are enforced in such a slipshod manner, falls the onus of carrying out the regulations.

"I would like to see any of those inspectors come into this store on a busy Saturday and sit down and candle eggs," says this dealer. "Why, there are so many different grades that you would have little mounds all over the place, and besides, it takes a long time to candle them properly, if you are going to pay strict attention to the various gradings."

Eggs should be sold by weight, is the contention of this dealer, who says that the problem of freshness would be solved by the undeniable fact that the older an egg becomes the lighter it gets. And a system of stamping, similar to the aforesaid Danish system, is the proper thing, in order to be able to trace the producer. A reversible rubber stamp, the date to be changed daily, would afford an easy method of dating the eggs.

The season of the year has a great deal to do with the condition of eggs, it is claimed, as those which could still be considered fresh if kept for two weeks in the cold weather might be quite the contrary if a week old, in the hot season. Another thing that effects the temperamental egg is the atmosphere of its storage place. Eggs, it seems, react unfavorably to the dank moisture of the ordinary cellar, and are at their best when stored in a dry refrigerator.

A manager of a big chain of grocery stores in Toronto, who considers the fairest way of selling eggs is by weight, points out that their eggs are sold in cartons secured from the farmer. They are packed by the farmer, contain his name and are passed on in the carton to the customer. The present market price of eggs in Toronto is around 90 cents per dozen for new laid, and in weighing eight cartons one dozen was worth as much as 96 he found as great a difference as 15 cents a dozen in value, according to weight, whereas there was no difference selling by the dozen. In other words, according to weight, cents, and another only 81 cents. It was figured out that the average weight of a carton and the eggs in [illegible] 24 ounces, some weighed more and some less. This meant [illegible] cents a pound for eggs at 85 cents a dozen, or 3 cents an ounce. 15, therefore, a carton was 3 1-2 ounces short, this meant a difference of 10 1-2 cents in value on a dozen eggs. If a carton ran three ounces more than the average, the dozen, he considered, would be worth nine or ten more than the average.

The Government regulations, as distributed to grocers, give a series of involved rules for grading, and catalogue no less than twelve sorts of eggs that may be marketed. Class (1) "fresh" is recorded as "eggs which have not been held under refrigeration at a temperature of 40 degrees Fahrenheit or less, except when in transit, or subjected to artificial preservation."

Another thing which adds to the harassment of life for the great Canadian hen just now, along with the new regulations which provide plenty of inquisitive peering into the recesses of the product for which the hen is most famous is the absence of the proper elements in her diet. Vitamines, those mysterious things which have become so prominent lately in the foods of human beings, are now necessary, it appears, to the hen. Roup, and other scourges which afflict the barnyard cackler are now ascribed, in part, to the "shortage of fat soluble A, which the poultrykeeper does not make up. When hens are given a sufficient supply of the vitamine, fat soluble A, their power of resisting disease is greatly increased."

"Fat soluble A," declares another authority, "is not found in roots and tubers. It is found in butter fat." Therefore the hen must be in need of butter fat in some form.

CURVIN MAY NOT LOSE ALL VALUE

Part of Furs Stolen Had Been Sold Day Previous—He Claims They Were the Property of Buyers.

Thomas Curvin, whose storeroom was entered recently and emptied of furs valued at $1,200 may not lose the entire value of the loot carried off, he told The Examiner.

On the day preceding the morning of the burglary he was called upon by two fur buyers who selected their furs and had them packed in bags ready for shipping. The bags were sealed and addressed, the Examiner is told, and the order was actually given to the express carrier to call for them. It was when the furs were to be brought from the store room that the theft was discovered.

In view of the fact that cheques were handed Mr. Curvin on the night of the sale, he believes that ownership passed at that time, and when the furs were later stolen they were not his property. However, a legal battle is probable to decide the issue, he said, payment of the cheques having been stopped and no definite statement can be given until its completion. About $800 worth of furs remained after the sale, and if he succeeds in his suit this will be the total amount of Mr. Curvin's loss.

REQUEST CENTRAL TO 'PHONE VOTERS.

Sarnia Alderman Conceives New Labor of Service For Telephone Operators.

SARNIA, Dec. 29.—"Tinkle, Tinkle Little Telephone Bell" is the novel method of getting out a big vote for the civic elections on January 1, Alderman Jas. Barr making the suggestion that the Telephone operators ring every householder with a 'phone in his home on New Years' day and request him and her to go out and poll a vote for Mayor, Aldermen and Hydro Commission, thus insuring a full expression of the will of the ratepayers. The system, it is said, has been successfully tried out in other cities and Sarnia is willing to try it at the forthcoming election. A letter has been forwarded to the local manager requesting a call from central to every telephone subscriber and if he accepts the suggestion, the 1924 elections will be the first telephone election in Sarnia's history.

1—Population of Peterborough, 1922 —21,661.
2—Total Debenture Debt, 1922 — $3,765,990.
3—If you own three houses valued at $4,000 each, city receives in taxes from same approximately $255.00 per year.
4—In other words, city has equal to a mortgage of $4,000 on the three houses at almost 6½ per cent., or equal to the city owning one of these houses.
5—The higher the taxes, the more rent landlord has to charge tenant.
6—In face of the above, I cannot support the building of a Technical School at the present time.
7—I would be in favour of building a Technical School when city makes a substantial growth, both in building of houses and factories, and in population, so that extra taxes would be paid to City Treasurer to take care of same.
8—If absolutely necessary to enlarge the Collegiate Institute, I would be in favour of same, but for no other purpose.

Respectfully yours,

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro :

BOARD OF EDUCATION

FIVE REASONS why I still advocate a Combination Technical and High School Extension:

(1) —BECAUSE it would relieve the present overcrowding, and provide accommodation for many years.

(2)—BECAUSE it would give a large group of Students, who under the Adolescent Act must attend full time or part time day classes, the form of education which is better fitted to their needs than the Collegiate course.

(3)—BECAUSE if the city spends any money in the near future on increased facilities for Higher Education, the needs of all classes of Adolescents should be met.

(4)—BECAUSE an extension built at the rear of the Collegiate combining the two classes of Education, Technical and High School, would cost the city less because of the large Government grants given to Technical Education, to build, equip and maintain, than a smaller building used exclusively by Collegiate pupils.

(5)—BECAUSE when the city is large enough to support a Technical School, no part of the proposed extension need be scrapped, as all Technical work is carried on in ordinary class rooms, specially equipped. With the special equipment removed, these class rooms would be available for Collegiate purposes.

The plan I have outlined above, is the one generally followed by the smaller cities. It appeals to me as practical, economical, and fair to all classes of Students and Ratepayers.

SAILING SHIPS LIE AT ANCHOR

Future For Them As Commerce Carriers If Built to Be Fitted With Engines.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Presiding at the annual meeting of the British Sailing Ship Owners' Association, A. W. Daniels said sixty per cent. of British sailing ships engaged in the deep sea trade were tied up. There was a reduction of 94,673 tons in the United Kingdom and domining sailing tonnage between June, 1922 and June, 1923, while the world's sailing tonnage had decreased by 1,260,576 tons in that period.

These figures, he added, did not include vessels fitted with auxiliary engines, the development of which had been remarkable. There were 45 ships of 13,000 tons gross so fitted last year, but now there were 1,149 ships of 458,585 tons fitted with auxiliary power.

"There is no doubt," said Mr. Daniels, "that there is a future for these ships, especially where they are ships that have been designed and built to be fitted with engines."

To The Electors!

I beg to announce that I am a candidate for re-election to the position of Deputy-Reeve, an office to which I was elected a year ago, lacking only three votes to poll as many as were given altogether to the two candidates who opposed me. So far I am the only candidate in the field who has a military record. I served overseas, and as a member of the Council always advocated the erection of a suitable memorial to the brave men who lost their lives in the Great War. I assure the people of Campbellford that if re-elected I will pursue the same course until the town has honored itself by paying some material tribute to its heroic dead.

I have no apologies to offer for my general record in the Council. I have striven at all times to do the best for the interests of the town. My official acts are before the public, and I confidently leave the issue to the voters.

To the Electors:

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Having been nominated as a Candidate for your Board of Education, I have decided to accept same for the following reasons:

1—That I am strongly in favour of Technical Education.

2—That I am not in favour of building any addition to the Collegiate Institute or Public Schools at the present time, unless absolutely compulsory.

3—That I am in favour, if necessary, of making any extension to the Collegiate, contain accommodation for Technical as well as Academic Education.

The local intermediate basketball team who meet Association College crack team here on Monday night are practising faithfully for the game. They work out for nearly an hour on the gym floor every evening and are in the pink of condition and form. Combination is being stressed and in this department the locals hope to overlap the visitors who will certainly be stronger as individual players. The coach "Doug." Loomis promises one of the best drilled Intermediate teams that ever represented Peterborough on a basketball floor. Many of the Petes former stars who a few years ago carried home the Intermediate championship have come out and are showing that they have all their old pep and dash. Also several good players are home visiting for the holidays and with a few new comers will add materially to the strength of the quinteite. The team who will represent the city has not yet been chosen. The coach will find that he has a job on his hands owing to the dearth of good players. However, all who have watched the squad in action know that Peterborough will have a real team to meet the invaders.

Besides the real feature between the Association College and the local Intermediates there will also be a fast preliminary game between the Senior "Y" team and the De Laval team, who are battling for first place in the Girls' League Basketball fans would certainly be well advised to spend Monday evening watching these two fast games. The principal fixture will give the fans a chance to get a line on the American style of basketball and compare it to our methods.

CANDIDATES IN CITY ELECTION DEFINE ISSUES

J. J. Turner Attacks His Opponents for Dragging Minor Family Troubles Before the Dominion as Issues- Taylor Scored by Holloway.

SPEECH BY CATES

At a joint meeting of the Owners' and Tenants' Association and the Local Council of Women, held last night in the hall of the Public Library, the three Mayoralty candidates, three of those who aspire to the Aldermanic board, and three of the ten who are contesting the Board of Education vacancies defined their platforms and set the issues for the election which takes place on Tuesday. There was a good attendance, practically every seat in the auditorium being occupied, and the meeting was marked by the absence of heckling. Alderman M. J. Maher, president of the Owners' and Tenants' Association, presided; Frank Dobbin, secretary, acted as timekeeper; and the Local Council of Women was represented by Mrs. A. Mowat, president, and Mrs. A. Stevenson, first vice-president, who acted as spokeswomen for the Council.

The discussion of most of the candidates followed closely their previous declarations at the G. W. V. A. meeting and on nomination day, and the only new viewpoint introduced was by John J. Turner, Mayoralty candidate, who discredited the police controversy as an issue in the coming election, and declared himself in favor of a constructive progressive policy that will bring Peterboro to the advanced position it should hold in the Dominion. He also expressed his regret that the Mayor had entered the lists for another tilt at the Mayoralty crown this year.

Mayor Taylor reviewed the work of the City Council under his leadership, indicating that the aim of the Council to pare expenses without hampering efficiency had been carried out.

Dr. W. T. Holloway joined issue with Mr. Turner on the police question, stating as his opinion that the question whether the City Council has control of police expenditures is a question of sufficient importance to occupy first place in the deliberations of the people, and is one also of province-wide interest.

He attacked Mayor Taylor's attitude toward the police force, following His Worship's failure to support a similar measure introduced two years ago by Magistrate Langley.

Alderman Nagle Phelan reviewed the work of his committee and repeated his determination to stand by the position the City Council took in the police controversy.

Alderman Stocker referred only in brief terms to his work on the Board of Works, and devoted his allotted time to a discussion of the school problem, firmly declaring himself in favor of technical education.

James Gates, in a happy little address marking his debut in public speaking, declared himself in favor of road building by city labor and said the first plank in his platform is "economy."

Dr. John J. Craig, Ernest F. Reid and Mrs. Kate Morris, candidates for the Board of Education, aligned themselves in favor of a combination school, with reservations as to time and expenditure. Mrs. Morris challenged the remaining aspirants to the Board who were absent to declare their views on this issue.

Alderman Maher outlined the aims of the Owners' and Tenants' Association, saying its object is to provide a clearing house where reasonable expressions of opinion may be voiced and discussed. It is more of an educational society than a political, and does not profess to govern or influence the city administration by any other means than an expression of opinion.

Mayor W. H. Taylor.

Mayor Taylor, speaking without notes, recounted briefly the achievements of his Council during the past year, paying special attention to the paving programme instituted this year. Arrangements are completed, he said, whereby the paving will be commenced early next spring instead of waiting as heretofore until midsummer. He also referred to the sewage disposal plant, in regard to which the city has entered a controversy with the Provincial Board of Health, the city favoring a two-tank system, while the Board advocated the installation of an activated sludge type disposal plant. Mayor Taylor said he expects ultimately the city will gain its point, and meantime work has steadily progressed on the construction of the outfall sewer.

John J. Turner.

Mr. Turner declared in his opening remarks that he stands on the same platform as two years ago when he contested the Mayoralty with Mr. Taylor. He is confident, he said, that this time he will "make a home run."

"I was a little disappointed that Mayor Taylor saw fit to enter the field this year, because I thought he would have been satisfied with the honor accorded him in his return for two years and would have retired this year in favor of someone else. This present year I was approached by a number of citizens and urged to contest the seat with Mayor Taylor, but in view of precedents which I found and the fact that it was the season of good-will among men I did not oppose him, and he had the second term by acclamation. I thought I would not have Mayor Taylor's opposition this election. However, it is anyone's privilege, and Mayor Taylor is quite justified."

Mr. Turner remarked that he thought more might have been made by Mayor Taylor of the work of the Council this year, and was surprised to find the issue set by the Mayor in a detail which should never have assumed the magnitude it has. "You must have noticed areas of land," he said, "which are lying vacant, surrounded by pavements and sewers, which cost the city money to build and install. The making of an issue out of a detail which the public is sorry for will not help to build up the waste places in the city, and unless we do this we will not progress as we hope to.

Mr. Turner told of a man at present in Oshawa who is supporting his family in Peterboro with money he earns in the motor town because he could not get work here. This man told Mr. Turner he was ashamed sometimes to say he belonged to Peterboro. "You will not get the highest and best by dragging family disputes before the public and making them an issue. Every one of us has his family and business troubles but they have not been broadcast throughout the Dominion. It is only when we attend to them quietly that we overcome them."

Build up the City.

There is only one way of developing the city, Mr. Turner said, and that is by increasing the population. The population he had in mind is that which comes with new industries. The city has every convenience that can be given the investing public, and by sidewalks and sewers the city is already provided for a population of 50,000. "I would make it my special effort to endeavor to induce the investing public and manufacturers looking for locations to come to Peterborogh," he declared.

"These are over and above and are larger than the issues which have been set before us, and the washing of small details in public will not induce people to come to us, or enhance Peterborough in the eyes of the dominion in which the city should be no small parcel."

Attacking Mayor Taylor's election platform appearing in the press, Mr. Turner said "economy" is a word often abused. "How is this saving to be effected?" he asked. "By reducing the wages of employees of this city? Are officers and employees getting too much? How is this economy to be effected? I would like to know."

Regarding the reduction of the tax rate by two mills, Mr. Turner remarked that the assessment total is constantly increasing.

Mr. Turner remarked that those who have known him longest will speak for his honesty of purpose and his integrity.

Alderman W. T. Holloway.

Ald. Holloway repeated his declaration of policies as laid down by him on three previous occasions, but broke new ground when he scored the purchase of police uniforms outside Peterborough, and attacked the Mayor on his police reorganization programme.

Expressing himself as strongly in favor of employing local labor wherever possible, Ald. Holloway referred to the placing of an order through Mr. Turner as agent for uniforms for the police force totalling $1024. The firemen, he said, asked for a tender, and had the uniforms made in Peterboro, and the police commission might have kept the $1024 in the city.

Remarking that Kitchener is policed with a force of 8 men, he said he would vote to reduce the police force by two men. This is no small question, he said, in answer to Mr. Turner's charge. The $3000 a year which would be saved by the elimination of two men would amount to a big sum over a number of years. "We felt we were fighting an issue we thought was important." (Hear, hear.) "We still think it important, and we believe we are right. I have no quarred with the police force. We are here to stand up for the people's rights, and I am going to fight for them."

Referring to Mayor Taylor's stand on the police question, two years ago when the matter was brought up in the commission, Dr. Holloway said he did not desire to abuse public officials, but "I think our troubles might have been avoided if Magistrate Langley had received a seconder two years ago for his motion that the police force be reduced by two men." (Applause and cheers.)

In closing Ald. Holloway advocated cooperation between the Manufacturers' Association, the Chamber of Commerce and the Local Council of Women, and the City Council, with the appointment of a member of each of the associations to meet with the Council in an advisory capacity.

Aldermanic Candidates.

On motion of W. R. Morris and Dr. N. H. Sutton, the Aldermanic candidates and Board of Education candidates were limited to ten minutes in their speaking.

Mrs. A. Stevenson, who spoke on behalf of the Local Council of Women, asked the prospective Aldermen to state their stand regarding the providing of safety improvements at the bathing beaches as recommended after a recent inspection by the Ontario Safety League. She also asked for a clear and definite statement from the Board of Education candidates as to their stand on the school question.

Ald. Phelan recounted his efforts through four years' service on the council and repeated his statement that the city is as sound financially as any of its size in Canada, receiving the best price for its bonds, "even if we haven't any money to pay the police force," he added.

He repeated the history of the police dispute from its commencement, and said that he would support a motion to improve the bathing beaches, but would not bind himself as to how far he would go.

Alderman Stocker declared: "I am first and last in favour of a combination school." It will cater to everybody, he said.

"I have devoted all my time to the work of the city during the the time I have been on the Council, and I will continue to do it if re-elected," he said.

James Gates apologised for his lack of acquaintance with public platforms except as a soloist in a musical programme, and followed with what was considered one of the most concise speeches of the evening. Mr. Gates' platform is "economy," he said. "I will do all I can for the city as you know I have done during the past four years. I am in favour of road paving being done by city labour, and to do away with the contractor who gets so much per cent. on all the money that is spent. It is not my privilege to criticise the work of the City Council during the past year, but it is for the electors to say on polling day whether they are satisfied."

During his four years as caretaker of Inverlea bathing beach, he said he had given special attention to little children. During two weeks when he was away sick there were almost two fatalities when a lady from America nearly lost her life and another occasion when another lady was in a precarious position. "She was a middle-aged lady" Mr. Gates said, "who thought because young girls could go of the diving board she could too. Consequently by jiminy cripes she was nearly drowned. That was very foolish of that old lady, wasn't it?" (laughter.)

Regarding the pouring of sewage from factories around the bathing beach, Mr. Gates said he had taken the matter up years ago. "I spoke to T. Tooms on the question of the overflow. I told Tommy (laughter) this was occurring, and it should be put a stop to. The consequence is it is still in that condition. If elected as I really think I shall be" (laughter and cheers) "I will do the best I can for the city. Wishing you all a prosperous new year, ladies and gentlemen, I remain yours....."

Mr. Gates sat down amid loud applause just as Mr. Dobbin was about to call "time' on him.

Board of Education

Dr. John J. Craig, Ernest F. Reid and Mrs. Kate Morris spoke in order named, nothing new being broached in their statements.

Mrs. Morris, in fact, declared she was fighting on exactly the same ground on which she took her stand two years ago.

Dr. Craig said public school taxes have increased during the past five years by $93,406.79 and Collegiate Institute taxes by $22,540.89, a total of $115,447.668. In view of this he does not think the present an opportune time to commence construction of a new school of any description. When it becomes necessary to erect a school he advocates a combination school.

Ernest F. Reid also said he is strongly in favor of technical education, but not of building at the present time. He remarked that no policies had been stated by the old members of the Board except Mrs. Morris.

Mrs. Morris reviewed the entire history of the school project from Dr. Miller's visit when he reported technical education essential down to the present day. She remarked that many of the missing candidates are opposed to the combination school and challenged them to state their case to the people.

Mr. E. F. Mason returned to the Utilities Commission by acclamation reported on the work of the Commission during his tenure of office.

A proposal by Dr. N. H. Sutton that the meeting endorse candidates who favor the combination school was lost on an explanation by Alderman Maher that the Association does not desire to bind itself in that way. The object is merely to bring out knowledge and encourage a study of politics.

Absent candidates were: for the Aldermanic Board; Alderman E. M. Turner, Alderman M. McIntyre, Robert Jones. For the Board of Education: Dr. Edward Wood, W. A. Richardson; E. B. Fowler, H. J. McCannan, Dr. H. M. Yelland, J. T. Braund, Dr. F. C. Neal.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinion and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29—(United Press).—With Steel common heading the upward procession, stocks climbed generally higher in the brief session of the stock market which closed the week. Issues recently under tax selling pressure especially the fertilizer and shipping shares and the North Western Rails displayed definite indications that the liquidation had been pretty well completed and that stocks of this class were selling at levels attractive to new buying.

Steel Common flirted with par all morning, maintaining tremendous activity above 99, but interests sponsoring its market appeared to be nursing their strength to shove the Premier industrial above its face value as part of Wall streets New Year's celebration.

Oil shares continued to respond to the further indications of improvement in the industry, reflected in further advances in crude oil prices. Stocks like Atlantic refining and Houston oil scored sharp gains and active issues of the oil group were in best demand at advancing prices.

Additional indications that various groups were recovering from the tax selling were supplied in the final dealings when a rallying tendency developed in stocks like Northern Pacific, Great Northern preferred and continuing in the fertilizer and shipping shares.

With the North Western Rails acting better some of the Standard carrier issues developed a better tone under the leadership of Union Pacific which made a new high on the movement at 128½.

Publication of the details of Secretary Mellon's tax reduction program and the waning changes of passing a bonus measure over President Coolidge's vote too furnished the bas is for a generally buoyant opening of the stock market to-day.

The oil shares displayed the strongest tone reflecting the action of Magnolia Petroleum in meeting the advance of ten to fifteen cents a barrel in crude oil in Oklahoma and Kansas. Houston Oil was the outstanding feature of this class spurting 2½ points to 72.

With Steel common in brisk demand at the best levels of the current up swing stock maintained exceptional activities in the first half hour. Aside from steel however, none of the Industrial leaders made further progress on the advance but substantial gains took place in numerous specialties.

United States realty sold at 99¾ against Friday's low of 94, reflecting the settlement of the wage question for building workers. United States Realty owns the Fuller Construction Company, the largest organization of its kind in the world.

Folks Back Home

Sketches by J. H. Striebel

By Robert Quillen

Bob Haynes

Bob Haynes was the most popular man in town. He was clean without being a prude; he was a liberal spender and yet paid his debts promptly; and he was invariably cheerful. He liked everybody and everybody liked him.

In our town however, a man may have all of the virtues and yet fail to win complete approval unless he will fight when a fight seems necessary. There was no occasion for Bob to fight, but this very freedom from trouble caused many to wonder if he would come clean in time of emergency.

In due time the emergency appeared. Todd Walker tried to collect a bill that Bob thought he didn't owe. Several men were standing about; and when Bob refused to pay, they looked for a row, for Walker was a bully and quick to begin hostilities. "You'll pay men," bellowed Walker, "or take a lickin'." Bob got out his purse and paid and walked away.

He was no longer cheerful after that. He avoided people and walked with hanging head. He was ashamed, and he knew that he had lost some measure of the community's respect.

People forgot about it after a while, but Bob didn't. And one day in the drug store he slapped Walker's face without provocation and squared away for battle. He was soundly whipped before spectators interfered, but he regained his self-respect, and now he is again invariably cheerful and the community finds no fault in him.

Famous Guys

NOAH: A very great while ago, so the story has it, there was a dry and fertile land where the Mediterranean sea now lies, and the people who dwelt there were a sorry lot, forever raising the devil. They were so sorry, in fact, that the peace and dignity of the world necessitated removing them from the scene and making a fresh star. As a means of eliminating them a flood was chosen as the agency most certain to be thorough.

Only one man knew the flood was coming. His name was Noah, and he was the original disciple of preparedness. He began to build a ship to house his family and the animals he wished to save, and his hard-boiled neighbors stood near and kidded him. They believed in letting each day take care of itself.

After a time Noah and his menagerie went aboard and then the rain began. It fell in sheets, and an earthquake split the neck of land connecting Morocco and Spain and let the ocean in, so that everybody except the duck family was out of luck.

Everything turned out all right. The water receded and Noah's craft ran aground, and the old chap selected a good farm site and started the human race all over again.

Many critics condemn Noah because he got illuminated just after gathering the first grape crop, but the more charitable remember their own weakness and forgive him everything except his failure to swat the two flies and the two mosquitoes.

Little Willie Willis received much sympathy Saturday when he appeared on the street limping painfully. It transpired that a piece of kindling wood had struck him above the right eye.

The Butcher Boy and His Bride

And the House Goes Up

"Eight men are on the job, for fine weather continues, and they too friendly eye of the girl herself."

The new bungalow that will house the girl across the street and Hiram, the butcher boy, is in process of building. All day long the neighborhood is enlivened with the rasp of saws and the cheering chorus of hammers. Eight men are on the job, for the work must be pushed while the fine weather continues, and they work under the watchful and none too friendly eye of the girl herself, who sits all day on a pile of lumber and silenty encourages industry. Hiram is there at intervals, but it is not often that he can get away from the butcher shop, and the girl has no more pressing duty than that of discouraging man's inherent tendency to grow the work must be pushed while the work under the watchful and none slack when the boss isn't watching.

There appears to be some nervous strain about the business of watching workmen, and when the girl came over to tell us about it as we sat at breakfast yesterday morning there seemed to be a sharper note in her voice and a harder look in her eye.

"You know we are building with day labor," she explained, "and the more time they kill the more the house is going to cost us. It's awfully exasperating, watching them. It takes three men to drive a nail—one to hold it, and one to hit, and one to grunt. And their pipes keep going out all the time, so they have to stop and hunt all over everywhere for a match; and when two of them are working close together they get into an argument about politics or something and don't strike a lick until I go over and stand right close. They look daggers at me, then, and I don't care. Me and Hiram haven't got money enough to pay for anybody taking the rest cure; and as long as they're paid to work I think they ought to work. It gives me the creeps to watch them poke along, and every time one stops to sharpen a pencil I can see another nickel slipping."

What a delightful, innocent youngster she is! Because she looks forward to the business of putting up curtains, the carpenters seem to drag on heavy feet. But the more worry they cause her now, the less she will have to worry about five years from now when these houses built in a day are leaning awry and selecting a soft place to fall on.

PADDOCK SUPPORTED BY COLLEGIATE ATHLETES

Convention of the U. S. National Collegiate Association Reserve Right to Determine Eligibility of Their Students.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 29.—The United States National Collegiate Athletic Association yesterday reaffirmed its support of Charlie Paddock, University of Southern California sprinter, in adopting a resolution providing that hereafter United States colleges and universities reserve the right to determine the eligibility of their students to participate in athletic meets in the United States or elsewhere.

The Association also made public correspondence respecting the disbarment of Paddock from the 1924 Olympic team at the instance of the United States Amateur Athletic Union.

Was Suspended

The resolution declared that the Association had been requested by the Paris University Club to secure the attendance of United States college students in the international university meet in Paris, May 4. Paddock entered the meet as an accredited representative of his university. Having competed in the event, the resolution continued, he was suspended by the Amateur Athletic Union, and "thereby under the rules adopted by the International Olympic Committee, is ineligible to participate in the forthcoming Olympic Games."

The National Collegiate Athletic Association recognizes the jurisdiction of the American Olympic Association in all matters pertaining to United States representation in the Olympic Games, the resolution said.

Traveling Expenses

Correspondence made public included a statement from L. C. Schroeder of the French Y.M.C.A. Paris, to the effect that the only expenses Paddock received for his participation in the international meet in 1923 were those which included his traveling expenses from Pasadena to Paris and return.

A telegram from W. B. Bovard, Secretary of the Faculty Athletic Committee, to Professor Lester Ayre, of the University of Washington, was also made public. It states that the colleges in Southern California are friendly to the United States A.A.U., but what they feel that Paddock is being unduly punished considering that he followed the advice of the biggest college authorities. College support for the Southern Pacific A.A.U., will probably be withdrawn, the telegram said, unless Paddock is reinstated by the A.A.U.

SKATING FINALS IN SNOW SQUALLS

Winners of U. S. Olympic Semi-Finals at Saranac Lake.

SARANAC LAKE, N.Y., Dec. 28.—The United States Olympic speed skating team sprinted through a series of snow squalls on Pontiac rink here to-day in the semi-finals of the tryout preliminary to sailing for Europe Charles Jewtraw, Lake Placid, won the 500 meter race; Valentine Bialis, Lake Placid, won the 1500 event, and Joe Moore, New York, and Bialis, were tied for the first place in the 5000 meter race which closed the meet. The team will go to the Mirror Lake rink at Lake Placid tomorrow for the finals.

The snow squalls and a heavy wind combined to slow the races, and the skaters further were hindered by the necessity of skating in two tracks, the Swiss custom. Despite the continued mild weather the course was in fair shape. A good crowd cheered the skaters as they appeared in their Olympic suits of white.

The summaries:

1500 meters, (1643.31 yards)—Valentine Bialis, Lake Placid, first; Jewtraw, second; Moore, third. Time 2.49 1-5.

5000 meters, (3.105 miles)—Moore and Bialis tied for first place; Kasky second; Wiliam Steinmetz, Chicago, third. Time 9.40 1-5.

TEX O' OURKE'S UNIQUE ADVENTURE

American Seeks to Put British Heavyweights Back On Their Feet.

BY JOE WILLIAMS.

Tex O'Rourke, an American gentleman of fistic inclinations, is overseas trying to put the English heavyweight situation back on its feet.

If you happen to be acquainted with the English heavyweight situation, even from a discreet distance, you will readily concede that it needs to be put back on its feet.

It has been a great number of years since England has had a heavyweight capable of remaining on his feet for any specified length of time.

The art of fighting as practiced by Bombardier Wells, Joseph Beckett, Fighting Dick Smith, Bandsman Rice, Frank Goddard and other modern English heavyweights in the past has consisted largely of taking a robust sock on the whiskers and dropping gracefully to the canvas. No English heavyweight looks natural anymore unless he is stretched out full length on the floor listening to the soul-satisfying count of the referee.

And the astonishing thing about this is that England's heavyweights in the olden days ruled the world's fistic realms.

Great In Olden Days.

Historians have told you about James Figg, the first ring champion; Jim Belcher, one of the first of the scientific school; Tom Cribb, a marvel in his time; Tom Sayers, possibly the greatest of all English title holders, and Charley Mitchell, a middleweight who held the great John L. even in a bout that lasted more than three hours.

It is difficult to reconcile the glorious traditions of the English prize ring with the cold, clammy realities of the present.

The courageous Mr. O'Rourke has gone over there to find out what's the matter. We hear that he is making satisfactory progress, having established a cauliflower clinic on the outskirts of London and recruited a small army of non-collapsible giants. The one inexorable law in the O'Rourke camp is that no fighter shall drop without actually having been hit.

Seriously, O'Rourke believes he has unearthed three promising prospects, and expects to turn them loose in the professional rings against second-raters very shortly. The three are all youngsters who stand 6 feet in height and weigh in the desired neighborhood of 190 pounds.

Three Young Comers.

Isaac Ingelton was a policeman in Liverpool until O'Rourke found him, William Prestage was a boilermaker and Leslie Price an assistant in the management of his father's hotel. None of them had ever done any fighting. They had the build, the "looks" and a desire to box, so the American took them on.

Naturally O'Rourke is teaching his British pupils the American system of battling. And what is probably more important, the American system of training. O'Rourke doesn't get a terrific kick out of the English idea of stopping for tea at 4 o'clock, or inhaling a few cigarets to sooth ruffled nerves.

"I make them spend the morning doing road work," O'Rourke writes, "and the afternoon in the ring fighting.

However, a note of melancholy creeps into O'Rourke's words when he says any one of his three star pupils is good enough to beat Beckett right now.

You can imagine how much farther the boys must come yet in order to whip a real fighter.

LEADS FOR LADIES' PRIZE.

Miss M. Windsor is leading for the ladies' prize this week with a high single of 192. This is a wonderful score for a high single for a lady and will take some beating. Miss E. Rae had the high single this afternoon when she rolled 159, 2 pins more than Miss Johnston who had the high score yesterday.

LEADS FOR MEN'S PRIZE.

M. J. Rooney has the high score in five pins for three games up to date. He rolled 79 for his three games, rolling 277, 217 and 302. This is a nice score and will take some beating. It might be noticed that Rooney is a bowler in the Brinton Carpet League.

YULE REUNITES HOPPE FAMILY

Billiard Champion, Estranged and Sued Over Son, Patches Up Domestic Rift — Played With Heart Heavy.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Something was the matter with Willie Hoppe, world's champion billiard player, when he defended his title against Welker Cochran in the Hotel Pennsylvania on the night of November 26, last.

It wasn't the old-time Hoppe, the master billiard strategist with nerves of steel guiding each shot. It was a pale, harried Hoppe, a nervous, pale Hoppe, who fought for his crown.

Hoppe lost that match.

"The old boy lost his nerve—he's been playing billiards too long. Watch him now, they never come back."

That's what the wise men of the sports world began saying.

The next night when Hoppe walked to the billiard table and chalked his cue his face was just as pale but his hands were steadier. Before the night was over his friends noted that he had pulled himself together.

The Truth Comes Out.

It was the old Hoppe who was making those brilliant masse shots, those remarkable runs—even if his face was tense and set, and the eyes snapped like anvil sparks.

Hoppe won from Cochran that night. That made it a tie.

A few days later, in Chicago, they played the tie off.

Hoppe won again.

"They do come back—sometimes. Didn't think Willie Hoppe could do it."

Now the truth come out about that first night, when a pale, harried Hoppe faced the contender.

When Hoppe walked out of his home, No. 141 West Ninety-fifth street, to play that match he also walked out of the heart of his wife forever—so he thought. And from that martial misunderstanding he walked into the billiard room where he was to defend his crown—the billiard championship of the world.

That's why Hoppe was off his form that night.

But Hoppe proved himself of great championship calibre when he came back—with his heart still heavy.

That's that part of the tale.

Must Produce Son.

Now, here's where the court action begins:

Hoppe took his little son with him, leaving his daughter with his wife. The wife went into court and got a writ of habeas corpus, requiring Hoppe to show cause why he should not return his son to the mother.

THEN—

Came Christmas. A bit of the Christmas spirit may have entered the hearts of both husband and wife. Maybe in the meanwhile they decided the flame of their love hadn't died out. Anyway, that's the secret. But this much is known: that whit has been withdrawn. And listen to this, said last night by Thomas W. Walsh, father of Hoppe's wife:

"My daughter and my son-in-law have agreed to come together again and have joint guardianship of their children. The little boy returned yesterday. The little girl was always with her mother.

"Mr. Hoppe is at present with his mother, but I am confident that he will return here shortly to remain. My daughter is out at present.

Love Will Tell.

"Where? O, talking things over with Mr. Hoppe, I believe. It was all just a rather silly but unimportant disagreement.

Maybe.

But it also was a disagreement which almost toppled the crown of Willie Hoppe's head.

If, when they "talked things over last night," the flame of love again was kindled in their hearts, well—watch Hoppe the next time he plays. He may make a new world's record at the game of which he is the grand old master.

Love has caused greater things than that to come to pass.

SHE MOVED TO FINALS IN MEN'S GOLF TOURNEY

LONG BEACH, Calif., Dec. 29.—Golf is one sport at which women cannot hope to compete on even terms with men. Generally speaking, a man player is about 10 strokes better than a woman. In other words Max Marston, amateur champion(could give Edith Cummings, queen of America's women golfers, 10 strokes, and yet come mighty close to winning the match.

This being true, the feat of Mrs. S. R. Boyce of Madison, Wis., in reaching the finals in the recent Log Beach tournanment in which she was the only woman contestant, created somewhat of a sensation. Mrs. Boyce was beaten in the finals by T. C. Roberts, a tournament player of some experience, but not until she had held her masculine foe even for 30 holes. Roberts won out at the thirty-fourth green. His card showed 12 holes in par.

Mrs. Boyce registered birdies on four holes, including a two at the tricky seventeenth. In the semi-final match the Wisconsin visitor trimmed F. F. Bovee, one of the tournament favorites, by the emphatic margin of 7 to 6.

Mrs. Boyce is a comparative newcomer in golf, having been playing the game less than three years. Last summer she was beaten in the Wisconsin state championship by Bernice Wall, the champion, a one-stroke margin determining the match.

AT THE GRAND.

A good-sized audience was present at the Grand Opera House last evening for the picture play "Insinuation," with which its author and producer and star, Miss Margery Wilson, appears in person. Miss Wilson was introduced by Manager H. Bickell, who also announced her appearance at the conclusion of the picture.

The picture, with the personal appearance of the star in conjunction with its showing, offers a unique opportunity to Peterboro audiences to see a real, honest to goodness movie star and hear her talk. Miss Wilson give an entertaining chat on movie life in general, with reference in particular to many of the silver screen's celebrites, including Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, Lillian Gish, and small Jackie Coogan.

"OVER NIGHT" IS GOOD COMEDY

Rex Company Scored Another Success

(Kingston Standard)

For some time now Rex Snelgrove has been promising something new, funny and good as his offering for this week and last night a well-filled house at the Grand had an opportunity of seeing Rex and his company make good the promises in their presentation of that "comedy with a difference," "Over Night," one of Oliver Morosco's best, a series of laughs from start to finish. The whole company had a chance to shine and they rose to the occasion well, and from the first curtain till the last the audience was kept in roars of laughter, caused by the clean comedy of the plot and by the very capable work of the cast. All the way from Rex and Zana down through the list the presentation was well staged, and the audience left the theatre satisfied that Rex and his associates were leaving nothing undone to please their patrons. Those who desire to see this capable company at its best cannot afford to miss seeing "Over Night" either tonight, to-morrow matinee or evening. It is well worth while.

To tell too much about the plot would be to spoil the interest for those who are intending to see it for themselves, and to try to pick out the "best players in the cast would be trying to do the impossible. Each member has a difficult task but each rises capably to the limit, there is a smoothness about the work which proves again that besides doing well drilled, the members have abilities in stage work which have earned them their high places. The abilities were well shown last night.

THE ORIGINALS IN "RAPID FIRE"

The original Third Division C.E.F. Entertainers, now known as the "Originals," and who toured Canada last season with their brilliant revue "Full O' Pep" will appear here at the Grand Opera House next Friday and Saturday, Jan. 4-5, with their latest and greatest musical revue "Rapid Fire', with all the old favorites who have delighted local audiences so often in the past. These include the fifteen former members of the Original Dumbell organization and two new entertainers of note.

Everything in the show is entirely new nothing being used from any former production. Our ever welcome friend "Red" Newman is going stronger than ever and is featuring Albert Chevaliers famous number "Knocked 'em in the Old Kent Road" together with "The Stoker" and a half dozen other sure fire hits making the finest collection of musical numbers he has ever offered us. Jock Holland, the chic 'Leading Lady has a wonderful wardrobe with some of his costumes costing several hundred dollars each. His new musical numbers are particularly note worthy and he spent last summer in London and Paris picking out the best he could find in the way of songs, costumes, wigs, etc. One of the big novelties in "Rapid Fire" is the introduction for the first time in Canada, of a beautiful jeweled curtain imported from Paris. It is used with varied colored lights and contains hundreds of thousands of small brilliant stones: Leonard Young, the original "Duchess" is back with the Company as managing director this season and has turned out a marvellous show. He has been away from the Company for over a year directing the Montreal Community Players: A new 'Discovery' and extremely popular member of the Company this season is Gene Pearson who is said to possess the finest Soprano Voice of any female impersonator before the public. Two years ago he went into vaudeville and created a sensation. A leading critic in the east said he had the most extraordinary voice of any impersonator ever heard before the Montreal public.

There are twenty five brilliant new numbers comprising everything from Jazz to Light Opera and the programme includes the finest concerted work ever offered by this famous company. Jimmie Goode, with his original line of Darkey humour is funnier than he was in "Full O' Pep." Bob Anderson and Ted Charter of course, excel in their delightful humor, while the famous quartette with Bill Tennent, Bertram Langley, Tom Young and Jerry Brayford shine more brilliant than ever in their magnificent new offerings. There is Charlie McLean and Fred Fenwick and Alan Murray all favorites and all contributorse to the potpourri of good things that send the show off with a bang and keep it up throughout; There is Jack Ayre who has never missed his place at the piano since the first performance of the Original Dumbells behind the lines in France; and Don McLean and Percy Campbell both valuable members of the executive end.

The world famous Company of Canadian Soldier boys is probably the only theatrical organization of its kind in thes world. For three and a half years they played to the Canadian and Allied troops in France and Belgium and later appeared in all the big cities such as Brussels, Paris, Mons London, New York and Boston, with unprecedented success during which time they appeared before the King and Queen of Belgium, British Royalty, Allied Army and Navy Chiefs and many other notables. They are now in their fifth triumphal year in Canada having broken many theatrical records from coast to coast, first(in "Biff Bing Bang," later in the "Dumbells Revue of 1922," last season in their own revue "Full O' Pep" and this season in their biggest and most costly revue, "Rapid Fire."

AT THE CAPITOL.

MARY PICKFORD HAS CHARM AS GROWN-UP.

Keeps the Attractiveness That Endeared Her to Public in Little Girl Roles.

The public is going to be amazed and electrified by the new Mary Pickford personality which will be seen in "Rosita," her latest United Artists' production which comes to the Capitol Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Miss Pickford, as Rosita, reveals to the public a vital something—a hitherto unthought of quality in "America's Sweetheart."

The fact is that Mary Pickford has grown up in "Rosita." While she has always shrunk from this thought, the shrinking was not due to vanity, but to an almost puritanical aversion to revealing a grown woman's feelings and emotions.

It took great courage on the part of Mary Pickford to grow up on the motion picture screen. Heretofore she has been worshipped chiefly for her portrayals of childhood roles, being the idol of mothers and of children, but she never permitted herself to be blinded by the facts in the case. She has realised all along that to continue to be dear to the public, she must keep ahead of herself, as it were. And to keep ahead of herself, she had to grow up.

In "Rosita," Miss Pickford enters into her rightful heritage of glorious vital, alluring womanhood in her histrionic career, and while the grown-up Mary Pickford quickly will become the idol of men picture fans, she will not lose ony of her tremendous following of women and children; her standing will be very greatly enhanced by her temporary departure from little girl roles.

JOHN GILBERT HAS POWERFUL ROLE IN ST. ELMO.

She was a girl who bartered her troth to another to satisy her consuming lust for his faithless friend. And as the neighbours gazed upon her, they wondered, even as do others, what the world is coming to. This problem strikes the fire that explodes the bombshell of engrossing romance and plot in the new William Fox feature "St. Elmo," which comes to the Capitol Theatre on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday next.

John Gilbert plays the title role in this film version of Augusto J. Evans' famous story, a role eminently suited to his dynamic personality. In the part of the faithless girl is that popular favourite, Barbara La Marr. Miss La Marr plays her "love cards" with impassioned sincerity.

Following the disaster brought about by her treachery, St. Elmo, a man whose cheery illusions of life have turned to charred husks of bitterness, roams the earth. Vainly he looks for a little peace. But he can't get away from himself. Until he returns home again and there finds wistful little Edna Earle (played by Bessie Love), who has come to be a companian to his mother.

How Edna Earle through her sincerity and honour guides St. Elmo's embittered soul into the light again leads to a climax of rare power. The cast, carefully selected, included beside John Gilbert the star, and the two feminine leads Miss La Marr and Miss Love, Warner Baxter, Lydia Knott, and Nigel De Brulier. Jerome Storm directed and Jules Furthman adapted Miss Evans' romance for the screen.

AT THE ROYAL.

"Something Has Turned Up at Last"—Charles Dickens' Immortal Masterpiece, "David Copperfield," at Royal Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

David Copperfield is on the screen at last! Who can ever forget the story of that much-abused little boy who meets with so many hardships and sorrows, but who finally comes into his own as an author and lover? Neither can we forget the host of characters, both lovable and evil, which surround him through his life. From the masterful pen of Charles Dickens came the tale of David Copperfield in the form of a novel, but it is vastly more than fiction. It is the life of the novelist to a certain extent as he himself recorded it. And strange indeed are some of the people with whom he had to deal. Take, for instance, Mr. Wilkins Micawber, who confidently expects "something will turn up." Such a character is one that no one but Charles Dickens would have met or would have created in story form had they met him. And to transfer this man to the screen and make him a living, breathing person would seem to be almost an impossibility. But that is what has been done in David Copperfield. And he is not just an actor playing the role of Micawber.

For years the reading world has revelled in the works of the famous author, Charles Dickens. Throughout the universe the young and the old have raved over the novel "David Copperfield," which Mr. Dickens declared was his favorite story. When arrangements were made to adapt the romance of David Copperfield to motion pictures, there was great concern over the manner in which it would appear as a screen production. The picture has been made with great care, precision and despatch and the result has been that the makers have adhered closely to the original theme of the world-loved story. David Copperfield will be shown at the Royal Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next.

Big Sporting Picture, "The Knockout," Coming to the Royal Thursday.

"A sporting film for sporting people," is the aptest phrase one could use to describe "The Knock-out," coming to the Royal Thursday. Originally booked for one week at the Picadilly Theatre, Toronto, it was held over for the second. Rex Davis, who takes the lead, is a fine boxer and all-round athlete. He has appeared in many outstanding sporting pictures. Thrilling horse races, exciting boxing bouts in one of London's most exclusive clubs. A good story and no let up to the action is the big reason for the success of the "Knockout" wherever shown.

GENE PEARSON, the marvellous new male soprano with the "Originals" (Old Dumbells) coming to the Grand, Friday and Saturday, January 4th and 5th. Mr. Pearson created a sensation in all the cities of Western Canada, Washington and Oregon, where he was acclaimed the greatest female impersonator of the day.

WRONG PRICES.

In J. E. Lillico's advertisement yesterday grape fruit was featured, and the price was given "2 for 25c." This should have read "5 grape fruit for 25c," and as Mr. Lillico is making a specialty of grape fruit at these prices he wishes to draw the attention of his customers to the fact that the figures in yesterday's paper were wrong, due to indistinct copy. Mr. Lillico has a supply on hand to-night that he will sell at the above prices.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

Those who believe "Satan's lie," and its concomitances (Gen. 3:4), being unable to give any evidence in favor of the stand they take, frequently resort to slander and false accusation against those, who preach the truth, but in so doing sully themselves, and indirectly show who is on the side of truth and righteousness. Therein is revealed the secret source of all persecution. Truth is adament and cannot be changed, and will always stand the strictest scrutiny. The writer does not court publicity, and it is only the force of circumstances that compels me to sign my name. I am fully aware of the fact that in doing so, I am to a large extent ostracized. This is no new experience as I have had to take the same stand in the past, practically standing alone. ALBERT CANFIELD CONFESSES MURDER

Robbery Given as the Motive For Killing of Old Man.

WELLAND, December 29 (Canadian Press). — William Albert Canfield confessed during the night that he did on the night before Christmas, strike down Albert Morningstar with a shovel, did rob him of $45.00 in money, a watch, and other articles, carried on his person, and then set fire to Morningstar's house, and made away.

Canfield, in his confession, stated that he had some words with Morningstar, which precipitated his assault with the shovel which Morningstor had loaned him.

Confession was made to Chief Harry Jones, of Crowland Township, after many hours of gruelling examination to which the prisoner had been subjected by the Provincial and Crowland police since the prisoner's arrest in Dunnville.

As a result of the confession, the charge of murder will be laid against Canfield.

The confession was extracted in an unusual way. Chief Jones of Crowland went to interview Canfield in connection with some chicken thefts, and one thing led up to another.

Alec Shriner, of Dunville, with whom Canfield said he had stopped before and after the crime, has been arrested by Chief Jones on a nominal charge, and appeared before Magistrate John Goodwin at Crowland Police Court this morning.

"Gentlemen," continued the surgeon, "all of you are wrong, and I shall operate to-morrow."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Alderman W. T. Holloway has a plank in his platform to reduce the police force by at least two.

It is quite apparent that neither Ald. Holloway nor Mayor Taylor have a proper conception of the real duties that a Chief Magistrate of this city should perform. The question is not to what extent can the police force be reduced, but the real question is how many police are absolutely necessary to protect the lives and property of the people in this city and to guard against thieves, hold-up men and burglars.

I have recently been the victim of a burglary to the extent of over $1,000 in furs, and had there been a sufficient number of policemen to properly patrol the north end of the city I would not have had that loss.

I am not the only victim who has suffered at the hands of thieves and burglars in this city of recent date. Who is going to be the next? Every householder in this city is liable to have his place entered and stripped of its valuables. Any Mayor who has a schoolboy's knowledge of being Chief Magistrate would know enough not to make the police protection of this city a ward healer's football.

When Ald. Holloway and Mayor Taylor are making the police force a ward healer's football, they are in effect inviting thieves and burglars to come to this city, which is not in the interest of anyone.

The real question is what police force is necessary to secure protection to the property holders in this city, and that can only be determined by properly sizing up the wave of crime, and that can only be done by a careful study of crimes that have been committed in this city and in other parts of the Province of Ontario. Because the police force has been reduced by one man in July last, thefts of one kind and another have increased over 300 per cent. It is false economy to let thieves and burglars steal ten times the wages of the extra police force required.

The money wasted by the City Council last year would have paid a very large percentage of the entire cost of the maintenance of the police force.

T. E. CURVIN.

PICKING THEM OUT.

A commercial traveller visiting a Glasgow warehouse made a bet with the manager that he could pick out all the married men among the employees.

Accordingly he stationed himself at the door as they returned from dinner and mentioned all those whom he believed to be married. In almost every case he was right.

"How do you do it?" asked the manager.

"Oh, it's quite simple," said the traveller. "The married men wipe their feet on the mat; the single ones don't." — Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Board of Education

The expenditure of over $400,000.00 for a Combination Technical School would and should be submitted to the Ratepayers.

Before it is submitted, the Board should make all necessary investigations and pass on to the public the fullest possible information as to total cost of building and maintenance, what portion would be paid by the Province, and also what lines of Education it will be possible to obtain in a Technical School that cannot be obtained under present conditions.

With such information before them, the Ratepayers will be in a better position to vote on the By-law when presented. With its present indebtedness Peterborough can well afford to wait until we are very sure that the money would be wisely spent.

I do not consider that a definite opinion on this matter is called for at present and I prefer to be in a position to approach this and other matters with an open mind, rather than feel tied by pre-election promises.

I have been a resident of Peterborough all my life, and a ratepayer to a fairly large extent on both residential and business property. My knowledge of taxes has been gained by paying them. If the ratepayers have sufficient confidence in my business ability to elect me to the Board of Education, I think I can give them representation that will be appreciated.

MOTHER INSTINCTS MADE TRUE ARTIST.

From Small Lullabies She Was Inspired to Compose Greater Musical Classic.

By MORIAN HALE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The true artist is also a mother!

Before hearing the protests of those who believe themselves true artists and are not mothers, let us give Mrs. Gertrude Ross, pianist and composer, opportunity to explain this dictum of hers.

"The mother instinct is the basis for a woman's artistic expression," she elaborates. And she goes on:

"With the awakening of the mother instinct, women develop and expand spiritually. Their capacity for living and feeling is heightened. Whether nature makes herself manifest in the mountain storm or in mother love, it is the basis for drama and art."

Upon which, Mrs. Ross points to her own example. Her career as a composer began with a lullaby she had devised for her daughter and which Madame Gadski introduced to the public. Her latest achievement is the score for "The Pilgrimage Play," the annual religious pageant given near Hollywood, Calif.

Lullaby Is Starter.

"Had it not been for the success of that lullaby," she remarks, "I would probably never have written the music for "The Pilgrimage Play."

It seems a far cry from the simple melody of that first lullaby to the score of America's Passion Play, yet it is just this classic simplicity that is predominant in this last production and that is the secret of its greatness.

That is true of all her other music. In whatever setting she places her songs, they are almost sure to hark back to the lullaby motif. "The Japanese Lullaby," "The Babe's First Cry," "The Cowboy's Round-up Lullaby" are some of her songs for children.

Imagine a roundup in lullaby form!

Lives in Song.

The message of the desert country, of Spanish California, of the great open spaces where music is born, comes to the audience in her songs. Her home itself is the materialization of song—built on piles near the sea in California, so she may always hear the music of the waves.

Back of it all is the mother instinct, she repeats.

"We women are primitive creatures," she declares. "After all, there is not so great a difference as you would imagine in the motif that suggests the call of the lonely coyote and the song a mother croons to her sleeping babe.

"I not only believe talented women should marry, but they should marry early. Without the experience of wifehood and motherhood, a woman's art is incomplete. The woman who cannot combine her profession and homemaking has neither the versatility nor the vitality of the true artist."

H. J. DALY IS NOW IN CRITICAL CONDITION

TORONTO, December 29 (Canadian Press). — H. J. Daly, president of the Home Bank, with nine directors and officials of the institution, faces several charges in connection with its suspension several months ago. He is again seriously ill, and has been removed from his residence to a private room in St. Michael's Hospital, and is under the personal care of Dr. Lockwood.

T. N. Phelan, K.C., counsel for Mr. Daly in the charges preferred against him, stated this morning that the banker was in a "serious shape," and that he was suffering from nervous trouble and complete breakdown.

It is believed that the sudde death of Thomas S. O'Conner, his secretary, recently, had a serious effect upon his condition.

Held a Dance

One of the prettiest and best attended dances of the season was given in the G.W.V.A. hall last evening under the auspices of the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E. This chapter of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire has established a reputation for success in everything it undertakes, and last night's dance was no exception to the rule. The big hall was decorated in Christmas fashion, with trees covered with toys for a special Christmas dance, a central canopy extending to corner alcoves. Serpentine crepe and balloons in red and green made a daity and novel ornamentation, and a programme of special dances included a favor number, when the ladies received tiny umbrellas to match their gowns, of which there was a handsome display of new and charming creations, and the gentlemen received vari-colored Christmas caps.. There was also a balloon dance, a Christmas tree number a prize dance, in charge of Miss Rosamond Huycke, the prize for which, a large box of candy, was won by Mrs. C. Ackerman, and a moon dance. Between 300 and 350 people were in attendance for the dance, for which excellent music was provided by Paul Gliddon's four-piece orchestra. The catering was done by Messrs. T. Hooper and Sons. The regent of the chapter, Mrs. F. C. Weber, acted as general convenor, Miss Gladys Patterson had charge of refreshments, Miss Hazel Buller of the card tables, with prizes in charge of Mrs. N. Birks, Miss Gladys Mulholland of the advertising, and Mrs. N. Geale of the entertainment and decorations committee. Mr. C. G. Graham acted as Master of Ceremonies. Prizes for bridge were won by Mrs. A. E. Coulthard (yellow lustre bowl) and Dr. T. W. H. Young (bridge set in leather case). Consolation awards went to Mrs. A. McFarlane and Mr. G. Coutts. About 30 tables of bridge were played.

UNITED STATES AGREES TO SELL ARMS TO MEXICO

Rifles and Ammunition With Ten Military Airplanes Comprise Purchase Valued at $75,000 —Details Pending.

REVERSAL OF POLICY.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. — The United States Government has agreed to sell a quantity of war material to the Obregon government in Mexico.

The decision was reached after a request for such action had been received from the Obregon government and it is understood to have been prompted by a desire to aid the government, which is faced by an armed uprising.

Ten Planes Included.

Although details of the transactions are still pending before Secretary Weeks, the material involved is said to include military rifles now stored at Fort Sam Houstan, or other army depots near the border, a nd ten military airplanes. It is probable that ammunition for the rifles, and other equipment, are included. One report was to the effect that the Obregon government contemplated an expenditure of about $75,000 for the material.

The decision of the Washington Administration to make the sale came somewhat as a surprise, inasmuch as President Harding on April 23 last made a statement of policy for the War and Navy departments which opposed the sale of any surplus military equipment to foreign powers.

Official Statement.

Inquiry at the State Department produced only the following statement:

"The Mexican Government has presented a request to this government to sell it a limited quantity of war material. This government has expressed its willingness to make the sale in view of the relations between this government and the Mexican government, which was formally recognized last September, and of the importance of the maintenance of stability and orderly constitutional procedure of the neighboring republic."

ANOTHER YEAR—ANOTHER GRAIN OF SAND

FRENCH RIVERS FLOOD COUNTRY

Marne Territory Converted Into Vast Lake—Freshets of the Seine and Rhone Threaten Serious Inundation.

PARIS, December 31 (Canadian Press). — The rivers of France are at freshet, causing great suffering to the people and much damage to property.

The flood season has come earlier and is worse than usual, following two months of almost continuous rain. The situation along the Seine in Paris became last night.

Officials forecast a further rise of two feet in the river by Wednesday, when the inundation will begin to take the aspect of a disaster.

Already the quays in Paris and the suburbs are under water, cellars have been flooded, and some householders in the low-lying quarters have been obliged to move, taking with them such of their furniture as they could.

Rhone Is Rising.

In the provinces the situation is even worse. The River Rhone is rising rapidly. The low-lying country through which it flows is submerged.

At Nevers, on the Loire, half the town is inundated, and 400 persons have had to quit their houses. The water is pouring through the railroad cut in the neighbourhood of Clamecy.

The overflow of the Marne has converted the country from Vitry-le-Francois to Chalons into a vast lake.

In addition to the floods in the south of France, there has been a mistral of such violence as has put telephonic communication between Paris, Marseilles, Nice and Italy out of commission and also almost completely cut off telegraphic communication.

At Toulon the transport Indrus parted her cable and was blown ashore.

All ports and inlets are filled with ships seeking refuge.

Numerous distress signals from vessels in difficulties have been reported from various wireless stations.

Will Investigate Loss of "Dixmude"

PARIS, Dec. 31.—Official announcement was made yesterday by the Ministry of Marine that the super-dirigible Dixmude might be definitely considered as lost.

A commission to investigate the loss of the airship has been appointed by Vice-Admiral Fatou, commanding the southern maritime frontier. The commission is composed of Captain De Laborde, chairman, and Captains Darre and Legros Didier and Lieutenants Beauvais and Vaugeois.

LEFT SON FOR FRANCE.

TOULON, Dec. 31.—The widow of Lieutenant Granadan, commander of the lost dirigible Dixmude, whose body was found in the Mediterranean off the coast of Sicily Friday, gave birth to a son Saturday night. Madame Grenadan asked those about her to send her sympathy to the families bereaved by the catastrophe.

PACIFIC CABLE YIELDS PROFIT

Canada's Share For Last Financial Year $350,000—Proves Revenue Producer

OTTAWA, December 31 (Canadian Press). — Canada's share of the surplus arising from the operation of the Pacific Cable in the last financial year was approximately $350,000, according to postal officials who supervise this means of communication.

The Dominion's portion of earnings during the last eight years was about $2,500,000.

The Pacific Cable links Canada directly with New Zealand and Australia. It was laid some twenty years ago, and at the time the enterprise was undertaken, the promoters entertained serious misgivings regarding the financial success of the venture. It proved to be a revenue producer, however, and has attained greater importance with each year of operation.

Canada's share of the money involved in the enterprise is $5,000,000. The cable is 11,000 miles long, and the annual volume of business reaches 10,000,000 paying words.

BLACK SEA STORM WRECKED SHIPPING

Freight Train Fell Into Sea—British Ship With Crew of Thirty Lost.

MOSCOW, December 31 (Canadian Press). — A hurricane raged on the Black Sea and the Sea of Azov from 24th to 26th December, according to advices from Odessa.

The port of Novorossyek sustained heavy losses and was damaged to such an extent that the loading of grain was halted.

Several steamers were overtaken by the hurricane in the open sea and badly damaged.

At Anapa, Crimea, the gale derailed a freight train of twenty-two cars, which fell into the sea.

The steamer Konnedjios, under the British flag, sank 120 miles from Batoum, with 7,000 tons of manganese ore. Thirty of the crew perished.

Another steamer loaded with grain is ashore on the Black Sea coast, and an oil tanker was forced to jettison a cargo of oil.

Ten Persons Living In Four Room Flat

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Here is a sample of living conditions in the worst block in New York, as reported by the State Housing Commission:

"In a four-room flat live ten persons, father, mother, two boarders and six children. The front room and kitchen are dimly lighted by windows. In between are two dark rooms. Parents and baby occupy the front room.

"The boarders demand a room for themselves. Two boys and a girl sleep in another bedroom. Two older girls sleep in the kitchen. All eat in the kitchen—in shifts. The kitchen sink is the sole washing facility for all."

Other examples of crowding given are: Fourteen in six rooms, eleven in four rooms, ten in three, six in two rooms.

ALL TEN UNITS AVAILABLE BY 1925 BECK SAYS

Predicts a Shortage of Power In Ontario By 1926 — St. Lawrence Scheme Becomes a Necessity.

SYSTEM FLOURISHES

LONDON, Ont., December 31 (Canadian Press). — The sixth unit of the Chippawa power plant will be turned on by Hon. Howard Ferguson this week.

This announcement was made by Sir Adam Beck on Saturday. He also stated that units 7 and 8 are being installed at the present time, and will be completed in 1924.

Tenders for units 9 and 10 will be asked for shortly, and will be finished in 1925.

This will then complete the Chippawa plant with a capacity of 600,000 h.p., the largest hydro-electric undertaking in the world under one roof.

With the completion of the Chippawa plant the total installed capacity of the various electric plants at Niagara will be 930,000 h.p. Despite this large amount of electricity available, Sir Adam stated that so rapid has the development of the use of white coal become that by 1926 there will be a shortage in Ontario. This is the one problem that is now worrying the Hydro Commission.

Want Steam Plant.

To meet this situation, Sir Adam Beck announces that application will be made at the opening session of the Legislature for $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 to install a steam plant. This will be built somewhere on Lake Erie or Lake Ontario.

For economic reasons this should be located at a coal port and a place where there is plenty of water.

"We are ending this year in a happy mood," remarked Sir Adam. "Our whole Hydro system was never in better condition. We are taking care of all our investments, including the Nipigon plant, which will be operating to capacity after 1st January. We expect the revenue next year from the Chippawa plant to be $67,000,000. This is the best possible answer to those who said we were over-reaching ourselves in building that work. The Hydro scheme has never been in a better position, and there as never a better spirit in the whole staff. The only problem which is worrying us is that of the threatened shortage.

St. Lawrence Necessary.

"At the present rate of development in the use of electricity there is not the slightest doubt that the shortage will begin to be felt in 1926, and unless a steam plant is built there will be portions of Ontario which will be handicapped for want of power.

"The St. Lawrence development scheme is absolutely necessary if Ontario is to supply power needs. The City of Ottawa is already facing a shortage. The Hydro plant, as well as the locally-owned private power plants, have notified their customers that they are unable to install any more electric stoves, and there is even difficulty in securing enough power to supply the needs of new houses being built."

THE WEATHER.

On Saturday morning the temperature was down to 4 degrees above the zero mark. This is the lowest point that has been reached this season. On Sunday the low point was 9 above, and this (Monday) morning it was 14 above. It is not uncommon for the old year to be ushered out and the new one in by severe cold and stormy weather. To every reader of these little notes I extend my best wishes for a happy new year, and trust that he or she as the case may be may have a happy new year, in the truest sense of the term.—W.P.

LEGLESS WAR VETERAN CHOKES WIFE IN SLEEP

Unhappy Marriage of Last May Ends With Murder Admitted By Husband Who Surrendered Himself to the Police—No Evidence of Struggle In Bedroom.

MONTREAL, December 31 (Canadian Press). — "I've just killed my wife. Come down and see her," said Delphis Goddard, to his father and brother in their home, 188 Dorion Street, on Sunday morning, according to their statement.

They did not accept the invitation, but promptly notified the police, and detectives went to investigate.

When they arrived at 190 Dorion Street, Goddard's dwelling, they found that 19-year-old Mrs. Goddard had been strangled to death by the use of a silk scarf.

Without being questioned by the police, Goddard volunteered the information that he had killed her.

The victim had been dead about three-quarters of an hour. It is the opinion of the police that the woman was asleep when she was attacked. When the body was found, it was lying beside the bed with the bed sheet over her. Nothing in the room was disturbed to show that there had been any struggle, and there was no blood.

Information obtained later by the police was that the couple had been married since May, and that they had not been very happy. No one, however, was able to inform them as to any particular quarrel which might have led to the killing of the woman.

Goddard was an ex-Army man, and during the war lost both of his legs. He wore artificial limbs, and walked with the aid of a cane, which led the police to beheve that Mrs. Goddard must have been attacked in her bed, as she could easily have pushed her assailant away.

NEW MINISTER TO WASHINGTON

Sir Esme Howard Succeeds Sir Auckland Geddes As British Ambassador — Geddes' Sight Fails.

LONDON, December 31 (Canadian Press). — The Foreign Office has issued the following statement respecting the resignation of Sir Auckland Geddes as Ambassador to the United States:

"Sir Auckland Geddes, having been informed by his medical advisers that the state of his eyes will not permit of his immediate resumption of work at Washington, has felt bound to tender his resignation. The following appointments in the diplomatic service, however, in consequence have been submitted to and have received the approval of His Majesty:

"The Right Hon. Sir Esme Howard to be His Majesty's Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary at Washington; the Right Hon. Sir Horace Rumbold to be His Majesty's Ambassador and Plenipotentiary at Madrid.

"It is understood that pending the arrival of the new Minister, Sir Auckland Geddes is returning for a brief visit to Washington to make the necessary arrangements for his departure and to say good-bye to his numerous friends."

Sir Esme Howard is familiar with Washington problems, having been counsellor to the Embassy there from 1906 to 1908. He was Minister to Sweden and to Switzerland previous to going to Madrid in 1919. He began his diplomatic career in 1885.

Denies Eyes Failed.

"It is not because my eyes have failed me that I am resigning the British Ambassadorship at Washington, but because physicians have informed me that if my eyes are again subjected to the intense strain which is unavoidable in carrying out diplomatic work that I may lose the use of them completely and permanently."

Sir Auckland Geddes thus informed the Associated Press correspondent yesterday at the home of relatives in Wimbledon, where he has spent most of his time since his arrival from the United States.

Contention of Woodstock Crown Attorney Urging Conviction of Entire Party.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Dec. 31.—The hearing of the evidence in the charge against Trueman Stevens of having driven an automobile in a manner dangerous to the public and of doing bodily injury to Mrs. T. Morkin of London, was completed in city police court here Saturday, Crown Attorney Ball in pressing for conviction, brought an unusal angle into the case. Basil Easery a Toronto lawyer who was acting as counsel for the defence, was an occupant of Stevens' car when it is alleged to have run into Mrs. Morkin's car. There was also a third occupant. Crown Attorney Ball contended that all three occupants of the car were equally guilty, accordink to the statutes and asked that a conviction be found against all of them, including the counsel for the defence. Magistrate Patterson reserved his decision in the case for a week.

BILLIONS SPENT ON REPAIRS IN WRECKED AREA

People Are Prosperous and Less Concerned Than Foreign Observers About Decline of Franc In Exchange.

NO UNEMPLOYMENT.

PARIS, Dec. 31. — The French people are ending a year of extraordinary industrial and commercial prosperity. French national finances on the other hand, are more heavily weighed down than at any time in the history of the French republic.

Private firms and houses in all branches of industry and trade have been generally thriving, passing large dividends, or showing handsome profits. There is no unemployment in France. As a matter of record, Labor is scarce and employers have been obliged to import foreign labor, especially from Poland and Spain.

Nation's Debt Increases.

The French national treasury, however, finds itself owing at the end of the year, 1923, some twenty billion francs more than on December 31, 1922. The French public debt which was officially acknowledged to be 380,000,000,000 paper francs on January 1, 1923, has now reached the four hundred billion mark. The increase represents what has been spent in reconstructing and repairing damages in the parts of northern France ravaged by war.

The French people as a whole are less concerned about their public finances than foreign observers. Money has come easily to the French Government, the French nation showing an immense power of absorbing national loans. The Ministry of Finance will announce shortly after the new year another loan of thirteen billion, authorized by the French Parliament, the proceeds of which will again be poured into northern France, which has swallowed more than one hundred billion paper francs since the armistice.

The total public French debt is made up of the internal debt amounting to 269,000,000,000 francs and the external debt of 126,000,000,000.

Affected by Exchange.

While France has borrowed no money abroad during the year 1923, and the total foreign debt on December 31, 1922, was ninety-five billion paper francs, the increase represented by the depreciation of the franc in the exchange market as compared with Sterling and the Dollar. War loans from Great Britain and the United States make up practically the entire amount of France's foreign debt.

Internal loans amounting to 19,000,000 paper francs were floated during 1923. The internal debt on December 31, 1922, was 250,000,000,000, compared with 269,000,000000 at the end of the present year.

For the first time since the armistice the French Treasury shows a surplus of revenue over expenses in the ordinary budget for the current year. The final figures as adopted by the Senate are:

Revenues—23,045,000,000; expenditures 22,151,000,000; a surplus of 894,000,000.

Some of the Details.

The revenues are made up of taxes, 17,101,602,616, and the profits from State monopolies, domains and an item of nearly two billions and a half described with the somewhat mysterious label of "exceptional resources."

More than half the expenditures are represented by the interest on the debt amounting to 12,057,378,586. Interest on the consolidated debt being 4,353,942,583 and the interest on treasury and other short term bonds 6,475,563,642. Interest on smaller loans make up the difference of the twelve odd billions.

France has succeeded in keeping the bank note circulation at about the same figure as in 1922. There has been no inflation.

The amount of notes in circulation in France to-day is below 37,000,000,000.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Dear Mr. Editor

At a meeting of the Executive of The G.W.V.A. the following resolution was passed.

That whereas this branch of the G.W.V.A. approve of Technical as well as the usual Academic Education, and

Whereas for some time two alternative plans have been before the city Board of Education, the one calling for extension of the Collegiate Building for Academic instruction only, at an estimated cost of $215,000, and the other calling for a combined school extension giving the same additional room for Academic construction and also completely adequate facilities for Technical Education at an estimated cost to the city of $265,000, the Province providing an equal amount and half the cost of maintenance, and

Whereas the Combined School plan appears to us to be so much better business as to leave really no comparison from that standpoint, and

Whereas six of the candidates for election to the Board of Education have expressed themselves to us as fully in favor of the Combined School plan rather than the Academic only plan, when the time comes that extension is shown to be necessary, and

Whereas only five candidates are to be elected,

Be it now therefore Resolved that we endors, these six candidates, Dr. Neal, Mrs. Morris, Dr. Craig, Mr. Reid, Dr. Yelland and Dr. Wood, and that we commend to all Returned Men that they mark their ballots in favour of five of these also that we urge upon the Returned Men and their wives the need of getting out and voting since the problem so closely concerns the future of their children.

"Cut this out and take it with you to the polls"

N. H. SUTTON
President Peterboro Branch, G.W.V.A.

S. W. WHATLEY,
Secretary-Treasurer G.W.V.V.A.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—What's wrong with our city? An old gentleman told me when I first came into the city, 16 years ago, there were 5 police, and no car, now we have 16 police and 1 car. I know our city has increased since then, but do we really need that number? I thought our city was getting better—you don't see a lot of intoxicated people going about the streets, as one did then; the saloons are gone. We have the automobile, but if we have such reckless drivers, who go beyond the speed limit, and make it unsafe for pedestrians, why not place a heavier fine, or a month or two on the hill. There must be something wrong, for if things go on in the same way for another 16 years, as in the past, the city will need 28 police and two cars.

What about our taxes, after we have paid them to the tax collector —a very worthy gentleman? Is the person or persons handling it, paying our men; I don't care who they are, City Engineer, Chief of Police or anyone who is receiving a high salary—are they being paid in proportion to the hard-working taxpayer. The poor man's wage has decreased; has their salary decreased? If not, why not?

Saying this with all due respect to those holding office referred to, I am but asking a square deal all round.

Some gentleman, a very wealthy gentleman, no doubt, has wrote about our nice city with its fine sidewalks and paved streets, but what is the good of fine sidewalks, with the poor man walking along them, with his stomach, half lined and without the necessary things of life, because of the wages decreasing and the taxes increasing, and many of our best citizens are leaving town because of it. I have a couple of houses, which would look a good deal more respectable if a hundred dollars were spent upon them. What am I to do? If I spend that amount on them, up goes the taxes for keeping them in repair, so I must let them rot, or pay more taxes for keeping them in repair.

I would like the good gentleman who praised our fine city to tell me what encouragement there is for the working man to keep his property respectable.

What about our assessmnet? Property was on the boon from 1917-1919, and then it stopped, but when I went to pay my taxes, this year, our worthy tax collector told me the taxes were lowered, but the assessment was higher, and has been going up ever since 1919. What explanation can the gentlemen handling our money give for that? We have a bunch of men in office who are always going down each other's throat, and have had enough to say to fill the House of Commons, and now they dont' know where they are, so they talk of going to law, putting extras expense upon the taxpayers. Wouldn't it be better to have a clearance out, and get 2 or 3 good, level-headed men, who would know how to run the city in a business-like way.

Saying this without any disrespect to anyone ,and wishing you all a Happy New Year, I am,

Yours respectfully,
A. SIMPSON,
(Square Deal)
Sophia St.,
Peterborough.

WHO'S FITTEST?

Dear Mr. Editor,—The good name and credit of Peterboro have beeen indirectly damaged by the widely-published reports of the police fiasco, for the inference was natural that our financial resources were at zero. But disgrace was added to damage in the public prints when the recent robbery of a fur shop was broadcasted throughout Canada and the United States, because, forsooth, the police had not been paid their salaries and didn't have money enough to cover the cost of telegraphic notifications to the nearby constabulary to watch at the "get-away" roads. Great news that! The traditional idea of a British or Canadian officer of the law is that he would bravely risk his life in such a pursuit and "hell" wouldn't stop him, much less the lack of ten dollars. Peterboro is more shamed by such a happening than is the bravest and most loyal of our police force. Does such an event reflect the spirit or dignity of our police officers or of Peterboro? Does it wake our citizens up to the need of "stepping on" pettiness and cowardice whenever we may find it in the conduct of our city's business? At all events let us figure on a new and better epoch for Peterboro.

We begin this new year by an election. Some of us do not see that a "Happy New Year" in civic affairs is not a matter of chance: it is simply a matter of popular purpose on our part—of co-operative intelligence, patriotism and uncommon horse-sense in choosing our officials.

One will find little difficulty in choosing from the list of excellent citizens who are offering themselves for service in the Council and Board of Education: but in choosing our Mayor we are, as in the past, in danger of being "led by the nose" instead of by our discerning judgment, or rather the courage of our convictions.

Who of the three candidates for Mayor is fittest? If we think straight we know it is very important at this time to have a business man at the head of our city government, one whose devotion, industry, intelligence and character can be banked upon. There aren't as many simpletons in Peterboro as formerly; there are fewer to be hoodwinked by the glad hand or gushing friendships of candidates, or by a free ride to the polling place in a taxi-cab. And we can see the possible effect of a three-cornered contest. Now, for 1924 we want to be shown. Let us take the three candidates on their personal records and statements.

Mayor Taylor has already served the maximum term without serious damage to the city, and therefore he could retire with "his honors rich upon him." He has served for two years and that should be enough for him and for us. But maybe he means to show us that he has really become an advanced student of and specialist in civic management and will consequently do a lot of things he didn't do in the one hundred and four weeks of his incumbency.

Mr. Holloway, in his three-column advertiseemnt, boldly advises us to "elect Holloway Mayor." He tells us he has been a success, is "free from business," and has invested his money here; he will "reduce the police force" by beheading two, and as he has heretofore "fought for our protection" he will "do it again." But he doesn't give us an inkling that he has any egotistical idea of having acquired a superior civic education or that he possesses administrative talents. Maybe he modestly assumes that he has a lot to learn yet; but meanwhile he proposes to reduce taxation by beheading two policemen. Big ideas make a big city.

Mr. Turner's statement has the merits of clarity, directness and sincerity. He may not be a sage regarding civic affairs, but I feel sure that if the city will give him its whole-hearted support he will in 1924 work out a plan of self-government and self-improvement that will thereafter put Peterboro "on the map."

May we all have a happy New Year.—Yours respectfully,
RYERSON RITCHIE.
December 31st, 1923.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Dear Sir,— You have been urging our citizens for some time to choose the very best material out of those who consented to stand for municipal honors either for Council or Board of Educatjon.

I thank you for keeping our attention fixed on this very important matter which concerns each one of us so much.

I conceive my duty as a citizen to be to vote for a man not because he is my friend, but because of his fitness for ofice. The most important office to consider is that of Mayor, an office which requires peculiar gratifications, so I ask myself "has he long municipal service to his credit?

Is he interested in the city's progress and has he shown this in his past record? Has he large business experience? Is he a fluent speaker Is he an effective speaker? Can he do credit to his office at social or public functions? Would he impress men of big business as to the attractions of Peterborough?

I find only one candidate who would answer these qualifications one hundred per cent. and in his case I could add a variety of municipal service besides seven years in council. He has experience on the Board of Education, Board of Trade, etc. with good record on all. Surely, then he is the logical can for the position both from the point of merit and peculiar fitness.

Mr. W. H. Merrell pierced one glaring defect in our present Mayor when he writes "I am looking for a chief magistrate to be elected who will be a credit to our city at every public function."

That is the point let every man prove his ability. Mr. Turner has proven it and having done so much for Peterborough, having helped her growth for 38 years in a business which advertises us all over Canada and having proved his worth as a good citizen, we will honor ourselves by honoring him, so I am voting for Turner.

As to the Board of Education there are so many good candidates that I can see only two outstanding ones:—Mrs. Kate Morris to represent woman's view points and Dr. J. J. Craig to represent the dental viewpoint so important to the health of the city.

Yours sincerely,
A. H. ALLAN.

The following letter speaks for itself,

The Examiner,
Peterboro,

You will be interested to learn that in an advertising contest recently conducted by The Famous Players Canadian Corporation, this theatre finished in first place. The contest ran from Sept. 3 to Dec. 3 and sixty-four theatres from Vancouver to Montreal participated.

A great deal of the credit for our winning must go to Mr. Barringer and his composing room staff for their splendid co-operation in setting copy and following layouts. The fact that the Peterboro Capitol defeated theatres in much larger cities reflects very creditably on the efficiency of your composing room staff.

I have written copy for a good many papers but none have possessed a better assortment of rules and type-face or took more pains in setting, than does your paper. It is a real pleasure to write copy for a paper that follows layouts as closely as does "The Examiner."

Cordially Yours,
J. C. KENNEDY,
Manager Capitol Theatre.

December 31st, 1923.

Editor, Peterboro Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I wish to draw the attention of the voters to a man who, to my mind, is a particularly high type of candidate for the Board of Education, namely, Dr. John J. Craig. Since coming to the city Dr. Craig has been one of the most active of our citizens in all movements for the advancement of the city and has been especially active in work to help boys and young men. He has given a great deal of valuable time assisting boys in the [illegible] sport and has proved himself to be the kind of man interested in the development of the educational side of the children of our city. It struck me also at the recent meeting of the Ratepayers' and Tenants' Association that Dr. Craig took a sound and sensible view of the building problem. I urge all citizens to support this type of man, for this is the kind we need to administer the affairs of our city.

—Yours truly,
EDUCATIONIST.

CHURCH UNION FOR ANGLICAN AND CATHOLIC

Several Discussions Recently Regarding What Is Termed a Re-union.

"RETURN TO FOLD."

ROME, December 31. — The Vatican declares that it knows nothing about the reported conversations between the Archbishop of Canterbury and Cardinal Mercier for a reunion of the Anglican and Roman Catholic Churches, except what has been published in the newspapers, and that the conversations, if they really occurred were entirely private and their real nature is unknown to the Vatican.

The Holy See's Viewpoint on the subject of the reunion of the Christian churches is well known. Under Benedict XV. special delegates were sent from the United States by an organization having this for its purpose. The Pope was invited to be represented at a meeting to consider the question. The Pontiff answered that the Catholic Church desired nothing more than a reunion, but since it was non-Catholics who had separated from the church, it was for them to return to the true fold, where they would be received with open arms.

Cardinal Mercier of Belgium fears public discussion may impede the progress of the negotiations for a reunion of the Anglican and Roman Catholic churches, and refuses to make any statement with regard to the private conferences which the Archbishop of Canterbury recently disclosed had been held at Malines.

Cardinal Mercier says that discussion of the subject at this time would involve too great a danger of misrepresentation interfering with the conferences, which he points out are dealing with a most delicate subject.

His secretary, Dean Dessart, in making this known, explained that the Cardinal was not authorized to disclose the proceedings of the conferences.

The Archbishop of Canterbury in a Christmas letter to the dignitaries of the Anglican Communion, said the question of the reunion of the churches, especially the Anglican and the Roman Catholic, as advocated at the famous Lambeth conference in 1920, had made only the smallest headway. In disclosing that that private conferences had since been held at Malines, he said they were initiated by Cardinal Mercier and some few Anglicans, with the object of discussing "the outstanding and familiar barriers between the Church of England and the Church of Rome."

He explained that the conferences could not be properly described as negotiations as the Anglicans participating were in no sense delegates of the whole church.

CHILDREN'S TREAT ON INNOCENTS' DAY

St. Aidan's Annual Social at Young's Point Delighted Little Folk.

YOUNG'S POINT, Dec. 30.—Friday being Holy Innocent's Day, the children of St. Aidan's Sunday School had their usual Christmas treat in the church basement. The basement was nicely decorated and a huge Christmas tree stood in one corner.

At four o'clock the children, with their parents and Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes, met in the basement where a long table was laden with good things to eat to which everyone did ample justice. One little chap was heard to remark that he was full up to his collar.

After supper the tables were cleared and old and young joined in the games and singing.

In due time Santa Claus arrived and was welcomed heartily by the children. After shaking hands with each of the tiny tots Santa presented them all with a big parcel which contained besides a full stocking of candies and nuts, many beautiful gifts.

Much merriment was indulged in when Christmas crackers were distributed among the older folks.

The children of the Sunday School presented Mr. and Mrs. Hughes with a gift; a prize was also given to the longest married couple present. This was awarded to Mr. and Mrs. A. Wilson.

Everybody appreciates very much the good time provided by Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes.

Rev. Cyril Carroll, who spent Christmas Day with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Carroll, has returned to Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hurl and children, Miss Dorothy and Master Carl, of Toronto, are visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Cummings.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Reid spent Christmas with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dunford, of Dummer.

Mr. Harold Young, who has been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Young, has returned to South River.

Mr. Frank Carroll is at present visiting friends in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Graham, of Lakefield, visited at the latter's home on Tuesday.

Mr. Russell Brooks has returned to Toronto.

JOSEPH WHETUNG WELL SATISFIED

Old Indian Chief Relates Some of His Experiences

Joseph Whetung, the old chief of the Mississuagua Indians, who was in office before the advent of Cheif Dan Whetung, is very pleased over the recent receipt from the Government to the Indians of the Rice, the Mud and the Scugog Reservations, of a portion of the new treaty money accruing to the members of the tribe. Something in the neighborhood of $25 apiece has been received by the members of the three colonies, and it is anticipated that a further amount will be distributed later.

The old Chief says that representations have been made to the Government for years by the Indians to obtain payments and interest on the old and the new treaty money. The sum of about $92,000 is due the Indians, he says, on the grant which the Government made for distribution among seven of the bands in Hiawatha, Curve Lake, Scugog, Rama, Georgian Bay, Christian Island and Alderville, in connection with the ceding by the Indians of the old fishing and hunting grounds in the Lake Nipissing District.

In May of this year, the old chief went to Ottawa, and was promised attention. This money is the first sign of an awakening on the part of the authorities to the plea of the Indians. The old chief is an interesting specimen of the first Canadian. He tells with gusto the story of his grandfather, the old medicine man, who, in the war of 1812, was entreated by his people to save them from annihilation, and thereupon created a great fog which blotted out the enemy for three days and gave them a chance to regain lost ground. His grandfather was the old Reindeer, and his descendant is proud of his descent in the Reindeer tribe. He pridefully declares that he received a good education at the Indian school in Middlesex County, going to school until he was nineteen and being compelled to cease his studying career when the authorities found that he was "wearing Number Six shoes," or, in other words, was becoming a tall redman among the smaller pupils. He passed the Entrance and taught school for some years at Curve Lake. Then bilious debility attacked him, "from being too much inside," and required the services of two doctors, and a discontinuance of his indoor life. Now he interests himself in the cause of the Indians and their negotiations with the Government.

NEWS BETHANY AND DISTRICT

A Presentation to a Sunday School Teacher

BETHANY, Dec. 31. — A very pleasing event took place in the Sunday school room of the Methodist church at the close of the session on Sunday afternoon, when the members of the Adult Bible Class presented their teacher, Mr. W. Jakeman, with a large serving tray, containing several pieces of china. Mrs. A. Therndyke, secretary of the class, read a very appropriate address and the presentation was made by the president, Mrs. R. L. Crerar. Mr. Jakeman took the presentation very keenly and while taken completely by surprise stated his sentiments in a few well chosen words, after which the class all joined in singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

Owing to the stormy weather the concert held under the auspices of the Women's Institute was not so well attended as expected.

DETROITERS LIABLE FOR DOMINION TAX

Opinion of Windsor's City Solicitor Regarding Those Who Live On Canadian Side.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 31.—Detroiters working in the Border Cities stand a chance of paying a tax to Canada, in addition to their own income tax, and the exchequer of the Dominion will be $300,000 richer, according to a written opinion given Saturday by Frank D. Davis, K.C., City Solicitor for Windsor.

The ruling was given because there aws a difference of opinion at the meeting of the Court of Revision when Barrister A. H. Foster, acting for several Detroiters, contended his clients could not be assessed for the Canadian Municipal Income Tax.

Citing such cases which had been decided in Canadian Courts, Assessment Commissioner Black argued that United States citizens working in the Dominion are liable for the tax.

Exactly the same condition prevails with Canadians working in Detroit and living in Canada. They are assessed double the tax of the American resident and in addition pay taxes to Canada.

FOUR MONTHS IN JAIL FOR THEFT FROM EMPLOYER

Hired Man On Rawdon Farm Decamped With $110 — Traced and Arrested By Campbellford Police.

RINKS FLOODED.

Campbellford, Dec. 31.—Pleading guilty to the theft of $110 from his employer, Eugene Corron, a young man whose home is in Quebec, was sentenced by Police Magistrate Payne to four months in the Cobourg jail, and was at once taken to that institution by Chief Duncalfe.

Corron was working for Herbert Spencer, a farmer who resides on the tenth concession in - Rawdon township, Friday morning he left the house to go, it was understood, to the bush, to work, but when Mr. Spence went out to join him about 9 o'clock, he was not there. This aroused the suspicions of the family, and on searching the house it was found that $110, belonging to a son, Wilfrid, who had just returned from the west, where he had earned the money in the wheat fields, was missing.

Mr. Spencer notified Chief Duncalfe, who got a description of Corron, and then telephoned the station agent at Bonar-Law, the point at which Corron would be most likely to take the train. A man answering his description was in the depot at the time, and the Chief asked that he be prevented from taking the train.

Corron left the depot and purchased a mackinac coat for $8 in a neighboring store, then paid $6 to a Marmora man who was passing through the village in an auto for a ride to Campbellford.

Upon his arrival here Corron was arrested by Chief Duncalfe. All of the money except the $14 which he had spent as noted above, was recovered. When he faced the magistrate he pleaded guilty.

CAMPBELLFORD BAND CONCERT

Big Crowd Attended Second Sunday Concert—Town's Financial Statement Presented.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 31. — Facing a crowd that filled every seat in the Regent Theatre, Mayor A. J. Meyers, who presided at the second Sunday evening concert given last night by the Northumberland Regiment Band, said, in his brief opening address, that it must be highly gratifying to the leader and the members of the Band to have so large an audience turn out to hear the splendid programme of sacred and classical music that had been provided for their entertainment. The Mayor ventured to say that the majority of those present had attended one or other of the two churches earlier in the evening. This was as it should be, for no one would regret more than Bandmaster Cowell and the bandsmen if these Sunday night concerts, the proceeds of which were to be devoted to charity and purchasing new music, should keep anyone away from divine service.

An interesting and varied programme was artistically rendered, the selections being practically the same as those announced last week. The opening number was two familiar hymns suitable for the Christmas season. The features of the programme were a saxaphone solo played by request by Charles Mitchell, one of the most talented members of the Band: the hymn, "Let Your Lower Lights Be Burning," by a male chorus composed of eight of the best known vocalists in Campbellford, and two solos, "The Diver," and "The Song That Reached My Heart," by Herb. Leonard, who on each appearance was enthusiastically recalled, but there was no provision on the bill for encores.

Another splendid performance was that of Fred. Lang, trombonist, who took the solo part in "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep."

The number that appeared most oleasing to the majority of the audience, awakening, as it did, memories of former days, was the medly of popular airs, nearly every one of which was familiar, airs as beautiful as the words of the songs which have long since held a place among the musical classics of the language. The first of these selections was "Marching Through Georgia," the song that was the keynote of liberty for three million slaves. This was followed by "The Soldiers' Farewell," that so beautifully expresses a warrior's idea of love and duty. The other seelcted airs were: "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," "Listen to the Mocking Bird," "The Old Oaken Bucket," "Ben Bolt," "Old Black Joe," "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys are Marching," "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," "Maryland, My Maryland," "Sweet and Low," "Just Before the Battle, Mother," "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," and "Auld Lang Syne."

Perhaps there are some people in Campbellford who may object that these familiar tunes do not belong in the eategory of strictly sacred music, but at all events every one in the list was a favorite with the boys who stood the brunt of the battle in the Great War, regardless of the day of the week on which they were played or sung, and at least half the members of the Northumberland Regiment Band did their duty overseas.

While the Band is the official musical organization of the Northumberland Regiment, it has no source of income, the only assistance which it receives from the town, although it is one of its leading assets and best advertisement, being a grant of $600 a year to pay the salary of the bandmaster, whose efficiency as a teacher and leader is conceded. In return for this the Band gives free open-air concerts during the summer. For outside engagements the amount charged is often insufficient to pay the men for the time they lose from their private business. New music, especially of the kind in which the Band specializes, is costly, and it is to raise a fund for the purchase of such music that these Sunday night concerts are being held. That the Band is backed up by the citizens is amply evidenced by the crowds and the enthusiastic appreciation that greets their every appearance in public.

Town's Financial Statement.

Mayor Meyers and Town Treasurer Wood have completed the annual financial statement of the town and this has been printed and will be circulated at the nomination meeting to-night. The total receipts for the year from all sources amounted to $122,745.78, the amount of taxes collected was $55,200, and there is still $3,500 outstanding. The expenditure for the year was $122,535.73, leaving a balance on hand of $210.25.

The amount of this balance apparently conflicts with the sum of the surplus announced as approximately $1,000 at the statutory meeting. Out of that surplus, however, the Council made a grant of $500 to the War Memorial Fund, and allowance must be made for this, as it has been deducted from the original total. The sum of $16,200 has been expended on the Public and High Schools, and $2,050 on the Separate School, fire protection, and the loss from fire during the year was nominal, $641.61. For oiling the streets $2,100 was spent, lighting the streets cost $3,716.50, and $1,550 was expended for maintenance of the Public Library. The county rate was $6,458.18. For new cement walks the outlay was $5,374.68, and for county roads $1,696.05. Keeping up the roads and bridges in the town meant an expenditure of $8,551.68, the appropriation for which was $9,000.

The town has credits totalling $14,736.09, as against liabilities amounting to $13,324.02.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1923.

THE NEW YEAR.

It is a hackneyed phrase, "A Happy New Year," and yet what more can be said as the old year departs and 1924 begins to dawn?

"A Happy New Year" for every citizen, for Peterborough, for the banner Province of Ontario and for the Dominion of Canada!

There is much that can be done to turn the New Year wishes into actuality, and what better time than now to do a little quiet thinking as to what each one can accomplish in making 1924 a happy year?

The first start should be in the home.

A resolve on the part of every one to be more kindly, more sympathetic, more ready to help, more willing to share the burdens, more anxious to understand the viewpoint of the others would have an immediate effect.

Then comes duty to the community, the necessity of a greater interest in community efforts and service, the realization of a responsibility towards one's fellow-citizens, the need of greater concern about civic problems and civic government.

And third, the larger call for a livelier interest in national problems and issues that affect the whole Dominion.

A LAST WORD.

To-morrow the electors of Peterborough will be called upon to select a Mayor from a field of three, to pick five aldermen from six candidates, and to choose five members for the Board of Education out of a list of ten aspirants.

That is a programme important enough to warrant a large vote—and in the best interests of Peterborough a much bigger percentage of the total on the list should be registered than usual.

This business of choosing a civic government is so vital and is followed by such consequences that there should be no need for newspapers to have to keep hammering away in season and out on the necessity of exercising the franchise.

And yet in the majority of Ontario communities a fifty per cent. vote is regarded as large.

Peterborough should better that percentage tomorrow.

Once again voters are reminded that in the aldermanic contest it is necessary to vote for at least four candidates. Five may be voted for, but of course not more than that number.

For the Board of Education any number of candidates up to and including five may be voted for—although it is a short-sighted policy to select only one or two candidates.

Every elector who wants to start the New Year right will mark his ballot to-morrow, and will study the field of candidates thoroughly before doing so.

THE HEIGHT OF FOLLY.

Many reasons could be given by electors as to why they will vote for such and such a candidate—some of them good, others not to be so described.

Some men are voted for because they are popular, good fellows, liked by everybody.

Others because the electors feel that they have qualifications that are likely to enable them to be of service to the city

But it is unusual—and unpleasant, too—to hear people talking about voting for somebody as "a good joke."

Electors who have such a twisted sense of humour should be deprived of their franchise, and would be if an intelligence test was in vogue.

There is no joke about administering the affairs of a city of this size, and surely there is nothing funny in big tax bills and in a city that fails to go ahead simply because the control of its business has been carelessly and frivolously handed over to incompetents.

Electing a City Council, or to be exact, half a Council, is a serious matter, for it should not be forgotten that the successful candidates hold office for two years, and a lot of damage could be done in that time by inefficient and irresponsible aldermen.

That should be the viewpoint of the elector in marking his ballot.

The Examiner has no desire to dictate to anybody whom he should vote for, preferring to leave that to the judgment of the individual elector; but we cannot help pointing out that the silliest and most indefensible misuse of the franchise would be to vote for any candidate "as a joke."

The fun would all evaporate in the face of the next tax bill.

THE REAL ISSUE.

The Examiner agrees with the opinion that the police controversy should not be regarded as the chief issue in the Mayoralty campaign.

It does not matter an iota who is Mayor of Peterborough next year so far as the definite settlement of this question is concerned, for as already pointed out the final decision will have to come from the Legislature, and that decision will be made regardless of what Peterborough may or may not do.

The Kitchener bill will bring the whole matter before the Legislature, so that the identity of Peterborough's Chief Magistrate will not enter into the situation.

There are more important things for the electors to think about than the control of the police, desirable as it is to have that controversy cleared up.

Has Peterborough as a city been making the progress during the past few years that she should have made?

Oshawa is gaining on us by leaps and bounds, thanks to the the expansion of the automobile business.

Sedate Belleville has shown signs of new life, has secured a number of new industries, and is eagerly looking for more.

Peterborough cannot afford to drop behind in the race—and yet there is reason to believe that unless we can get more vigour and "pep" in our civic administration, more alertness in visualising opportunitnes, and more determination in capitalising them, it is impossible to hope for progress.

We cannot afford to spend months in arguing about whether or not a couple of policemen should be struck off the strength when other communities are settling down to real business and getting concrete results.

The question of a business administration of Peterborough's affairs is a vital issue — the police controversy merely a side show that will be wound up at Queen's Park when the Legislature meets.

MONEY OR YOUR LIFE.

A robber entered a Hamilton home. He was armed and masked. He was young and strong and very brave, says the London Advertiser.

He tiptoed up the stairs into a bedroom. Using his flashlight, he found an aged woman of 80 asleep.

Being a brave man, he leveled the gun at the face of the sleeping woman; had his finger on the trigger, ready to shoot in case she got up and attacked him.

Having the stage all set, he repeated a phrase calculated to impress a woman of 80 with the superiority of a young man with a gun and a mask.

The words were "Your money or your life."

The aged woman of 80, looking into the barrel of a gun held in the hand of a brave young man, got up and found a $10 bill with which she purchased a chance to live instead of being shot.

The brave young man with the revolver took the $10 bill from the old lady of 80 and departed without shooting her.

May this brave young skunk fall into the hands of the police, and may the unerring swish of the prison lash fall on his bare hide.

THE TORCH BEARERS.

ent are the torch-bearers of the future. Every little while the pessimist makes heavy moan over what will happen when they take over and carry on alone. Their days, their diet, their dress, their company, their thoughtless devotion to the dance and the passing show make it impossible that they should wisely guide the ship that carries the precious freight of the generations that have marched down the years with God. If this accumulated wealth is not quickly dissipated by the coming generation, then the next—if there be a next—will destroy like the locust. "If there be a next," we say, because the flappers with their late hours and loose morals, with their thoughts upon the dance and the movies and with no thoughts for such trifles as love and religion, will not be capable of bearing strong children and the race as well as the cherished possessions will face extinction. So the pessimist.

Nothing is more difficult than wise judgment of the coming generation. An old writer uses a phrase of pathetic beauty and truth when he talked of "strangers and pilgrims." We are pilgrims perforce, but strangers the generations will ever be. The rare cases when the father understands the son, or the mother the daughter, are the supreme moments in our pilgrimage. But for the coming and receding generations to do anything more than meet, touch, commingle and misunderstand seems beyond attainment. Crabbed age and youth! Scepticism rules the soul, dyspepsia the body of the one, crudeness and vanity guide the other. There appears no common meeting place. But the generation now growing old was once young. It was no wiser and certainly not less crude than the growing boys and girls of today. In the item of knowledge, the young generation knows very much more than the earlier generation did. The schoolboy with a few hours' study has revealed to him secrets that Kepler and Laplace, Cuvier and Buffon would have given much to know. They are really born in the tide of the times. If formerly men had more time to think and trod a quieter earth, it is at least open to question if they used that time more wisely and filled the quietness with greater vision and insight, than will the better equipped generations with more absorbing avocations. The most that can be said is that they muddled through.

The golden age is not in the past. To be sure that past has produced men who have reached the mountain peak of human achievement. But these men are the property of every generation. They belong to a timeless world. They shine like the stars for ever and ever—shining in the stillness or noise of the world's night. The golden age is in the future. God is the goal of our pilgrimage. As we grow older, if we keep an open mind, we may see Him everywhere. The laughter of children, the beauty of "flappers," the thoughtless and natural development of the young, the affections of home, the courage, honesty, heroism of our fellows—a thousand daily experiences reveal Him. The fact would seem to be that having emerged from the ruck of sentient forms of life in the slow and natural process of the suns, the human species has come to be en rapport with what, for want of a fitter word, we call the Divine.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

A Happy New Year to every citizen of Peterborough.

Start the year right by voting early tomorrow. It is one of the most important duties of the next twelve months.

The women voters should give a lead to the men by exercising their franchise. A lot of the male electors need an example to make them realize their responsibility to the community in which they live.

Five of the school trustee candidates will be selected for the board and the remainder for the plank.

What kind of a bedtime story will be provided for some of the candidates tomorrow?

The most entertaining nursery rhyme of the day is the Toronto Telegram's warning to the people of Toronto, "R. J. Fleming'll get you if you don't watch out."

It can never be said of Mexico that there is apathy so far as the political situation is concerned.

A grand opera soloist was engaged to sing for the convicts in Sing Sing. They should have protested that that was not in their sentence.

PROJECT IS BEGUN TO HELP GRECIANS.

Commission Will Investigate Needs of Refugees to Be Helped By the League of Nations.

SALONIKI, Dec. 31 (Associated Press)—The arrival in Saloniki of Henry Morgenthau, former United States Ambassador to Turkey, as chairman of the Refugee Setlement Commission of the League of Nations, has officially opened the greatest project of reestablishing a homeless refugee population that probably ever has been undertaken. With John Campbell of Great Britain the second member of the commission, Mr. Morgenthau made a brief survey of refugee conditions in Saloniki and adjacent territories, after which the two Commissioners proceeded to Athens to confer with the government and start drafting plans for the agricultural settlements which the League has authorized in its loan of $25,000,000 to Greece.

At the present time hundreds of thousands of refugees are crowded into Saloniki, Macedonia and western Thrace, dependent upon government doles and what feeding can be given by British and American relief organizations. The immediate purpose of the commission is to establish the agriculturalists among them upon the untilled lands of Macedonia and western Thrace. This involves a scientific estimate of the nature of soils, the division of the refugees into groups such as wheat, tobacco and vine cultivators for assignment to various districts and the providing of houses, barns, live-stock, implements and seeds which will enable them to get into production.

The commission will follow the Russian system of building villages adjoining agricultural lands. Each settlement will consist of about 2,000 acres. Houses will be constructed, and tools and seeds supplied. Land, buildings and equipment will ultimately be offered for sale to the tenants on the instalment plan of payment. Mr. Morgenthau believes such loans will be repaid in from 12 to 15 years.

It is hoped that agricultural banks may, in the future, relieve the commission by handling a portion of the land contracts. Later efforts will be made to interest foreign capital in the drainage of the Strouma and Vardar valleys, which would result in the reclamation of large areas of extremely fertile land. No distinction has been made between Greek and other Anatolian refugees, in drafting the plans of these refugees settlements.

The soil of Spitzbergen has been found to be frozen to a depth of 1000 feet. In summer the surface thaws to a depth of about two feet.

Premier Yamamoto tendered the resignations this afternoon, however, indicating that the Cabiet members do not desire to remain in office.

BENES IS A NEW TYPE STATESMAN

Instead of Writing Important Instructions to His Foreign Ministers He Goes to See Them.

GENEVA, Dec. 29 (Associated Press).—The meeting in Paris of the Council of the League of Nations has drawn attention to one of the striking personalities in European politics. He is Edouard Benes, the diplomatic leader of Czechoslovakia, and represents his country on the council. Judged by the standards of Europe, he is a new type of foreign minister; not a calamity howler, a well informed man who believes that conditions gradually are getting better instead of worse.

Benes does not believe much in sitting in a leather desk-chair and dictating orders to his ministers in foreign lands. When he has a big thing on he packs his grip and goes traveling. He runs over to London, or to Paris or to Rome, and drops in on foreign secretaries and prime ministers to have a friendly chat and talk over things of mutual interest. Nor does he talk too much. At the last assembly meeting Benes got the reputation of being rather a quiet man, who does a lot of hard and useful thinking before he opens his mouth. He has a good firsthand knowledge of European politics, and more particularly of European statesmen.

Benes first showed his ability when he manoeuvred the desertion of the Czechoslovakian troops from Austria over to the side of Russia. And Benes is the architect of the Little Entente. He made the minority treaties workable by putting something constructively economic into them, and helped the League of Nations, of which he is an ardent advocate, build a machinery whereby minority population questions could be treated in an equitable manner. He helped get the Austrian financial reconstruction problem before the League, and is now backing the proposed financial reconstitution of Hungary which is expected further to help in the restoration of Europe.

WAY IS NOW OPEN FOR APPOINTMENT

Canadian Resident Minister at Washington Following Netirement Sir Auckland Geddes.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. Canadian Press. — The retirement of Sir Auckland Geddes as British ambassador at Washington, it is learned here from sources well informed on Canadian political affairs, will be followed quickly by the appointment of a resident Canadian Minister at Washington.

Changing political conditions in Canada, it is expected, will tend also to hasten the result.

While the present ambassador has said in Canada that the appointment of a minister in Washington was purely a Canadian affair, it has been well understood that privately Ambassador Geddes depreciated this action as tending towards lessening the influence of the British government in Canadian affairs. Other self governing dominions, it has been feared, would desire to follow the example set by Canada.

The objection of Ambassador Geddes to the appointment of a Canadian minister is understood to have a personal as well as a national angle. Sir Auckland Geddes was named ambassador to represent the entire British Empire. Seventy-five per per cent. aproximately of the business of the British embassy deals with Canadian affairs and to take this away from the province of the present British representative might have been regarded as an encroachment upon the dignity of his task. Sir Esme Howard, who is to succeed Ambassador Gedes will accept the appointment with a full knowledge of the impending selection so any possible curtailment of his official responsibility will not be seen in a change of status so far as the new ambassador's relationship to the empire is concerned.

Beware of Worry or Any Other Unhappy Emotion

BY MARIAN HALE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.— If you are beautiful—and sophisticated—and want to retain your beauty—

Beware!

Don't let aggravation or worry, or any other unhappy emotion engulf you. It is detrimental to beauty.

Here is Lady Diana Manners, now Mrs. Duff-Cooper, England's beauty of beauties. She came here innocently to take the part of the Madonna in "The Miracle" and has walked into a veritable hornet's nest of strife and bitterness over choice of the actress for this part.

Princess Norina Marchabelli of Italy has also arrived to take the same role, and she insists she'll play the part which she says had been created especially for her.

Yet, Lady Diana goes right on rehearsing as though there were no doubt she was the only choice for it Calmly, unperturbed, she takes her rehearsals daily.

No Sign Without.

That is the secret of her undefiled beauty. No matter what may go on within you, don't show it—that is her recipe.

"Be sophisticated," are her words, "but don't betray it. The only woman who is really successful with the ingenue roles is the wise, wise woman whose baby stares stops the world wisdom shining through her eyes.

"In these days you've got to know how to play the game. But your best pose is to act as if you didn't, to give people the exquisite pleasure of helping you get what you want."

Slim, gracefully regal, the stately English type as its best, with a complexion the school girl might well try to keep—if she ever had it! That is Lady Diana Manners. Violet eyes, golden hair, swanlike neck. All this beauty carried with just the assurance the daughter of a duke should have.

Leading Flapper.

England's first flapper—that is what she likes to be called. She has given English society a number of occasions to gasp at her modern notions. She has been the inspiration of many other titled women to become more democratic in their views and actions.

Never before has she appeared on the speaking stage, although the screen has shown her a number of times.

Work is her hobby. From 10.30 in the morning until 11 at night she goes through three rehearsals daily to perfect her part. For two hours I watched her go through a series of pantomimes that were not much different from the daily dozen at a slow tempo. Not once did she stop to rest or lose her interest.

THE SCOTS GUID NEW YEAR

(By AULD AYR)

The great national holiday of Scotland is the "New Year," and this includes the last day of the old year as well. On these days everyone likes to be at home, if possible. Of course, the school children have holidays and many grown-up sons and daughters, who perhaps live in other towns, travel long distances in order to "bring in" the New Year's Day at home, and in this respect many local Scots frae the ither side—United States and other cities aroon who look upon Peterboro as their hame on this side O' the Atlantic, although their hearts are in "Auld Scotia."

Christmas Not a Holiday

Christmas is not a holiday in Scotland, except for bank employees and people at home, who can take a holiday if they like. According to tradition, this is because, at the Scottish Reformation, it was decided that no day should be kept as a Holy Day except Sunday, but now the people are begining to see that it is only right that the birthday of the little Christ-child should be remembered.

However, if it seems strange to us that the majority of Scotch people are indifferent to Christmas, they make up for it at New Year's. When we are settling down to our ordinary routine after our Christmas celebrations, a Scotsman and his family are preparing for a Guid New Year. On Auld Year's Day all the business concerns are closed and the fathers are all "at hame."

While the "guid wife" is busy "reddin' up" the hoose in preparation for a family gathering, the "Guid man and a' his family" maybe away waiting the "strike o' twelf'" at the steeple or may hae set oot tae first-fit. Some of them carry the traditional "Hogmanay" in their pocket of baith saft and har' stuff, and according to custom it is "guid luck" for a dark person to enter the house first in the New Year.

"Awa' Tae the Kirk"

Parents and elder sisters and brothers go to the midnight service at the church to "see the Auld Year oot and the New Year in." Just as the stroke of twelve rings out, all the bells of the town, whistles of the factories, sirens of the steam-boats, begin to ring and great shouts go up from the throngs of people who are assembled in the streets.

"Hogmanay Nicht"

In Peterboro, the local Scots hold their annual "Hogmanay Nicht" wi' a dance and "halesome fairn." As the hour approaches you can see the distant thoughts in the faces of the Scots frae auld Scotia with happy memories recalled. The hour has struck the solemn strokes of twelve when the company take one another's hands and sing, "A Guid New Year," (an old Scotch song)—

"A guid New Year tae ane and a'
And mony may ye see,
And during a' the years tae come
O happy may ye be.
And may ye ne'er hae cause tae mourn,
To sigh or shed a tear;
Tae one and a', baith great and sma'
A hearty, guid New Year.

CHORUS—
"A guid New Year tae one and a',
An' mny moay ye see.
And during a' the years tae come,
O happy may ye be.

"O, time flies on, he canna wait,
For you, ma friens, or me;
He works his wonders, day by day
And onward still doth flee.
O, who can tell when ilka ane,
We see sae happy here;
We'll meet again and merry be
Anither guid New Year.

After the customary good wishes some will trudge home again very tired "tae spend the early 'oors at hame,' then others indulge in the usual festivities of the occasion.

In The City

In many houses in Peterboro you can view the "licht in the window" as you pass on your journey around your "first-footing" because the first person who enters the house after midnight is called a "first-foot." Each one goes provided with cakes of shorthread, for it is considered unlucky for a "first-foot" to come empty-handed if he wishes his friends good luck. It is surprising how many people of Scots descendants who keep the customary hour in reverence of their forefathers in Canada, their land of adoption.

Go To Fitba' or Pantomime

This visiting goes on throughout the whole day, everyone astir: calling on one another, distributing presents, and wishing one another a "Guid New Year." While others spend the day in witnessing "the local Derby" at a fitba' match in their respective districts, then in the evening they may participate in a dahce, but many prefer "tae gang a' see the Pantomime" such as "Cinderella," "Sinbad, the Sailor," etc., which produces many beautiful spectacles in artistic fancy of wearables worn by the leading artists. Also, the favorite musical bits of the season getting their introduction which ultimately finds the Scots boy or lassies "whistling" his favorite tune in masterly fashion.

Factory Practice

Qnother custom in many factories in Auld Scotia is to give the last person who appears into work a great reception on the last day of the year. He will carry the honour with him for the next year which carries with it a "glorious title," but next year it has been a known truth that the unfortunate person would be up and early at the gate waiting to get into business so as to be relieved of the "insignia" next year.

Robert Burns on New Year's Day.

Robert Burns, Scots poet, speaking on New Year's Day to Mrs. Dunlop at her fire-side is equally true and beautiful:

"This day, Time winds th' exhausted chain,
To run the twelvemonths length again:
I see the old, bald-pated fellow,
With ardent eyes, complexion sallow,
Adjust the unimpaired machine,
To wheel the equal, dull routine.

* * *

"First, what did yesternight deliver?
'Another year is gone for ever!'
And what is this day's strong suggestion?
'The passing moment's all we rest on!'
Rest on—for what? What do we here?
Or why regard the passing year?
Will time, amus'd with proverbial lore,
Add to our date one minute more?
A few days may—a few years must—
Repose in us the silent dust.

* * *

"That on this frail, uncertain state,
Hangs matters of eternal weight:
That future life, in worlds unknown,
Must take its hue from this alone;
Whether as Heavenly glory bright,
Or dark as Misery's woeful night.

* * *

"Since then, my honour'd, first of friends,
On this poor being all depends.
Let us th' important now employ,
And live as those who never die.—

* * *

"Tho' you, with days and honours crown'd,
Witness that filial circle round,
(A sight, life's sorrows to repulse,
A sight, pale Envy to convulse).
Others now claim your chief regard;
Yourself, you wait your bright reward.

Auld Country Dances

The local Scots have made special zrrangements for "Hogmanay" with a dance to be held in Victoria Hall on Monday evening (to-night) which will include Highland Reels, Veletta, Wally (country dances), Eightsome Reels, Circassin Circle, Reel o' Tulloch and many other dances.

Piabair-au-Petro

Piper Alex. Milne, Piabair-au-Petro, (the Peterboro piper) will play the music for the Highland dances, and the other dances will be supplied by Caledonia orchestra.

CRADLE RAIDED FOR A COLONEL

BELGRADE, Dec. 29 (Associated Press).—The heir to the crown of Jugoslavia holds the distinction of being the youngest colonel in any army of the nations of the world. Having recently reached the age of seven weeks, his elevation to the military rank of regimental commander coincided with his christening.

Young Karageorgevitch took the record away from Jaime of Bourbon, of Madrid, the eldest son of King Alfonso, who was made a colonel upon celebrating his first birthday.

XXX.

It seemed to Clavering that he had run the gamut of the emotions while listening to that brief biography, so sterilely told, but there had also been times when he had felt as if suspended in a void even while visited by flashes of acute consciousness that he was being called upon to know himself for the first time in his life. And in such fashion as no man had ever been called upon to know himself before.

There was no precedent in life or in fiction to guide him, and he had realized with a sensation of panic even while she talked that it was doubtful if any one had ever understood himself since the dawn of time. Man had certain standards, fixed beliefs, ideals, above all, habits—how often they scattered to the winds under some unheralded or teratogenic stress. He had seen it more than once, and not only in war. Every man had at least two personalities that he was aware of, and he dimly guessed at others. Some were frank enough to admit that they had not an idea what they would do in a totally unfamiliar situation. Clavering had sometimes emblemized man and his personalities with the old game of the ivory egg. A twist and the outer egg revealed an inner. Another and one beheld a third. And so on to the inner unmanipulatable sphere which might stand for the always unscrutable soul. Like all intelligent men, he had a fair knowledge of these two outer layers of personality, and he had sometimes had a flashing glimpse of others, too elusive to seize and put under the microscopic eye of the mind.

What did he know of himself? He asked the question again as he sat in his own deep chair in the early morning hours. The heat in the hotel had been turned off and he had lit the gas logs in the grate—symbol of the artificialities of civilization that had played their insidious role in man's outer and more ious role in man's outer and more.... familiar personality. Perhaps they struck deeper. Habit more often than not dominated original impulse.

His own room, where he was nearly always alone, with its warm red curtains and rug, the low bookcases built under his direction and filled with his favorite books, the refectory table and other pieces of dark, old English oak that he had brought from home, and several family portraits on the wall, restored his equilibrium and his brain was abnormally clear. He wondered if he ever would sleep again. Better think it over now.

Mary Zattiany as she talked had never changed her expression. She might have been some ancient oracle reciting her credo, and she seemed to have narcotized that magnetic current that had always vibrated between them. Nevertheless, he had been fully aware that she felt like nothing less than an oracle or the marble bust she looked, and that her soul was racked and possibly fainting, but mastered by her formidable will.

Formidable. Did that word best express her? Was she one of the superwomen who could find no mate on earth and must look for her god on another star? He certainly was no superman himself to breathe on her plane and mate that incarnate will. Had she any human weakness? Even that subterranean sex-life in her past had not been due to weakness. She was far too arrogant for that. Life had been her footstool. She had kicked it about contemptuously. Even her readjustments had been the dictates of her imperious will. And her pride! She was a female Lucifer in pride.

No doubt the men she had dismissed had been secretly relieved; stung for the only time in their lives perhaps, with a sense of inferiority. It must have been like receiving the casual favors of a queen on her throne. Well, she had got it in the neck once; there was some satisfaction in that. He wished he knew the man's name. He'd hunt him up and thank him in behalf of his sex.

For an hour he excoriated her, hated her, feared her, dissociating her from the vast army of womanhood, but congratulating himself upon having known her. She was a unique if crucifying study.

With restored youth superimposed upon that exhaustive knowledge of life—every phase of it that counted in her calculations—the rejuvenation of all her great natural endowments, she'd probably go back and rule Europe! What use could she possibly have for any man?

He made himself a cup of coffee over his electric stove, turned off the malodorous gas, which affected his head, stood out on his balcony for a moment, then lit his pipe and felt in a more mellow mood.

After all, she had suffered as only a woman so liberally endowed could suffer, and over a long period of years. She had known despair and humiliation and bewilderment, lethargic hopelessness, and finally a complete sacrifice of self. His imagination, in spite of his rebellious soul, had furnished the background for that bald recital.

And she must have an indomitable soul, some inner superfine spiritual essence, with which arrogance and even pride had less to do than she imagined. Otherwise, after the life she had led, she would either have become an imperious, uncomfortable old woman, or one of those faltering nonentities crowded into the backwaters of life by a generation which inspires them with nothing but timidity and disapproval. Towering individualities often go down to defeat in old age.

And nothing could alter the fact that she was the most beautiful and the most wholly desirable woman he had ever known, the one woman who had focussed every aspiration of his mind, his soul, and his body. He knew he must ask himself the inevitable question and face it without blinking. Was he appalled by her real age; could he ever get away from the incredible fact that whate-er miracle science may have effected, her literal age was verging on sixty? If she were not an old woman she had been one. That beautiful body had withered, undesired of all men, that perfect face had been the battered mirror of an aged ego. He did not ask himself if the metamorphosis would last, if the shell might not wither again tomorrow. He was abreast of the important scientific discoveries of his day and was not at all astonished that the problem of senescence should be solved. It was no more remarkable than wireless, the Rontgen Ray, the properties of radium, or any one of the beneficient contributions of science to the well-being of mankind that were now too familiar for discussion. He had heard a good deal of this particular discovery as applied to men. No doubt Dinwiddie and Osborne would soon be appearing as gay young sparks on her doorstep. It might be the greatest discovery of all time, but it certainly would work both ways. While its economic value might be indisputable, and even, as she had suggested, its spiritual, it would be hard on the merely young. The mutual hatreds of capital and labor would sink into insignificance before the antagonism between authentic youth and age inverted. On the other hand it might mean the millennium. The threat of over-population—for man's architectonic powers were restored if not woman's; to say nothing of his prolonged sojourn—would at last rouse the law-makers to the imperious necessity of eugenics, birth control, sterilization of the unfit, and the expulsion of undesirable races. It might even stimulate youth to a higher level than satisfied it at present. Human nature might attain perfection.

However, he was in no mood for abstract speculation. His own problem was absorbing enough.

He might as well itemize the questions he had to face and examine them one by one, and dispassionately. He would never feel more emotionless than now; and that mental state was very rare that enabled a man to think clearly and see further than a yard ahead of him

MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

"For he that hath, to him shall be given; and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath."—Gospel of Mark 4 : 25.

Did you ever stop to think how much it costs in dollars and cents to be poor? If you do not have available cash on hand to pay for the things you need, they will cost you more.

For instance, in buying furniture, ordinarily one can get a 10 per cent discount for cash while about 15 per cent is added for partial payment. Another example is in the case of needed repairs, which cannot be made because there is no cash available. Consequently they finally cost two or three times as much.

What is the reason for being poor? Simply that the average man spends all or more than his income before he gets it. No business or individual can afford to be without a surplus. By setting aside a certain percentage of income and not spending it all, the average man will cease to be poor and he can discount his bills, and make repairs when they're needed.

Being poor is a relative position and inefficient management is the only thing that keeps one there.

BRIDAL PARTY WERE DELAYED

Took Train When Motor Stalled on Way to Marmora—Winter Sets In.

The marriage of Kenneth Barriage of Belleville, and Maude Rose of Belleville, took pace at the Methodist parsonage in Marmora on Wednesday, December 26...

The young couple started to motor from Belleville but on account of a break down on the way they finished their trip on the train arriving in Marmora in time for the ceremony to begin at 2.30.

Marmora was several days behind time in receiving a good covering of snow. Motorists told of several inches of snow in Peterboro and west of there on Christmas day but Thursday night Marmora received her first large snow storm.

The children are getting out their sleighs now but preparing for a few days of real winter sport before school begins again.

Thursday again saw skating on the cove when some of the most venturesome young people spent the evening enjoying a good skate.

A meeting of the Library Board of Marmora Public Library was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. D. E. Bell. The Board decided that the membership fee of the Library be raised from 75 cents to $1.00 for 1924. The Library was not open on Tuesday on account of the holiday.

Mr. Ernest Osborne returned from Winnipeg on Sunday night for a two week's holiday before he begins to work again.

Rev. D. R. Clare and family motored to Omemee on Wednesday, where they spent several days visiting Mrs. Clare's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Scott.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

Misses Sprat across the street was watching.

Daddy Gander and Tom Tinker helped the Twins to get started at housekeeping in their Christmas-tree house.

It was a very little house, made for very little dollies to go housekeeping in when they got tired of hanging on a Christmas tree.

But that difficulty was soon overcome by Daddy Gander waving his magic dustpan, one, two, three times and saying a gibberish charm.

The little house began to swell and swell until the doorway was exactly as high as Nancy's head. Nick, who was one-thousandth part of an inch taller than Nancy, had to stoop one-thousandth part of an inch to get in.

The furniture was mostly of paper and so were the windows; and evidently the best parlor was to be used as laundry, bedroom and kitchen also, for a whole washing-set, clothes-pins and all, stood besied the card-board piano, and the kitchen stove stood directly behind a red plush sofa.

There may have been a reason for this, for kitchen stoves are weighty and firm and to be depended upon, and the poor little red plush sofa had no hind legs. No doubt it was very glad of the stove's support.

Tom Tinker turned on the lights which gave the place a festive air, the windows being covered with red and green paper.

"Now, my dears, I do hope you'll be comfortable," said Daddy Gander. "I'll have the Pieman and the Baker-man and the Butcher send in supplies."

"I think it's perfectly lovely!" cried Nancy, clapping her hands. "If you know of anybody who has any washing to do, send them in too, please. I'd love to try this dear little wringer and these really truly clothes-pins."

"I'll just do that," said Daddy Gander. "I must go now and see if Tom Tucker had made any more crumbs. If Mother Goose comes home and finds I haven't kept things in order, she'll be as cross as anything. Goodby, now!" And away went Daddy Gander, with Tom Tinker dancing a jig behind him.

Missez Sprat across the street was watching.

"Humph!" she declared. "It's as plain as the nose on the burgomaster's face that Missez Goose isn't at home! Such goings on! Daddy Gander renting that house to strangers while she is away, and she not knowing a word about it!

"But anyway, one has to be civil to one's new neighbors, and I'll go right over and call and leave two of Jack's cards and one of mine. Besides, it's far more exciting to be the first one to call and tell all the gossip. If I don't hurry, as sure as anything, Mother Hubbard will beat me."

And Missez Sprat began to take down her curl papers as fast as her fingers would fly.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

It may be truly said that eugenic improvement is attained through the control of heredity. Again, it is understood that by heredity is meant the action of elements which control the development of the individual and determine his constitution or makeup. The laws of nature which determine this action are known now far better than ever before.

There is a rather mistaken idea, too often loosely accepted by the public, that eugenic improvement refers to sex hygience of the race alone. Sex hygiene is, of course, a part of the general consideration to be dealt with in eugenic improvement, but it is by no means the whole subject. Unfortunately, it is one part which seems to be unduly emphasized when the subject of eugencies is mentioned. In fact, many ignorant people are opposed to any spread of knowledge of eugenic improvement because they regard it as not proper knowledge for boys and girls of school age.

It is a subject which should be accepted as vital to our homes and race. The war records of young men and women show what may be expected if we rely upon the uninformed publicists for information.

By eugenic improvement is meant the use of special medical and scientific knowledge which will aid people in the ordinary walks of life to better and improve their living conditions, themselves and their offspring. Remember that injuries which may be life-long can be inflicted on your offspring by unhygienic living. Learn how to secure and keep, as a priceless heritage to the generation ahead, a round body.

Not all shortcomings are inherited, but lack of germ resistance is, to a great extent. Eugenic improvement is raising the mental, physical and moral life to the best development possibly by right living.

EUROPE AWAKENING FROM NIGHMARE OF THE WORLD WAR

LONDON, Dec. 31 (United Press)—Europe has completed another year of her slow awakening from the nightmare of the world war.

Perhaps the outstanding political development of the year was a strong movement towards conservatism in billigerent and neutral, conqueror and conquered States alike. Radicals lost ground everywhere, except in England, where labor materially increased its power and parliamentary prestige.

Benite Mussojini has consolidated his Fascist Government in Italy.

Greece is in the hands of a military dictatorship, and militant republicans are pulling the King's throne ont from under him. He has been expelled.

General Primo Rivera is the virtuall dictator of Spain, after a bloodless revolution of one day.

Conservatives seized the relus in Bulgaria and the radical prime minister, Stamboulisli, was killed in the sharp fighting that attended the overthrow.

Germany seems about to follow these States and declare for a strictly conservative government, as against the present coalition—itself much more conservative than its predecessors.

On Verge of War

Once Europe was brought to the verge of war. Italian members of an allied military mission were killed on Greek soil. Italy's fleet bombarded the Greek port of Corfu. The casualties were refugees, mostly children. In the end Greece satisfied the Italian demands and war that would have involved all Europe was averted.

States collapsed and others were rehabilitated during the year.

Germany, a great world power, collapsed almost completely, and now seems to have seen the worst of her troubles.

Turkey has won back by the peace of Lausanne what she lost during the war, and more. She finds herself a strong, progressive republic, with Mustaphe Kemal, who led the Angora revolt, her President.

Russia Starts Back

Russia has started to come back. Italy and Great Britain are preparing to recognize her soon—almost certainly within the year.

Austria, stripped of her most valuable territory, reached the depths of economic ruin. Today her finances are being restored by the League of Nations.

Hungary is to be assisted similarly as soon as the consent of some doubtful League members is obtained.

Greece, torn by war and revolution, has applied for aid.

But 1924 opens with continental Europe still in grave difficulties, but no worse off, perhaps better, than at the beginning of 1923.

At the close of 1922, France had just rejected British and Italian plans to solve the reparations question.

And 1923 opened with French and Belgian troops marching into the Ruhr, where they seized the most productive centre of the German republic as a guarantee that reparations payments, which, it was complained, were slow and inadequate, would be made promptly and fully.

Germany began passive resistance. England refused to co-operate with her allies, France and Belgium, and Italy was an unwilling assistant to them.

Reparations payments ceased. For months there was a stalemate; abortive attempts at agreement; riots; imprisonment of German industrialists and government officials; murders of French and Belgian soldiers; shooting-up o ftowns by French and Belgian forces.

Allies Estrangled

All the time conditions in Germany became worse. And the allies, who had fought and won the war together, became more and more estranged.

Then Germany collapsed. The mark became worthless. There were unsuccessful attempts at rebellion in Bavaria and the Rhineland—the former aiming at seizing power and restoring the monarchy, the latter at proclaiming Rhineland republic.

Passive resistance ceased, and nothing happened.

Great Britain and the United States proposed a huge reparations conference to settle the whole mess. The idea failed, because France refused to permit the reassessment of Germany's war liability.

Allied military control over Germany had ceased, because of the chaotic conditions. France wanted it restored immediately. England refused and threatened to withdraw her troops and cease to co-operate with the allies.

For the first time since war, France gave in.

Things changed for the better. France signed an agreement with the Ruhr industrialists for payment of reparations.

Then France proposed an investigation by the Reparations Commission of (1) German finances, and (2) German wealth deposited abroad, by two committees.

There may be further trouble about the Ruhr agreement, as to who is to get the money, if any.

May Settle Reparations

As to the investigation. Great Britain consented to it rather than argue, though believing it must fail. But as plans for it are formed Great Britain and others are beginning to believe that it may develop into a real one. If it does, the United States will join, and a settlement of the reparations problem may be effected.

The entente between France and Great Britain, which had become a myth, is stronger now than it has been for months. France is more conciliatory. Belgium wants friendship with England. And Italy has adopted the whole British program—which is peace and hard work.

France and Belgium are beginning to remove all but 10,000 of the 60,000 soldiers in the Ruhr.

Things in Europe during 1923 became so bad that they could not have got worse without war. Now, at least superficially, they are better. The outlook is more cheerful. 1925 may see Europe really convalescing.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinion and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Dec. 31. — (United Press.)— Cash transactions in large volume were the principal feature of the early dealings in the stock market. These sales represented belated establishment of losses against 1923 taxes and the fact that the market was generally strong in the face of this liquidation, demonstrated its splendid absorption powers. Business news over the week end was constructive with further advances in crude prices attracting the most attention. These upward revisions brought fresh demand for the oil shares which displayed group buoyancy in the initial trading.

Stocks gathered increasing strength as the first hour progressed and the general list displayed a strong tone around 11 o'clock. Producers and Refiners and Atlantic Refining were the features of the Oil group, while the Rails were generally buoyant. Under the leadership of Southern Railway, which sold at its best price of the year, 38 7-8. Chesapeake and Ohio was featured in the carrier group while Chicago and Northwestern made the best showing in the rebound from tax selling which the Northwestern issues experienced. Pronounced strength developing in the whole Railroad group on the threshold of the New Year reflected Wall Street's confidence that radical legislation would fail of enactment in 1924.

SATURDAY SAW THE LAST OF CAMPAIGN

J. J. Turner Had a Meeting in Which He Reiterated His Stand.

At a well attended meeting, John J. Turner repeated to his audience his determination to stand in tomorrow's election as the advocate of a sane, progressive policy looking towards the building up of the city. The meeting drew an attendance of about seventy citizens.

Mr. Turner in a humorous vein, said when he went to bat two years ago he struck out, but this year he is to make a home run. He has decided, he said, there is no use in letting things go by default. The wrongs must be corrected, and the only way is to go in and clean them out.

Referring first to the police dispute which he previously declared was not an issue and should not be made an issue, Mr. Turner said it is simply a little bit of trouble in the city's machinery, and is a small part of the city's business. "When you get a sliver in your finger," he said, "it is aggravating, but it doesn't stop your going out to your daily work. When I referred to the dispute last night I did not mean to minimize the question, but it should not obscure the main vital issues. If we are to reduce the tax rate we must fill up the vacant lots. There would be no more liability to the city, since sewers, sidewalks and water mains are already constructed and the builder immediately begins to pay taxes."

Mr .Turner remarked that the present is not a time for general expenditures. "We are slowly getting back to normal times, but are not yet in the midst of prosperity. The Council has not large sums to dispose of, and every dollar should go as far as possible .Council should carefully scrutinize all expenditures and do its utmost to get as good a return for the money as possible.

The same rule applies to the concern in which I earn my daily living. We study and consider every dollar we spend, and consider its being returned with interest. There should be no waste."

Mr. Turner elaborated on his expressed desire to see new firms locate here.

Much might be done in local improvements, Mr. Turner thinks, and this should be taken up by the next council. "We have a lovely lot of trees in the city," he said, "but nothing is being done to conserve them.

It would not take a large amount of money to start a plan of reforestration, and a definite plan should be laid out which could be followed from year to year. An outlay of $100 on this work every year would be small in itself, but over a period of year would be an asset of great value to the city. A progressive policy will show returns."

There are other problems, which are small in themselves, but which Mr .Turner said he would take up if returned to the Mayor's chair.

Suggesting that in homes and in home budgets the same spirit of economy be advocated for the city should be followed out, Mr. Turner said the city is not to the top of the hill yet, and care should be exercised in the management of all public and privtae affairs.

The thrift and ecenomy practised in his own business would be put into operation in the city if he was elected, Mr. Turner concluded.

TRUCE WAS BROKEN BY PULPIT ATTACK

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(Canadian Press). — The latest move in the controversy between the Fundamentalist and Modernist Churchmen, following the shattering of Bishop Manning's "Christmas truce" yesterday by pulpit statements from both sides, came to-day in the form of an open letter from Rev. Hamilton Schuyler, Rector of Trinity Church, Trenton, N.J. Mr. Schuyler suggested that the whole question of Modernism be fought out at the next general convention of the Anglican Church with a definite settlement of the points at issue by which all communicants be guided. The letter was by way of reply to the sermon of Dr. Leighton Parks, Rector of St. Barthalomew's Church, early in December, with which the insurrection of the Modernists' bust into flame.

From the pulpits of three of the city's largest churches defiance was hurled at the constituted authorities of the Church yesterday. Heresy was defended as often the eventful truth; the "autocratic power" of bishops was condemned; religion without a mixture of paganism was declared a "deathly bore" and the "ritual gone stale" of the Church of to-day was openly deplored.

While Modernist clergymen were thus renewing their insurrection the Fundamentalists celebrated High Mass in the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, and in his sermon Rev. Dr. Joseph C. H. Barry, Rector, admonished the bishops to discipline offending Modernist clergymen.

"The ultimate and whole question in the recent controversy is between a good tradition of Catholicism and Protestantism," he said. "It is a question whether men shall interpret the Bible as they, individually, see fit, or as it is interpreted by the authority of the Church.

"There has been modernism of the Church since the days of Cain and Abel, and I take it from evidence that Cain was a Modernist."

SCHOOL PROBLEM AT A GLANCE

In order to give electors a last comprehensive glimpse of the issue in the Elections to the Board of Education, The Examiner reprints in tabloid form the two proposals regarding the school erection problem:

The Combination Building will provide the following accommodation at a cost to the taxpayers after deducting the Government grant of $285,000.

14 class rooms, 1 machine shop, 1 wood-working shop (used also for manual training classes from the Collegiate Institute), 1 electric laboratory, 1 physical laboratory, 1 draughting room, 1 art room, 1 domestic science department (for millinery, dress making and cooking), (this would be used also by Collegiate pupils), 1 boys' gymnasium, board room, teachers' room, storage room for technical supplies and other necessary offices.

The Academical extension to the present Collegiate Institute will provide the following accommodation at a cost to the taxpayers of $215,000. There is no government grant.

8 class rooms (4 of which would be used immediately by the commercial students now in south central school), 1 boys' gymnasium, 1 girls' gymnasium, domestic science department, manual training department, teachers' room, and other necessary offices.

The figures given for the construction of the Combination School include the re-modelling of part of the present Collegiate so as to bring into use at present waste space. In both plans the two gymnasiums open together, forming a large auditorium.

The estimated costs are those submitted by Mrs. W. R. Morris and others, and are based upon the investigations of architects on present building costs.

MAN ACCIDENTALLY SHOT IN A "WILD WEST" ACT

MONTREAL, Dec. 31.—Shot in the head as he was walking back of scene on stage of the Princess Theatre, Farnham, Que, at nine o'clock last night, Thomas Trusler, aged 28, of Montreal, and manager of the "wild west" review, was fatally wounded and died in the hospital about two hours later. Accidental shooting came as the climax of the second scene in show when the comedy shot was being executed by Francis Dorham, another member of the company.

The theatre was crowded when the shooting occurred. Orders of Mr. Trusler, had been given early in the evening to al the member of the company to keep away from the back of the stage behind the back drop during the shooting act. It is thought he forgot the warning and walked behind the drop himself.

The bullet entered the head behind the right ear and lodged in the brain behind the eye.

POET WARRIOR HAS NOT SOUGHT YOUTH

PARIS, Dec. 31.—(United Press.)—Gabrielle D'Annunzio, Italy's poet-airman, is not seeking the restoration of his youth through surgery of Prof. Vornonoff, the latter declared upon his return here to-day from Turin.

The visit of Voronoff to the city, near which D'Annunzio, who is now devoting himself to a study of mysticism, has a villa and certain other indications led to rumors from Italian sources that the poet had sought the services of the famous Paris surgeon for a gland operation. This Voronoff denied.

A POLICE CHIEF WHO SAVED MONEY

London Chief Presented Council With $urplus of $2,000.

LONDON, Ont., Dec 31.—A New Year's gift of $2,000 has been handed the City Council by Chief of Police Robert Birrell, who saved that amount out of the estimates for 1923. Despite his commendable economy the Chief has managed to make several important improvements in the force, among which is a finger-print department, of which P. C. Walter Harper, who has been studying the system for years, is to be the head.

E. BRUCE FOWLER for Board of Education

I have allowed my name to go before the Electors, as a Candidate for re-election to the Board of Education, and if elected I shall favour a policy to furnish the best possible facilities for Academic and Technical Training consistent with the demands and the ability of the City to pay for same.

I am not in favour of the combination Technical and Collegiate extension to the present building, as proposed, because:

1—Our tax rate is already very high and the building of this school would increase our debenture debt well up to half a million dollars.

2—The site is not suitable for a building of such proportions, and was originally condemned by the Department of Education in Toronto.

3—The building of work-rooms for Technical purposes under this plan is too expensive.

I recognise the necessity for increased accommodation to our Collegiate, and will favour a minimum extension to the present building to include the present Commercial Classes, Domestic Science, Manual Training, and Night Classes. This extension, I am satisfied, can be completed for around $200,000, and will provide fully three-quarters of the Vocational Training proposed in the Combination School.

Allowing for the Government grants for Technical purposes on the Combination scheme, which are paid only as the debentures mature, a minimum extension to our present building will save the ratepayers at least $100,000, and provide ample accommodation for Secondary Education for several years or until our city grows sufficiently to support a separate Technical School.

This plan will place us in a position to open our Collegiate Institute to all County pupils, and the revenue from the County, for such pupils, will almost pay the interest on the investment. Besides, the trade benefits to the City from the families from which these pupils come, is apparent.

Under present business conditions we must proceed carefully, and the approval of the ratepayers, who pay the bills, should be obtained.

Wishing you all a Happy New Year,

E. BRUCE FOWLER
Manager Canadian Hood Haggie Co.

VENIZELOS LEFT PARIS FOR ATHENS LAST NIGHT

MARSEILLES, Dec. 31.—(United Press.) —Across troubled seas, his steamer storm-tossed in mountainous Mediteranean waves, former Premier Venizelos was returning to Greece to-day, to a political situation scarcely less turbulent.

Despite severe gales, Venizelos sailed yesterday for Athens, where his arrival is eagerly awaited.

Before his departure, the former Premier declined to say what his plans were, save that he would insist upon an honest plebiscite as to whether Greece shall be a republic or a dynasty.

Board of Education

The expenditure of over $400,000.00 for a Combination Technical School would and should be submitted to the Ratepayers.

Before it is submitted, the Board should make all necessary investigations and pass on to the public the fullest possible information as to total cost of building and maintenance, what portion would be paid by the Province, and also what lines of Education it will be possible to obtain in a Technical School that cannot be obtained under present conditions.

With such information before them, the Ratepayers will be in a better position to vote on the By-law when presented. With its present indebtedness Peterborough can well afford to wait until we are very sure that the money would be wisely spent.

I am in favour of Technical Education, but do not consider that a definite opinion on the method by which it is to be obtained is called for at present, and I prefer to be in a position to approach this and other matters with an open mind, rather than feel tied by pre-election promises.

I have been a resident of Peterborough all my life, and a ratepayer to a fairly large extent on both residential and business property. My knowledge of taxes has been gained by paying them. If the ratepayers have sufficient confidence in my business ability to elect me to the Board of Education, I think I can give them representation that will be appreciated.

William A. Richardson

BOARD OF EDUCATION

FIVE REASONS why I still advocate a Combination Technical and High School Extension:

(1) —BECAUSE it would relieve the present overcrowding, and provide accommodation for many years.

(2)—BECAUSE it would give a large group of Students, who under the Adolescent Act must attend full time or part time day classes, the form of education which is better fitted to their needs than the Collegiate course.

(3)—BECAUSE if the city spends any money in the near future on increased facilities for Higher Education, the needs of all classes of Adolescents should be met.

(4)—BECAUSE an extension built at the rear of the Collegiate combining the two classes of Education, Technical and High School, would cost the city less because of the large Government grants given to Technical Education, to build, equip and maintain, than a smaller building used exclusively by Collegiate pupils.

(5)—BECAUSE when the city is large enough to support a Technical School, no part of the proposed extension need be scrapped, as all Technical work is carried on in ordinary class rooms, specially equipped. With the special equipment removed, these class rooms would be available for Collegiate purposes.

The plan I have outlined above, is the one generally followed by the smaller cities. It appeals to me as practical, economical, and fair to all classes of Students and Ratepayers.

NARCOTIC SITUATION IMPROVEMENT SMALL

OTTAWA, Dec. 31. — (Canadian Press).—The officials of the Federal Health Department, in a report just issued, deals with the narcotic situation which existed during the year which ended with March 31, 1923. They describe the conditions as not much improved, and express the belief that the dope traffic will continue to flourish until the sources in Europe and Asia are dried up through international action.

"At the present time," says the report, "arrangements are being made by the Customs and Federal police authorities, in co-operation with the League of Nations, by which it is hoped to get at the ringleaders behind the business of smuggling narcotics into the Dominion."

It is pointed out that the refusal of Turkey and Persia to join the opium convention makes it difficult to control the production of the basic drug, opium.

Downey to-day in the course of a thoughtful address upon education at the weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club, held as usual at the Empress. Vice-President Reid Wrenn was in the chair and the attendance was large, being swelled by the presence of a number of visitors.

A happy feature was the return, after a long absence, on account of illness, of Rotarian Gordon Matthews, who was given a warm reception. His entrance was marked by an outburst of applause and later in the meeting Chairman Wrenn expressed the pleasure of the club at seeing Rotarian Matthews back again. The members rose to their feet, sang "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and gave three hearty cheers.

Rotarian Alex Kay was given a hearty send-off on the eve of his departure for New York to take charge of the Government exhibit at the New York Motor Boat Show.

Mr. Downen, the speaker of the day, first outlined the educational system in the province of Ontario, starting with the Minister of Education, the Deuty Minister, the newly appointed Superintendent, and down through the list to the rural school trustee board of three members. It was one of the most highly centralized systems to be found anywhere declared the speaker, who passed on to discuss the cost of education, showing that in 1921 public school education cost Ontario $23,000,000, and high school and collegiate education some $3,500,000, the school population of the former being 500,000 and the latter 35,000. The cost per public school pupil in Peterborough was a little lower than the average for the province, while for collegiate pupils it was a trifle higher than the average.

The question that, as ratepayers, concerned his hearers the most was whether or not value was being received for this large expenditure upon education, this heavy investment in school buildings and in equipment.

And then as to wether enough was being done in the homes to assist the teachers in their work, whether there was sufficient home training in thrift industry, honesty, thinking and the habit of study.

The reason the country boy so often outstripped the city student was because in the country he was forced early in life to form some idea of responsibility. He had responsibilities thrust upon him, whereas the average city boy had no useful outlet for his surplus energy. "He'll even dodge snow shovelling if he can," said the speaker.

In conclusion Mr. Downey asked his hearers to go with him on a New Year's eve visit to the old teachers of their school days, and in the course of his imaginary journey he paid a warm tribute to the teacher who had been called to his profession and who did not get his reward in riches but in the consciousness of having taken the raw material and trainsformed it, of having moulded thousands of young lives, of having played a big part in the development of this county beacuse of the inspiration given the pupils who had come under his charge.

It was an impressive peroration and the applause of the club showed how much the speaker's remarks were appreciated.

Mr. J. J. Turner, in a happy little the speech, gave some of his experiences in meeting Peterborough people all through the west on his recent trip and wished the Rotarians a happy New Year.

ST. GEORGE'S CHILDREN HAD AN ENTERTAINMENT

About 150 teachers and scholars of St. George's Sunday School enjoyed a bountiful dinner on Friday evening in the school-room. The tables, with their bright red streamers and white narcissus, were in charming contrast to the dark background of evergreens and the gleaming Christmas tree.

Santa Claus was unable to be present, but after an interesting programme, which was given almost entirely by the scholars, the superintendent, Mr. Breadman, presented each child with a bag containing candy and an orange, and a present. Economy the Watchword with

TAYLOR AS MAYOR

W. H. TAYLOR'S administration has been an economical one, resulting in a reduction of the tax rate this year by two mills.

W. H. TAYLOR'S administration the past two years has placed Peterborough in a favourable position regarding taxation, as compared with other municipalities on a similar footing. For instance, the rate in Brockville is 38 mills, Sault Ste. Marie 37, Oshawa 43, Guelph 38, Ingersoll 40, London 34.7, Sarnia 36, Woodstock 37.5, Galt 44, Kingtson 51, Dundas 50, Smiths Falls 52, Cobourg 42, Whitby 45, Port Hope 45, and for Peterborough 34 mills.

W. H. TAYLOR, if re-eletced, will again exercise, with Council's co-operation, the same economy in administration for keeping the taxes down in 1924 as was successfully applied last year.

W. H. TAYLOR AT THE HELM of civic affairs will be found a chief executive of the people and for the people—a mayor whose advocacy knows no class distinction.

If YOU WANT ECONOMY in all civic expenditures—practical, not theoretical — and an administration founded on action and not verbosity, vote to

Re-Elect TAYLOR As Mayor

LITTLE WANT ADS.

At this time of the year, there are any number of things that are badly needed, either by the man or woman.

These things can be done without, but the Summer is going to be not quite a happy without them, and they need not cost you nearly as much as you think, if you only use the Want Ads to get them.

So many do lose a vast amount of pleasure simply because they have never learned the value of a simple little appeal to the Examiner Want Ad. Column. Don't let this bright month of June go by without satisfying a little extra Summer wants through the Want Ads.

Before You Vote: Read This

Many of my suporters are insisting that I pass my opinion on Mr Turner as a BUSINESS ADMINISTRATOR.

Here it is: At the meeting on Friday night, Mr. Turner stated that he still has faith the RED ARROW TIRE CO. project is feasible.

Have you any faith in it?

Every man and woman in Peterborough has talked and is still talking about the HUNTER STREET BRIDGE CONTRACT, which looks like the biggest blunder in the history of Peterborough, and yet Mr. Turner seconded the motion to give the contract to the Russell Townsend Co. on the COST PLUS PLAN for $228,600, and a fixed sum of $29,500, which finally amount to about half a million.

Mr. Turner was chairman of the Finance Committee at the time the bonds of the bridge were sold, which tied up the city for 20 years at 6½ per cent., when without any trouble he could have secured a private bill which would have allowed the issue for 5 years instead of 20, and the chance to renew every 5 years at the current rate. We could be saving 1¼ per cent. now.

When there was a chance for our local tailors to make the uniforms for the Police Force, Mr. Turner took the contract in November last year, and sent all the money, $1,024, to Britain.

Does this help our business men?

Has anyone found out Mr. Turner's police policy yet?

TO MR. CURVIN.

Now just a word to Mr. Curvin, although I hate to waste any space over him.

The whole story is very "fishy." If I lost a thousand dollars worth of anything, I would spend a little money myself in telegrams, etc., and in any event, Chief Newhall had not cause or authority to refuse to broadcast the warning, since all telegraphic and telephone tolls are paid direct by the City Treasurer. This Chief Newhall knows.

We read of robberies in large cities in broad daylight, and they get away with them; but in these cases the thieves are experts, whereas in your case, if you really did lose anything, it was done by a sneak thief, and could happen with fifty men on the force. We all have our ideas where these stories come from, and if I am elected I will carefully study the situation to see if we cannot cut off four men instead of two.

TO EVERYONE.

Everyone can help in his own district To-morrow to protect the rights of all the people by Voting for the man who stands behind the principle that THE PEOPLE HAVE RIGHTS.

NORTH TORONTO TO PLAY LOCALS

Arrangements have been made for a good exhibition game of hockey here on Friday night, when, if ice condition are favourable the North Toronto team will clash at the Brock St. rink with the Peterboro intermediates. The North Toronto crew put the Petes out of the running last season, are stronger than ever this season with a number of star seniors on the line up including Dr. Willard Box who will be seen on the defence on Friday night. The team will line up as follows: Goal, "Micky" Murray and Hayes; defence, Cain and Box; forwards, Muston, Rennie, 'Wee' Young, Stephenson.

The Petes have a number of new players who will be seen in action on Friday, while practically all of last year's team will be available.

The North Toronto team is already picked as the team to beat for the intermediate O.H.A. championship and Friday's game should give a good line on the chances of the Peterboro team.

Sell Reserved Seats.

The Peterboro intermediate O. H.A. has arranged a new system of handling reserved seat tickets this season. It has been decided that every patron who buys in advance reserved seats for the scheduled games of the first round will ahev the first claim the same seats for the balance of the season. These seats will be put on sale tonight and there is only a limited numbers, fans should get in early. Information can be obtained at Wright's Cigar store.

CARDIFF CITY WERE CRIPPLED

Injuries Cost Them Three Players For Saturday's Match Against Villans--Grounds Were Hard.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—(Canadian Press Cable).—Saturday's football surprises might have been expected after the strenuous holiday program Wintry weather affected the attendance somewhat but about 550,000 spectators saw plenty of good play on grounds which were a trifle hard. The chief effect of the frost was to keep down the scoring average which was only two goals per match. Frost also was responsible for the postponement of two games.

Cardiff City were without the services of Hardy, Glennelf and Evans owing to injuries but their match with Aston Villa was nevertheless fast and thrilling throughout. Arsenal deserved their victory over Chelsea for they did three-quarters of the attacking. The game was bustling but not clever. Birmingham whose game with the Tottenham Hotspurs was drawn as a result of a penalty goal are flattered by the result for, especialy in the second half, the game was one-sided. Maddison in the home goal had not a single shot to stop in the second half though Tottenham lacked the help of Grimsdell and Walden. Birmingham spoiled their chance by their robust methods. There were ten free kicks against them in the second half.

Liverpool yesterday secured their first victory since October, in a mist which at times covered the grounds. They were always vastly superior to West Ham.

Dillmore scored three times for Millwall. Fulham was a trifle unlucky in not obtaining a winning goal against Oldham for they always had more of the play. Fulham played their new centre forward, George Reid formerly of Cardiff City who gained the international cap for Ireland when playing for Walsall. Southampton thoroughly deserved victory over Hull City, out playing the visitors, particularly in the first half when all the scoring was done.

Found Big Leaguer Studying in Paris

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—"Times do change," mused John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, yesterday. The cause of his rumination is in Paris studying Latin. He is none other than Moe Berg, former Princeton star who played shortstop for the Brooklyn Dodgers last summer. Berg called on McGraw while he was in Paris and told him of his studies. "Shades of Kelly and Anson," said McGraw. "Whoever heard of a ball player spending his vacation studying Latin — and in Paris? But times do change."

ST. PATS LOST IN MONTREAL

Were Blanked By the Canadiens, Who Scored Three Goals in Fast Game.

MONTREAL, Dec. 31.—Canadiens materially bettered their position in the National Hockey League race when they captured the opening game of the local professional hockey team, blanking the St Patricks at the Mount Royal Arena Saturday night 3 to 0. Superiority at all stages throughout the struggle of a light, young aggressive forward line over an attacking combination of heavier and older players was responsible for the locals' victory. It was only the splendid work of Roach in the nets for the visitors from Toronto that kept the Canadien wings from adding further to their scoring records.

The second period was the fastest of the match and by far the best contested. Canadiens pressed and after six minutes of play Joliat drove at the boards and sent the rebound in on Roach who saved, but could not clear before Billy Boucher flipped the puck into the net.

Joliat immediatey started another rush, which while it did not bring him a goal, landed him into a fistic battle with Jack Adams, the culmination of a few words the pair had as they jostled one another towards the boards behind the net. There was a host of peacemakers on top before the fight had gone far, but it was not stopped before Joliat took Adams' initial blow flush on the lip, resulting in a bothersome cut. The pair took a five-minute rest each.

SENATORS MET FIRST DEFEAT

Hamilton Tigers Nosed Out Victory in Ottawa In Twelve Minutes' Overtime.

OTTAWA, Ont., December 31. — After playing twelve minutes overtime, Hamilton Tigers chalked up their first N.H.L. victory of the season here Saturday night when they defeated the Senators by 3 to 2. A tied score at 2-all at the end of full time necessitated an extra session. Neither team tallied in the first ten minutes but shortly after the change over Shorty Green nailed the counter that marked Ottawa's first defeat in the schedule to date.

Burch carried the disc in, and when the hot drive was blocked he and Red Green closed in on the Ottawa net. Benedict batted the disc out in front to clear it, but Shorty Green tore in, and nailing the loose rubber slid right in to make it sure. The Bengals went into frenzy of delight when the red light flashed a victory for them.

The hockey was good all through. Both teams carried plenty of punch in their attacks and while Ottawa had the most shots, the Tiger drives were right on the net. Vernon Forbes gets full credit for the Hamilton win. The little net guardian blocked them in every way imaginable, and but for his brilliant and sensational display the Tigers would surely have been beaten by three or four goals. Forbes brought the house down repeatedly, and was roundly applauded for his spectacular work.

Referee Lou Marsh had an easy time, only three or four penalties being imposed. The checking was hard but clean.

THEY'RE MIGHTY GLAD MR. 1923 IS GONE

Speaking of the champions of 1923, how about some of the ex-boys and girls? You don't suppose John McGraw, who lost his "master- mind" title in the world series, is sorry to see 1923 go, do you? Welker Cochran, who was bumped off by Willie Hoppe in the billiard play off, certainly isn't. Nor is Molla Mallory, who was dethroned by Helen Wills, the youthful tennis star from the coast.

Johnny Kilbane, who held the featherweight title longer than any other champion, fell by the wayside during the year. Jesse Sweetser, the golf champion, also found 1923 a hoodoo year, as did Bill Roper of Princeton and Bob Fisher of Harvard, two "Big Three" coaches who experienced miserable years on the gridirons. The race between Papyrus and Zev for three-year-old honors was a rough voyage for the English horse from every angle. Yes, there was joy in 1923, but misery for many others.

HAMILTON WON OVER AURA LEE

Two Overtime Periods Needed to Break 3-Goal Tie—Many Stellar Plays

TORONTO, Dec. 31.—(Canadian Press.)—When Johnny Brackenborough flashed along the left wing and drove the puck past Goalkeeper Mitchell into the Aura Lee net in the first minute of the second ten minute overtime period, he broke the 3 to 3 tie which had existed since the beginning of the third period, and won for Hamilton the first Ontario Hockey Association senior game of the season at the Arena on Saturday evening. It was only one of the countless stellar plays engineered by the busy Hamilton centre player during the 80 minutes the two teams played, but it was one of his best.

Hamilton had lost Jimmy Herberts and were without the services of Herb C. Mitchell, who was unable to play owing to tonsilitis, but it nevertheless had a strong team on the ice, their only weakness being lack of experienced substitutes. With confidence born of their recent victory over the Olympic team, they started the game with a burst of speed which made it apparent that they were determined to secure a large early lead. It was a wildly exciting game all the way, with a hockey hungry crowd cheering every play, not only of the home team, but of the visitors.

Hamilton started the game as favorites for the O.H.A. senior championship, and they finished it the same way, but Aura Lee showed just how close the race is likely to be.

Marquis Curzon Named For Possible Dukedom.

LONDON, Dec. 31. —(Canadian Press.)—There is belief in well-informed circles here that Marquis Curzon will be rewarded with a Dukedom in the New Year's honor list. Suggestions have been made to King George that might permit the foreign secretary to assume the title of Duke of Oxford.

"Siki's past performances are such that Michigan can get along without any matches in which he is a principal," the Commissioner said.

ESKIMOS DEFEAT REGINA

EDMONTON, Dec. 30. In a fast game that kept the capacity house in an uproar from beginning to end, the Eskimos defeated the Regina Capitals here Saturday by the score of 3 to 1.

Both teams fought strenuously for the points but the Eskimos had a decided edge in territorial play, speed and punch in the attack. McCusker in the nets for the Capitals put up a wonderful performance.

IRISH FREE STATE DEMANDS ECONOMY

Will Decrease Army By More Than Half—Taxation Has Reached Limit.

DUBLIN, Dec. 31 (Associated Press).—The Free State government is confronted with serious financial problems, and the finance minister has announced that the balancing of the budget can be accomplished only by practicing strict economy, as taxation has reached the limit. The Dail has endorsed the economies on salaries of school teachers and old age pensions on the assurance that cuts are to be enforced in other departments.

Criticism has been directed at the expenditure caused by the change of government and the consequence that the Free State now is obliged to pay pensions to displaced British officials as well as the salaries of those appointed to succeed them.

It is hoped to effect a large saving in the expense of the army by reducing the present cost of more than $50,000,000 to about $20,000,000. It has been urged that Ireland does not need any army larger than that of Canada, which costs $7,500,000. The British government has allocated $7,500,000 to provide houses for the ex-soldiers. The fund is to be administered by a board of five members, three to be named by the British government and one each by the northern and southern governments of Ireland.

GETTING INTO A RUT

Don't get wedged in a rut. Wrest yourself away from your daily surroundings occasionally. Get away from your business once in a while. Visit other merchants. Study their stores, talk to them and get their ideas of business. They may be able to help you, and you may be of some assistance to them.

No man ever made a big success in business by keeping his nose too close to the grindstone. There is a limit to what we can teach ourselves. The men that do big things and enjoy unusual success are the ones who mix in with others and learn from them.

The man who does the same old things in the same old way—day in and day out never changing it—soon becomes stale, and, what's more, his business shows it.

He is so busy in his own store that he never gets out and learns what other merchants are doing, the result being that he falls behind in the march of progress.

It's all right to attend strictly to business, but remember that this can be carried to an extreme.

Don't get into a rut. If you do you may find yourself so firmly wedged in that you can't get out.

"There is only one thing that mars our happiness.

"Some of the good people we work for, who count on receiving a share of 1924's prosperity, don't seem to be making any definite plans as to their share in bringing it about!

"How prosperous some of them will be in 1924 will of course depend on how much they let Long Distance help them—though they don't realize it—yet.

"By giving Long Distance a fair trial during the past year, many business concerns tell us they cut down expenses sharply and increased sales.

"So the best New Year's resolution business men could make would be to personally give Long Distance a thorough test in 1924."

OLYMPICS DEFEATED BY SAULT ST. MARIE

Walsh and Smith Were Leaders in Chasing the Puck — Phillips Scored For Soo.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Dec. 31.—(Canadian Press).—In a game that developed into a battle between Walsh and "Hooley" Smith, Soo defeated Olympics 2 to 1. The goal for the visitors was scored by Smith from centre in the first period after two minutes of play. He lifted the rubber high, and it passed through Walsh's legs. Phillips took both goals for the Soo in the second period, notching the first one in two minutes, after Donnelly had taken the rubber the length of the rink. He followed with another in nine minutes of a long shot that struck Cameron's stick and landed in the corner of the net.

Smith took two minutes in the second period for tripping. Donnelly and Brown were benched in the third for jolting Smith, when the latter came down for what seemed a goal. The first period opened in the Olympic end, the visitors apparently trying the locals out, and feeling their way on the short ice. Rushes by Brown and Phillips featured the play, and Ramsay nearly fooled Walsh with two from close range.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

THE PICTURE DOPE IN A NUTSHELL.

"Fighting Blood" is a series of twelve separate and distinct stories, using the same characters throughout so that the interest is maintained.

"Fighting Blood" was written by H. C. Witwer, America's foremost humorous writer. They appeared in Collier's Magazine, reaching its millions of readers.

They were directed by Mal St. Clair, responsible for the successful F. B. O. Carter DeHaven comedy series.

They feature George O'Hara and Clara Horton. O'Hara plays the role of "Gale Galen," a typical clean-cut American boy. Miss Horton plays "Judy Wilcox," his sweetheart.

The remainder of the cast is all-star. It includes William Courtright, Arthur Rankin, M. C. Ryan, Kit Guard, Albert Cooke and Mabel Van Buren.

The adaption was made by Beatrice Van.

The photography is the work of Lee Garmes.

Each "round" has a corking fight episode.

"Fighting Blood" is a story of youth for all those who still have a spark of youth or a memory of youth.

"SOUTH SEA LOVE" IS PICTURE OF SEA.

Combining the virtues of the "sea picture," the "South Sea Island picture" and the "society picture," "South Sea Love," Shirley Mason's most recent William Fox attraction opened at the Regent Theatre today for an exhibition to last until Thursday.

The story is unencumbered by any superfluous cargo, being absorbingly to the point. Shirley Mason is starred in a role that certainly overshadows any that hitherto have been given her. Her support plays contribute much to the production's enjoyableness. David Solomon does everything possible in directing the possibilities of the film.

Opening with Dolores, the part interpreted so entrancingly by Shirley Mason, aboard her captain father's ancient schooner, the photography pours forth an exuberant beauty and charm, the localities of the story, particularly, the Southern seas and isles, offering such opportunities in abundance.

Miss Mason herself is seemingly bewitched by her part for she is happy, very evidently, in its enactment. She dances and emotes with a facility never before attributed to her. Watching her elfin self spirit through six reels is captivating enough, yet no lack of attention to the other members of the cast is discernible.

They enact their parts with an adherence to actuality that is at once new and captivating. At no juncture of their performances is one jarred by poor or ineffective acting into the realization that this profoundly moving story is "only a picture" and not a fragment of life. One is borne along by their art through a story that grips from first to last.

AT THE ROYAL.

FAMOUS DICKENS STORY NOW TOLD IN PICTURES.

"David Copperfield" to Make Its Initial Appearance Upon Screen at the Royal.

What promises to be an unquestionably charming picture treat will be the presentation here for the first time of the big production, "David Copperfield," which was adapted from the celebrated and world-loved novel of that title by Charles Dickens. This exceptional feature comes to the Royal, beginning to-day.

In the making of "David Copperfield" as a picture, the adherence to the original Dickens story of love, laughter and tears is as close as it can possibly be. None of the wondrous charm of the characters that were made famous through the narration of "David Copperfield" has been lost and the romance has been illustrated in an exceptional manner.

The picture is a genuine treat in every respect. The playing is splendid. The photography is unexcelled. The direction is superb. The romance runs through a channel of interesting and enthralling scenes, with young Copperfield proving a real hero.

The story of David Copperfield is too well-known to bear repetition in these columns, but the film is well worth seeing and tells the romance of the hero in a highly pleasing and entertaining manner.

"David Copperfield" is a substantially-correct production, carrying weight from the start and gaining in momentum as the romance is unfolded.

In the picturization of the Charles Dickens' story, "David Copperfield," it was necessary to depict the boyhood days of Copperfield and the youngster selected from thousands considered for the role, was the clever "Buddy" Martin, and he does himself proud in his boyish characterization.

At no time is there any inclination on the part of the boy to overact and in his big scenes with the other players, he rises supremely to the role and makes of the character of the boy Copperfield something more than an ordinary assignment.

Everybody seeing "David Copperfield" will leave the theatre rooting for "Buddy." He is a fine-looking chap, handles himself with distinction and modestly carries the honors that have already come from his splendid work in the visualization of the famous Dickens novel.

AT THE GRAND.

THE ORIGINALS IN "RAPID FIRE"

The appearance here next Friday and Saturday at the Grand Opera House of the world famous Originals, Canada's brilliant company of Soldier funmakers, will be greeted by Peterborough theatregoers as one of the outstanding events of the present season. The boys come here with a brand new and highly spectacular revue called "Rapid Fire" after playing to crowded houses in all the large cities.

All the old favorites including the fifteen former members of the Original Dumbells as well as Bob Anderson, a new member last season and Gene Pearson, a brilliant new Lady Impersonator, will appear here during the forthcoming engagement. Mr. Pearson possesses a marvellous natural Soprano voice as surprising and delightful as her—no, unbelievable as it may be, it is, his appearance, he has created a sensation already in every city he has appeared with the Originals, and local theatregoers are eagerly awaiting his appearance in Peterborough.

Canada's best known comedian, "Red' Newman, has a masterpiece in "The Stocker," representing a scene in the hold of a battleship; this number is particularly fine. Probably the best hits of all Red's songs, however, are two Coster numbers, one Albert Chevalier's famous "Knocked 'em in the Old Kent Road' Arthur (Jock) Holland, the 'Girl' with the naughty eyes has some marvellous costumes which he brought from London and Paris this summer. Of particular note is the Russian Court scene in which he sings "When Catherine Ruled," assisted by ten of the chorus as Courtiers. Here is where the audience gets its first glimpse of the famous jewelled Curtain which was imported from Paris at tremendous expense for the new production: Alan Murray who directs the dances and is responsible for many of the scenic and lighting arrangements is seen at his very best; while Charlie McLean as a type of character comedian entirely different from the others first in a skit with Red Newman called "Dirty Work" and later with Jimmie Goode in an old fashioned Cake walk, has some remarkably fine character work. Tom Young, Bill Tennant, Bertram Langley and Jerry Brayford present a magnificent East Indian number wherein they represent a magnificent East Indjan number wherein they represent four Hindu Rajahs in the Indian Love Lyrics—Temple Bells, Kashmiri Song, and Less than the Dust; Gene Pearson appears first in Carmina, and later in an Old Song Book number sung by Tom Young, appears from the large album and sings "The Last Rose of Summer." Fred Fenwick and Jimmie Goode have a refreshing skit— a hotel scene —as genuinely funny as anything this clever team has offered us: Ted Charter in "Sermonizing" and Bob Anderson, are two comedians of excellent entertaining qualities and their stuff goes over with a bang.

The production is under the personal direction of Leonard Young, who for the past year and a half has been away from the Company directing Montreal's Community Players and the touch of his hand can be seen in every number of the present revue. Several of the Lyrics have been written by Bertram Langley and some by Charlie McLean Alan Murray and Jack McLaren. The musical numbers were specially arranged by Mr. Young and Jack Ayre, the latter the company's musical Director who holds the record of never having missed his place at the piano since the first performance of the Originals behind the lines in 1916.

AT THE CAPITOL.

ST. ELMO TWIRLED THE PISTOL LOADED WITH HIS DESTINY.

He twirled the pistol, loaded with destiny. No compassion was expressed on his grim face. The other man won the throw. He seized the pistol and fited at the unprotected chest of the man, confronting him with unblinking eyes. The trigger clicked harmlessly. The coward, in a panic, realized the other man would get a chance to fire, and without warning, he fired again. The trigger again clicked harmlessly. Without a sound, the man leaped on his assailant. They grappled, both trying to gain control of the pistol.

On the hillside, revelling in the pastoral beauty of the countryside, stood a demure figure of a girl. Suddenly she heard the sound of men's bodies crashing to the ground and the sickening echo of blows striking home. Her head turned, and, with a stifled gasp, she stood frozen, watching the struggle to the death. Suddenly—a shot. Only one. A man rose. The other lay still, arms stretched on the ground, a curiously inert hulk. She couldn't see their faces, but the man on his feet turned and hurtled through the underbrush.

TOM YOUNG, the popular juvenile of the "Originals" (Old Dumbells) singing "Mother of Mine," and other song hits at the Grand Opera House, Friday and Saturday, January 4th and 5th.

1923 AND 1924.

Silently, swiftly, on outspread pinions light,
Time ever is winging away in free flight,
Persistently pressing his onward advance,
Ne'er casting behind him so much as a glance;
Unheeding, unhindered, by protests or tears,
Still on flows the tide of days, months and years,
Vain, vain, every effort, by flattery or force,
To stop e'en an instant, that tide's running course.

With his good gifts and graces, the old year is fled,
Naught remains for us now but to bury the dead,
Its mistakes, and its failures, days misspent, misused,
Opportunities wasted, neglected, abused
And well may Regret, on that cold sable bier,
For those precious lost jewels drop a warm tear;
For one hour of last year, no, not even the price,
Would (to win the return) of a kingdom suffice.

Adieu, thou decrepit, departing old year,
One younger and fairer, more enchanting, draws near,
Full freighted, with bounteous blessings anew,
Fresh chances affording to be, and to do,
To redeem our lost moments, and unimproved days,
For greater achievements and amending our ways,
That in righteousness further advanced we may be
When this year has passed into Eternity.

While Time's mighty current, with unceasing roll
Is bearing us on to the appointed goal,
Not ours at the oar to sit idly and sigh,
For the green flowing fields which behind us now lie.
In the beauteous past not lingering delay,
Straight onward before us is stretching the way.
The joys of the past to oblivion are gone,
But hope's star in the future still beckons us on.

—Mrs. A. F. Calder.

A BIG ENTRY LIST FOR POULTRY SHOW

Equipped With Steel Coops — Local Prize-Winning Birds.

Don't let anything stop you from seeing the Poultry Show on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th January, in the Armouries. It is the biggest poultry show between Toronto and Ottawa, and is entirely equipped with steel coops. Up to the present date there is the largest entry in the history of the show. A large number of new exhibitors are coming from all parts of Ontario. Among some of the features to be seen at the poultry show next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday are the local-owned birds hich won prizes at the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto recently, also the Provincial Experimental Farm display, which consists of culling the eggs, producing hens from the different flocks, also grading of eggs under the new regulations which should prove of great interest to farmers and others having eggs for sale.

In conversation with the president and other members of the Association, it was learned that they have not left anything undone to make it the largest and best show ever held in this district. Judging from the interest taken in the show by the Quaker Oats Co., Maple Leaf Milling Company, Peterborough Cereal Company, also outside milling companies, who are putting up booths at the show, everything promises a record three-days' event.

Dominion Experimental Farm of Ottawa will have their exhibits of housing, trap nests, feed hoppers, also the pen of birds that won the Dominion egg-laying contest for 1923. Come along and see them.

FLAMING AIRSHIP HURLED INTO SEA

(By Webb Miller, United Press).

PARIS, Dec. 31.—The elements which destroyed the dirigible Dixmude conspired to-day to obscure her fate. Unprecedente storms swept Southern France and roared over the Mediterranean cutting land communication as well as interupting wireless and preventing news of the search for the airship and her gallant crew reaching the capital.

Official inquiry was begun into the causes that led to the Dixmude's destruction in the storm on the night of December 21st when it now appears the giant airliner was struck by a lightning bolt and hurled flaming into the white capped sea, where all her officers and men perished.

MASSEY ARRAIGNED BY BRITISH PAPER

LONDON, Dec. 31. — (Canadian Press).—Some of the sentiments expressed by Premier W. F. Massey of New Zealand, in a speech delivered since his arrival in Canada after having attended the Imperial Conference in London, are characterized by the Manchester Guardian as a dangerous rhetoric. In this connection the Guardian says: "Our Dominions are no longer children, but some of their politicians certainly give England occasion for showing the patience with which affectionate parents receive petulant or querulous remarks of much petted sons or daughters. When he goes straight from England's very cordial hospitality to tell another Dominion that we do not know how to manage our affairs, he shows how extraordinarily far it is for the spoilt child line of comment to go."

We had this little treasure once,
She was our joy and pride,
We loved her, oh, perhaps too much,
For soon she slept and died.
All was dark within our home,
Lonely do our hearts remain,
For our darling Daisy—
Whom we had loved so dearly,
Has forever passed away.

VOL. LIV., No. 1 — PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 2, 1924 — PRICE THREE CENTS

TURNER ELECTED MAYOR BY MAJORITY OF 837

HOLLOWAY AND TAYLOR TOGETHER POLLED 1623 AGAINST TURNER'S 2460

Victor in Mayoralty Fight Carried 36 of the 38 Polls and Led From the First Return to the Final Total —McIntyre Heads Aldermanic List.

DR. NEAL REPEATS.

MAYOR
John J. Turner.

ALDERMEN
Malcolm McIntyre.
E. Melville Turner.
Nagle E. Phelan.
Walter Stocker.
Robert Noble Jones.

BOARD OF EDUCATION
Dr. Frank C. Neal.
Mrs. Kate Morris.
Edward B. Fowler.
Dr. Herbert M. Yelland.
Dr. John J. Craig.

John J. Turner in his "bigger Peterborough" steam roller swept through the city yesterday and finished with a total vote of 2,460, and a clear majority of 837 over the field, as indicated by the final figures. Dr. Holloway ran second and W. H. Taylor third.

In the aldermanic contest, James Gates, Sr., was snowed under by a decisive majority, receiving only 693 votes. This was 2,200 under his next lowest opponent. Alderman Malcolm McIntyre headed the poll, but was only 49 ahead of Alderman E. Melville Turner, who led the field two years ago. Alderman Stocker, in second place in 1922, dropped to fourth place yesterday, with Alderman Phelan third. Robert Jones, defeated by a small majority in 1922, was returned yesterday with the lowest winning vote.

The Board of Education provided the only close contest, when Dr. John J. Craig and Ernest F. Reid, both newcomers to the municipal altar, seesawed for fifth place, Dr. Craig winning by a majority of 54. Dr. F. C. Neal headed the polls, as he did two years ago, but Mrs. Morris pushed into second place. Dr. Yelland and Dr. Craig were fourth and fifth respectively.

Never In Doubt.

From the time when Felix Brownscombe, with his usual good speed, reported from the first poll, number 14, at Coleman Bros., 445 George street, giving Turner 79, Holloway 29 and Taylor 10, the issue was never in doubt. The second poll heard from, number 17 at the Canadian Packing Co., Park street, gave Turner 75, Holloway 31 and Taylor 23. The third return to come in, from Detcher's store on Water street gave Turner 30, Holloway 33 and Taylor 10, a majority for Turner in the first three polls of 150 over ex-Mayor Taylor and 100 over ex-Alderman Holloway.

The overwhelming defeat of ex-Mayor Taylor was indicated in a comparison of his total vote with that of James Gates, defeated Aldermanic candidate, who polled 142 more votes than did the ex-Mayor.

Taylor's largest score was in subdivision 36, at Miss Swanston's, 46 Hunter street east, where he had 30 votes, and his lowest at sub division 32 — J. C. Harrison's, 733 George street, which let him down badly with 3 votes. Ex-Alderman Holloway polled his high vote at F. J. Lynch's, 505 Park street, where he received 51 votes, and his lowest at Taylor's store, 299 George street, which gave him 8 votes. J. J. Turner scored 119 at Penrose's store, 546 Sherbrooke street, and his lowest was at T. Eakin's store, Prince street, where he was given 30.

Mr. Taylor was the only mayoralty candidate who made the city buildings his headquarters while the returns were coming in; J. J. Turner received the reports at his office and Dr. Holloway did not appear throughout the evening.

Aldermen Not Excited.

There was no excitement among the contestants for the Aldermanic board, the first half dozen returns showing that Gates would occupy cellar position. When 626 voters in the first six polls heard from gave Gates only 114 votes, no doubt apparently remained that the four old Aldermen and R. N. Jones would sit in Council this year.

One of the surprises in the Aldermanic contest was the relegating of Alderman Stocker to fourth position, after his polling the second highest vote two years ago. His place was taken by Alderman

"CHILDISH" SAYS NEW ZEALANDER

Premier Massey Says the 'Manchester Guardian's' Criticism Not Worth Consideration.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 2.—(Canadian Press).—"Most childish and not worth consideration," was the comment of Premier W. F. Massey, of New Zealand, when shown a London despatch containing criticism by the Manchester Guardian of his speeches delivered in Canada. The Guardian characterized the addresses "as dangerous rhetoric."

"I have no wish to interfere in the domestic politics of Britain," declared Premier Massey. He said he had been misquoted before sailing from England and that he wished to emphasize most strongly that resolutions passed at the Imperial Conferences were not binding on the New Zealand Government unless ratified by that Government.

The New Zealand Premier was here for an hour en route home via Vancouver. Mr. Massey said New Zealand was anxious to foster interdominion trade, and that he looked for a great increase in trade with Canada.

Ten Lives Taken By Alpine Snows

BERNE, Switzerland, Jan. 2. —(Canadian Press).—The snowfall this holiday season in the Swiss Alps is surpassing anything within the memory of the present generation. The number of avalanches has exceeded all records, and yesterday the snow was still falling.

Many of the higher valleys are cut off from all communication, some of the mountain railroads and many of the highways being completely blocked. Fully 100 Alpine huts have been crushed. Ten lives have been lost thus far.

PARIS ANXIOUS AS SEINE RISES

Fears Repetition of Disaster in 1910 — People Along River Front Prepare to Move.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—(Canadian Press).—The weather prophets and the experts who gauge the ebb and flow of the Seine, were predicting yesterday that the river would reach the highest level of the present flood today, but rain set in again last evening and the Seine continued to rise somewhat more rapidly than had been calculated, while some of its affluents were becoming appreciably more swollen. The Seine is now seven feet below the high level of 1910, when the subways were flooded and boats were required for traffic around the Foreign Office, the St. Lazare Station and other conspicuous points. At the present rate of he rise, which is about two feet in twenty-four hours, a record height would be reached by Friday.

The administrative buildings are being overwhelmed with appeals from the river-side population, especially in the suburbs, here a repetition of the disaster of fourteen years ago is feared, despite the reassuring predictions of the weather men. The truck gardens both east and west of Paris are submerged and cellars are filling all along the river front. Troops have been called out to arrange for moving the inhabitants of the threatened quarters on the lower Seine.

Portions of Touraine and Burgundy are also under water in the valleys of the Loire and Saone.

Invention Protects Airplane Magnetos.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—Great Britain possesses a contrivance similar to the method the Germans were reported last Fall to have discovered for putting the magnetos of airplane motors out of action by radio, according to the Daily Mail today. Experiments with this device, says the newspaper, led to the discoverey that by providing for the insulation of magnetos the effect of the contrivance could be counteracted. When the British planes are fitted with insulation, the Daily Mail adds, they will be able to fly with their engines proof against such radio impulses as the Germans have devised.

SLAIN YANK'S PARENTS TO LIVE NEAR HIS GRAVE

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Lieut. Edward McClure Peters, Jr., 27 years old, only son of Capt. Edward McClure Peters, formerly of the United States Naval Reserves, was shot and killed in action near Toul, France, in 1918. His body was buried in a little cemetery near that city.

Today it developed that the lieutenant's mother has been living near her son's grave ever since the Armistice, decorating it with flowers.

Capt. Peters, sailing for France to join his wife, said: "We expect to live the remainder of our lives near the grave."

WAS PRESIDENT OF OIL COMPANY WHILE IN ARMY

War Veterans Who Were Victims of Selling Campaign Demand Investigation of Oil Company Failure.

USED FATHER'S NAME

NEW YORK, January 2. — That the Acme Production Corporation, the wildcat oil enterprise of which Leonard Wood, Jr., son of the Governor-General of the Philippines, was president, sold stock, largely to ex-soldiers, on the representation that Governor-General Wood's name stood back of the scheme, is now indisputable.

The literature of the company not merely bears this out, but proves, as shown by a letter written to a soldier by Leonard Wood, Jr., himself, that soldiers were among the stockholders of the company.

These soldiers, with all others who bought the original stock, and later submitted to an assessment for the ostensible purpose of completing the driving of oil wells which Leonard Wood, Jr., assured them, already had been begun, lost every dollar they put into the enterprise.

Under Investigation.

It was reported that the Attorney-General of Illinois has begun an investigation of the Acme Production Company on the complaint of the veterans who lost heavily.

The company was capitalised for $2,500,000, and Leonard Wood, Jr., in one of his letters states that approximately $1,000,000 stock was issued. This was in October of last year.

The prospectus of the Acme Corporation was very audacious in its promises. Governor-General Wood's name is mentioned in this way:

"Leonard Wood, Jr., vice-president, a captain on the staff of the Eighty-first Division, rendered conspicuous service in France during the war, and according to those who know him well, he is a chip of the old block, Major-General Leonard Wood."

Named as President.

That, evidently, was before Wood became president. The letters from the files of the Bishop Service all bar his name as president. One of these is addressed to Second-Lieutenant Stanley Klos, U.S.M.C., Quantico, Virginia, and greets him affectionately as "My Dear Mr. Klos.' The letter explains the reason why the name of the Craven Oil and Refining Company was changed to Acme Production Company. It appears that under the laws of Texas, where the company was incorporated, a so-called "common law trust" made the stockholders liable for the debts of the corporation. But—

"These changes have been effected, but not without bringing about a situation that it appears has not been brought home to you through the communications already sent."

Required More Money.

The situation the circular went on to say, required more money. Mr. Wood naturally looked to the stockholders for the cash. It is well known in Wall Street that stockholders generally stand for an assessment with little or no complaint even if the stock has paid no dividend, and has given promise of none. An assessment gives them hope. It seems to indicate activity on the part of the company. And so it was with Wood's Acme. Evidently they did:

Complaints of the Stock Losers.

Senator Caraway yesterday characterised the operations of Leonard Wood, Jr., who resigned from the Army and went immediately into the sale of oil stocks as one of the most reprehensible stock selling campaigns that had come under his notice. "We reached this conclusion after reading several letters which had come to him since he made public earlier correspondence to the effect that Leonard Wood, Jr., had collected subscriptions from private soldiers, at a time when it was apparent that the oil company could not successfully operate.

Laborers Killed In Train Accident

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Jan. 2. —(Canadian Press).—Five negro laborers were killed and two white men and eight negroes were injured, some of them seriously, in a collision last night between a shifting engine and a construction train on the Seaboard Air Line Railroad on the outskirts of the city. One of the injured negroes was expected to die.

The exact cause of the accident has not been determined, but it was said the shifting engine backed off a siding and sideswiped the construction train as the latter was passing the switch.

BLOWN TO BITS BY EXPLOSION

Six Farmers Watching the "Shooting" of An Oil Well Killed By Nitroglycerine.

FRANKLIN, Pa., Jan. 2.—(Canadian Press).—Six persons, one of them a woman, were killed yesterday in a premature explosion of nitroglycerine at the "shooting" of an oil well on the farm of John A. Stone, five miles from here. Two other men near the scene escaped injury. The dead are:

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Stone, Herbert Whitman and John Whitman, brothers; Eugene H. Neil and Robert Kinnear.

Stone, who was a son of the owner of the oil lease, and his wife, went to witness the "shooting" of the well. The others were assisting in the operation. All lived on nearby farms with the exception of Neil, whose home was in Franklin.

When Kinnear, who was to "shoot" the well, opened the can containing 15 quarters of nitroglycerine, he warned those present as spectators to move some distance away.

All six were in the rig of the oil well that was about to be "shot" and all were blown to bits. One man who had just left the well was blown into a hole and miraculously escaped injury.

CLERGYMAN IS NOT A HEALER

Report Issued on Healing Within the Church.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—A committee of prominent clergymen and eminent medical authorities appointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury after the Lambeth Conference in 1920 to study the relationship of religion and healing has made a report in which it is understood to have stated that "no sick person must look to a clergyman to do what is a physician's or surgeon's duty to do." The report is to be published shortly.

The committee, in studying the question of recognizing the ministry of healing within the church, heard evidence on behalf of Christian Science, healing by faith, laying on of hands and blessing of the sick. It is understood the report is of a general character only, one of the committeemen explaining that the subject had been found too vast, many-sided and difficult for any conclusions' except vague ones.

The Bishop of Oxford acted as chairman of the committee and the other members included the Bishops of Southwark, St. Alban's and Liverpool, and physicians of such prominence as Sir Thomas Clifford Allbutt, Sir Robert Armstrong-Jones, Dr. William Brown, Dr. J. A. Hatfield, and Dr. Jane Walker.

The temperature was down to 2 below zero last night for the first time this winter. All day yesterday it ranged around 4 and 5 above.—W.P.

MODERN CINDERELLA

LEONA COYLE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 2.—From $20-a-week factory girl, Leona Coyle, almost over night here, has stepped into the ranks of moneyed ease.

But the sudden transition from comparative poverty to bulging bank account and ownership in ten Oklahoma oil lands has not turned her head.

The simple life is good enough, this modern Cinderella says, as with disdainful hand he waves aside a retinue of beseeching auto salesmen and dispensers of Parisian luxuries.

All Leona's heart craves now is a good old-fashioned kitchen wherein she can help with the dishes the aunt who protected her through the lean years gone by.

Leona's singular strike at fortune was bought about through discovery of an interest in Oklahoma land, bought years ago by her father, who died by an assassin's knife when Leona was 5 years old.

Her mother died soon after. This double bereavement sent Leona to an orphanage during her childhood.

Of late she has been living with an aunt here and working in a factory.

News of her sudden wealth, which brought an initial advance of $10,000 Leona looks upon as a reward for her undisturbed confidence in God's watchfulness over all his creatures.

When things were particularly bad, she was wont to say: "Well, they could be worse."

And the remark always provoked a cheery smile on the faces of those who heard it.

In Leona's philosophy, all you have to do to get a thing is work hard and pray.

"God will do the rest, providing you let him," she says.

BOOTLEGGERS BOUGHT BUSINESS PROTECTION

Paid Sheriff and Attorney $625 a Month For Immunity From Prosecution--Officials Sentenced

BANGOR, Maine, Jan. 2.—(Canadian Press)—Sheriff Edmund W. Grant of Aroostook County and Willard S. Lewin, a Houlton attorney, charged with conspiracy to defeat the operation of the United States national prohibition laws, were found guilty by a jury in United States District Court here early yesterday and were sentenced by Judge Peters to serve two years each in the federal prison at Atlanta. Both men filed exceptions and provided bail. The case will go to the Circuit Court of Appeals. The jury was out ten and one half hours.

Grant and Lewin were indicted by a federal grand jury on December 12, following disclosures concerning conditions in Aroostook County by Charles E. Calvin, of Houlton. Guy E. Crosbyo a deputy sheriff, was indicted with Lewin and Grant but when he and Calvin volunteered to testify for the Government, both were granted immunity from prosecution. At the trial Calvin testified that he, in partnership with Richard Vereker of Houlton, had paid Grant and Lewin, $625 a month for an absolute monopoly of the liquor trade in Houlton. In addition they were assessed occasional "extras" he said. During the life of the agreement, he testified, the Sheriff was to notify him in advance when a raid was contemplated. Finally the two felt that the price was becoming burdensome, "more than the traffic would bear," and repudiated it, he asserted.

Calvin said on the stand that he had once served a term in Houton jail, "just to oblige the sheriff," who had told him that people were "kicking" because he, (Calvin), was not in jail. Crosby, a deputy discharged by Grant, testified to having taken $125 a month for several months from the alleged protection fund.

William Tacticos, of Presque Isle, testified that he had been offered protection for $200 a month and that he eventually agreed, making several payments.

Grant and Lewin, in defense, made a general denial of all charges.

King Is Confident Trials Nearing End.

LONDON, Jan. 2.— (Canadian Press Cable).—King George, replying to a New Year's telegram of congratulation from the Lord Mayor of London says: "I am confident that with God's help the British people, true to their great traditions, will face and overcome the difficulties still confronting us at the close of the decade which, though memorable in glorious achievemnt, has been beset by much trial and suffering."

Work For Soldiers Is Prince of Wales' Hope.

LONDON, Jan. 2.— (Canadian Press Cable).—The Prince of Wales as patron of the British Legion, has written a new year message in the Legion's monthly journal wherein he expresses the most earnest hope that before the next new year the Legion may be relieved of its heaviest burden, namely that of struggling to get employment for ex-officers so that those who fought for their King and Country may live in peace and happiness.

TORONTO GAVE HILTZ A GOOD BIG MAJORITY

Tommy Church Gets a Setback So Far as Toronto Mayoralty is Concerned.

HOW BY-LAWS FARED

TORONTO, Jan. 2.— (Canadian Press.)—Citizens of Toronto at the annual civic elections yesterday, expressed themselves in a most decisive manner in regard to their choice of a Chief Magistrate by electing Controller W. W. Hiltz to that position by a plurality of 10,116 over ex-Mayor Church, who was seeking an eighth term. Mr. Hiltz polled 44,089 votes against 38,343 combined total of his two opponents, giving him a majority of 5,746 over all. Citizens were equally emphatic in their choice of four experienced men as Controllers and five others to Aldermanic seats. On the whole the new council looks as though it will be well balanced, despite the fact that fifteen new faces will be seen in that body. The Board of Control was chosen as follows:

Joseph Gibbons, Thos. Foster, R. H. Cameron and A. E. Hacker.

The total vote cast yesterday for the Mayoralty candidates was 82,432, compared with the record total of 80,597 cast last year, an increase of 1,835. This, however, is not as substantial an increase as appears on the surface for the simple reason that this year names of about seventy thousand women were added to the list. The number that availed themselves of the privilege of exercising the franchise for the first time was decidedly disappointing.

Controller Gibbons, who headed the list of Controllers, polled a record vote of 42,629, some 6,500 more than polled by Controller Foster last year.

Other outstanding features of yesterday's contest were the overwhelming defeat of single tax question, strong endorsation given daylight saving and marked disinclination of people to change date for holding annual elections.

STATION CLOSED RESULT OF FLOOD

River Seine is Still Running Rampant--Homes Threatened.

PARIS, January 2—(United Press) — Authorities ordered the Gare D'Orsay Railway closed to-day as angry waters from the flooded river Seine invaded the big Railway Tunnel.

Swirling torrents invaded the railway tracks outside the station, shutting off hundreds of trains which daily pass in and out of the yards. Traffice from the Gare D'Orsay was re-routed in the Austerlitz station. Authorities forecast the maximum height of the flood will not be reached before Saurday. They expected an aditional rise of 30 inches before the week-end. Meantime plans were to close the Invalides Stations, probably To-morrow, causing further dislocation of railway traffic.

At 10 a. m., the brown waters were creeping up on the quays in front of the Foreign office and lacked only a few inches of lapping the door steps of the famous Quai D'Orsay, the cellars of the Foreign office already were flooded.

Tram lines at Alfortville, Viley and Bonneuil were interrupted, hundreds of inhabitants of Beaumont, Auvers Sur Oise, Champagne, Cergy, Isle Odam and Juoy Le Mouties evacuated their homes.

All the affluents of the Seine continued to rise. In Nevers several districts were submerged sewers on the outskirts of Paris were choked.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

9 Chamberlain street,
Peterboro,
Dec. 31, 19230.

Dear Sir,—One behalf of the residents of New Chamberlain street, might I ask the favour of space in your paper to express our thanks and appreciation to Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., for his efforts and interest taking in getting the mail delivery extended to us. The request asking Mr. Gordon to try to obtain this useful service for us was only made a few weeks ago and he has shown his real interest in his contituency once again by pushing this through so soon.

Thanking you for the space.

On behalf of the residents of New Chamberlain street.

L. TOMKINS.

Mr. Editor.—If you would please allow me a little space in your paper re lack of interest in our municipal election, at the polling booth I was at yesterday less than one-third of the vote was polled, it is too bad that more interest is not taken. If those names which were not polled were taken off the list there would be a great noise about it. Well then why do people not come out and give their voice in the matter which is of vital interest to one and all. What can be done to create more interest, if you would allow an humble opinion I would offer, if we were to revert back to the ward system and do away with this two-year term for our Aldermen let every man come before the ratepayers every year I think it might be a remedy. I quite understand why the two-year system was brought in. I do not think there would be any danger of an entirely new council any year; if men prove their worth they will be returned again. O but it might be said the extra expense of a man having to run each and every year I don't think there need be extra expense. All that is necessary if a man proves his worth is to place his name on the list he will be returned. I wish to congratulate the sucessful candidates and also the runners-up, especially Ernest Reid, who made such a splendid run for the Board of Education. (Come again Ernie).

Wishing one and all a happy and prosperous New Year.

J. J. CUNNINGHAM.

The District Nominations Yield Few Contests

SEYMOUR COUNCIL WAS RETURNED UNOPPOSED

Reeve Van Volkenburg and His Colleagues Congratulated Upon Their Efficient Administration of the Municipality Last Year.

DEFICIT WIPED OUT.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 2. — There will be no election in Seymour Township this year as the Reeve, Deputy-Reeve and three Councillors were re-elected by acclamation at the nomination meeting held in the Regent Theatre at noon Monday. All of the nominees qualified before leaving the building except Councillor McKelvie, who was absent, but it is understood that he will follow the example of his colleagues. Councillor McKelvie sent word that he was autoing homeward from Guelph on Sunday but encountered the worst blizzard he had ever experienced and was snowbound in Toronto.

The Nominations.

There were plenty of names presented when Clerk Hay called for nominations, but all withdrew except the present officeholders. Clerk Hay presided at the public meeting following the nominations, and this annual gathering was a veritable love feast. The township's representatives were congratulated upon their efficient public service and upon the firm financial basis upon which they have established the township.

It was suggested by some of the speakers that more attention be paid to the highways and that road gangs be maintained instead of having the work done by farmers who were often too busy to leave home, with the result that work on the roads were delayed until the season was far advanced. Reeve Van Volkenburg gave a detailed account of the work done in the Counties Council during the past year. He maintained that the Province should assume the entire cost of building Provincial highways as these roads were constructed regardless of the wishes of the residents of the municipalities. The following were the nominations:

For Reeve.

George S. Van Volkenburg, by T. J. Horkin and John Saunders.

T. H. Rowe, by John Quinn and Wm. M. Stephens.

W. A. Wynn, by W. M. Stephens and John Quinn.

Alex. Hume, by T. J. Horkin and P. B. Nelson, Deputy-Reeve.

P. B. Nelson, by Andrew Milne and Harry Petherick.

For Deputy-Reeve.

P. B. Nelson, by Charles Macown and Charles Milne.

W. A. Wynn, by W. A. Fraser and Robert Innis.

Russell Peake, by J. Lawson and Thomas Lawson.

For Councillors.

Andrew Milne, by R. G. Curle and Robert Innis.

Richard McKelvie, by T. J. Horkin and John J. Thompson.

Russell Peake, by Charles MacCowan and John Saunders.

R. McKelvie, by P. B. Nelson and George S. Van Volkenburg.

Robert Lynn, by W. A. Wynn and W. J. Hooper.

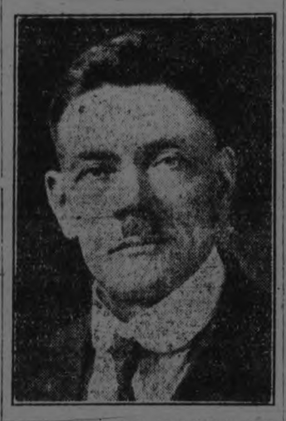
Robert Innis, by W. A. Wynn and W. J. Ross.

Those elected by acclamation are: George S. Van Volkenburg, Reeve; P. B. Nelson, Deputy-Reeve; R. McKelvie, Russell Peake and A. Milne, Councillors.

Township Out of Debt.

When the Council took hold at the beginning of the year, the members were confronted with an overdraft of $8,022.46. This has been entirely wiped out, and the annual financial statement shows a balance on hand of $49.79. To pay the debt the township rate was increased from 10 to 11.5 mills, but the taxes were little, if any, higher, as the county rate was lower. The total revenue for the year was $44,030.82.

The readjustment of the equalization of the towns and villages at the June session of the Counties Council was approved by the different speakers, but all of them maintained that the increase, 16 per cent., was not enough.



GEORGE S. VAN VOLKENBURG,
Who has been elected Reeve of Seymour Township (by acclamation) for the seventh consecutive year. Mr. Van Volkenburg has served nine years in the council altogether, two years as councillor, one year as deputy reeve, and the remainder of the time in the position which he now holds. When the counties council of Northumberland and Durham meets this month he will be a candidate for the wardenship.

NINE BROTHERS ATTEND SCHOOL

Three of Them Had Perfect Attendance Roll at St. Paul's Church, Lasswade.

LASSWADE, Jan. 2.—St. Paul's Church (Anglican) Sunday School held their annual Christmas tree and concert in the school house on Friday evening, and in spite of the storm, a good sized audience assembled. Mr. Spence brought his radio set, which worked fine, and was a much enjoyed novelty, none of the audience ever having "listened in" before. Besides a short programme, lantern slides were shown, and the evening was brought to a close with the lighting of the Christmas tree and distribution of gifts to the scholars, who numbered thirty. Three brothers, Charles, Albert and Cecil Bullied, had the creditable distinction of not having missed a single session, while two other of their brothers, Malcolm and Percy, missed only one attendance. There are nine brothers of the Bullied family attending this Sunday School, which one would almost be safe in claiming as a record. Mr. Alf. Davis is the valued superintendent, a position he has filled about twenty-seven years. The programme consisted of month organ selections, by Mr. J. Reynolds and Bernard Sheen; two choruses by the choir; recitations, by Percy and Albert Bullied and Bernard Sheen. Rev. C. Spence, who acted as chairman, also sang two songs. A very pleasant evening closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

WEDDING BELLS

WALTON—JOHNSON.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 2.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Johnson, Lakefield, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on New Year's Day at 12.30 p.m. when their daughter, Isabella Ralston, became the bride of Mr. George Hendren Walton of Detroit, Mich., younger son of Mr. and Mrs. James Walton of Lakefield. The ceremony was performed beneath a bower of evergreens by the Rev. P. L. Jull, only immediate members of the two families being present. The bride looked lovely in silver lace draped over grey crepe de chine, with silver hat touched with tangerine, and carrying a bouquet of sunset roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Johnson, mother of the bride, and Mrs. Walton, mother of the groom, wore corsage bouquets of sweet peas and lilies of the valley. The wedding march was played by Mrs. A. H. McKinley of Toronto, sister of the bride.

After the wedding dinner the young couple motored to Peterboro to catch the 3.50 flyer en route to Toront and Grand Rapids, Mich. After their honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Walton will reside at 72 Highland Avenue, Detroit.

HASTINGS, January 1. — Nominations for the elective municipal positions yesterday, were as follows:

For Reeve — Walter M. Fowlds, Dr. J. H. Hess and A. E. Chapman.

Councillors — A. V. German, Fred Dodd, A. E. Spooner, J. F. McCarthy, L. E. Kelly, Ed. Lynch, A. E. Chapman, C. B. Plant, T. A. Coughlan, Harry Dodd and Sam Hatherly.

..... Reeve's Appeal..... ....

Reeve Fowlds was the first speaker. He thanked his mover and seconder for his nomination, and then launched into an account of his stewardship as Reeve of the Municipality for 1923.

Hastings council has spent $22,000, and with the books all balanced showed a deficit of $811.57.

He went into details in regard to equalized assessment which was taken up in the June Session, of the Counties Council as to how the rural and urban municipalities were assessed the same as thriving towns as Port Hope, Cobourg, and Campbellford. Reeve Fowlds was appointed by the Committee to look into this matter, with the result that the assessment of Port Hope, Cobourg, Brighton and Campbellford has been raised.

He also explained the reforesting plan which the Counties Council had started this year by buying 1000 acres of land, near Fenella, for the sum of 5.75 an acre and had begun planting trees.

The county owned the land but the Government had to fence it, this land at the present time had enough standing timber to pay for itself.

A Last Appeal.

Reeve Fowlds in his speech, said also that this was the last time he would appeal to rate-payers of Hastings for their support but he he wanted it this year as he was a candidate for the Warden's chair and had a good chance of winning as Hastings has never had the privilage of having their representative chosen as Warden.

James Fowlds was warden in 1874 from Percy Township.

In closing, he wished all a happy and prosperous New Year.

Councillor A. E. Chapman was the next speaker and he also thanked his mover and seconder.

He went into details of the financial statement saying that a lot of money had been spent on the streets but as he was not in that commitee he could not say whether the money was well spent or not.

He alson spoke of Reeve Fowlds chances of Warden. There were four in the field for the position, an election was like a horse race. That was the way it would figure out for the Warden of 1924.

He also quoted one of Dr. Osler's old sayings that every man over 60 years of age should be chloloformed and as he was nearing that mark he did not think he would seek re-election but that Hastings should elect some younger men to the Council as there was not a town in Ontario the size of this municipality that could show as small a debt.

He also told the ratepayers that the Bodoin Spark Plug visiting Hastings in the summer in regard to a plant if the town would lend them $10,000. They were to furnish a band and when it came to a show down they were unable to do this.

Councillor Coughlan thanked his mover and seconder and wished a happy New Year but he had not much to say as Reeve Fowlds and Councillor Chapman had explained everything thoroughly.

Councillor Dodd in a short and snappy spech thanked his mover and seconder and said he would again be in the field for Councillor for 1924.

Dr. Hess' Speech.

Dr. J. H. Hess who was nominated for Reeve, thanked his mover and seconder for proposing him. The present Reeve had gone into the financial statement, he said, but the overdraft would have been larger if all bills in 1923 had been paid, and not held back.

Hastings had been prosperous this year as they had received rent for the Town Hall and more fines had been paid into the Treasurer.

Dr. Hess said he would also like to see Reeve Fowld's elected Warden and have the honor come to Hastings but he thought it impossible as Reeve McColl of Brighton had dropped out two years ago to let Harry Phillips receive the appointment, and thus for 1924 Reeve McColl was the most likely man. However, if he could be of any assistance in helping Reeve Fowlds to obtain the position of Warden he would only be to guad to help him.

He also told ratepayers of how some stories had been started as to his recount of last year in order to hurt him in his campaign.

He explained that the recount was held in Cobourg and that he had to put $25 up in the club's office here and also had to send $25 to the Clerk of the Court at Cobourg and when the recount was finished his lawyer asked the judge who was to keep the $25 and that the Clerk at Hastings had to return the other $25. Dr. Hess said he did not put a bill into the Council here for the money.

It seemed funny, he remarked, that this year they did not want an election but when in the other years he was in the Council they wanted one. If there was an election for the Council, his name would be on the ballot for Reeve.

Sam Hatherly announced that he was in the field as Councillor.

ANCIENT EGGS GASSED FARMER

And When He Cuffed Boy For Throwing Them, Magistrate Added Injury to Insult.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 2. — Robert Clerigh, a farmer in Seymour Township, in the Police Court here Monday, paid a fine of $15 and costs imposed, by Magistrate Payne, for assault committed on Alfred Simpson, the 15-year-old son of John Simpson, a neighbor.

At a threshing bee last summer the hands came upon a nest of stale eggs, and anyone who ever assisted at such a job need not be told what happened. The eggs were soon flying around in all directions, hurled by the boys in the gang, and at least two of the odorous missiles found their billet on the person of Mr. Clerigh, the liberty naturally exciting his indignation. He blamed young Simpson for the damage to his person; but never got near him until one day last week. Meeting the youth on the road, Clerigh proceeded to wreak delayed vengeance and cuffed the young fellow soundly.

Hence the Police Court case and the fine.

LADIES 'TAFFIED' FARM DEBATERS

The Advocates of Eastern Canada's Opportunities Won Decision Over the Western Supporters.

BAILIEBORO, Jan. 2.—On Friday evening the South Monaghan U.F.Y.P.O. met at their regular fortnightly meeting in the club room at Centreville.

There was a large crowd present despite the rain and sleet that fell heavily about eight o'clock, and nine new members took the club pledge.

After opening the meeting by group singing, the regular business transactions were dealt with.

A programme was then enjoyed by all. The first item was a debate, "Resolved, that Eastern Canada offers greater opportunities to the farmer than does Western Canada." The affirmative was very ably taken by Fred. Barnard and Harold Thorne, while the negative was wonderfully well upheld by Cleveland Byers and MacIntosh Bradshaw. Both sides were thoroughly debated and each debater was allowed fifteen minutes to give his paper.

The judges who gave their decision in favor of the affirmative were Harold Bebee, acting as judge for the affirmative, Roy Rutherford, for the negative, and Clifford Hall, as deciding judge.

After the debate impromptu speeches were given by H. Dawson, Miss McConnachie, H. Campbell, H Bebee and R. Rutherford.

At the next fortnightly meeting, January 11, the Peterborough U.F.Y.P.O. club will be here to challenge the home club on the first home debate in the league.

At the conclusion of the meeting everyone did full justice to taffy supplied by the young ladies.

WELCOMED NEW YEAR IN PRAYER

Watchnight Service By Congregation of Anglican Church, Campbellford — Reception By New Pastor

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 2.—The services at the Anglican church on Sunday were special ones. The splendid sermons by the new rector, Rev. G. W. Clarke, B.A., were an inspiration to all who were present. In the morning the choir gave special music or the season of the year and in the evening some Christmas Carols and extra anthems. After the evening service the members of the choir met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke and spent a very pleasant evening getting acquainted with their new rector and his wife.

On New Year's eve the congregation of the Anglican Church met at half past eleven p.m. for a watch night service. After hymns and prayers, Mr. Clarke gave a short address on the words of St. Paul in Philippians 3-13 14: "But this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Mr. Clarke said many people celebrate birthdays and holidays and he considered it the best way to spend the last hour of the old year and the beginning of a new year, in God's house in praytr.

The first thought is concentration (this one thing I do). Put the emphasis of life on the most important things. Second, Forgetfulness of the past. Wise forgetting is as necessary for success as wise remembering. Forget our blunders and go straight on. Forget life's injuries. Forget our sorrows and ask God to turn our evil into good. Third, Looking forward into the glorius future for God and ourselves.

Then just at twelve o'clock as the church bell rang all knelt in silent prayer, after which the beautiful hymn was sung, while bowed in prayer, "Come, gracious spirit Heavenly Dove."

The Holy Communion was then partaken of and the closing prayers ended the service. The people as they passed out wished one another a Happy New Year.

School Opens Monday.

The public school will not open until Monday, January 7.

Young People's Meeting.

The young people of the Methodist church held their meeting on New Year's eve at 8 o'clock. As the president was absent on account of the late closing in the stores, Rev. W. Elliott opened the meeting with singing and prayer. In the absence of the secretary, Miss Ina Boyd read the minutes of the last meeting and acted as secretary for the night. Miss Myrtle Ford, literary vice-president took charge of the program. Mr. S. J. Abernethy gave the topic subject, "If we neglect." This address was good. Mr. W. Lowe rendered a cornet solo (Christmas Hymn). Mrs. C. W. and Mrs. Cherrie sang a duet, "Another Year." A pleasing ending to the program was a few words from Mr. T. H. Mills, a former resident of Campbellford, now of Port Perry. Mr. Mills used to be an active worker in the church in all its departments, and he, with Mrs. Mills are holidaying at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Malcolm, Sebastapool street.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CHURCH'S CREAM

Demands, Therefore, Best of Teachers' Time and Talents, Says Rev. S. W. Dean at Millbrook Anniversary.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 1.—The Christmas spirit was carried over into the anniversary services of the Methodist Sunday school, held on the last Sunday of the old year, Rev. S. W. Dean of the Department of Christian Stewardship and Finance, Toronto, preaching morning and evening and addressing the school in the afternoon. The choir had considerably augmented its numbers and repeated the special Christmas music of the previous Sunday, including two anthems, "As O'er the Hills," with obligato by Mrs. P. Stinson and Miss E. Elson, and "And there were Shepherds"; the male quartette, "The Angels' Song," by Messrs. Duncan, Coombe, Alcorn and McDowell, was particularly appreciated.

The Rev. Mr. Dean was introduced by the pastor, and expressed his pleasure in being associated with Mr. Tucker for the day's services, claiming him as "an old and esteemed friend in the brotherhood of the Methodist ministry." The sermon in the morning was especially to Sunday school workers, with the text from Luke 1:66, "What manner of child shall this be?" This question may naturally be asked regarding every child born into the world, and in plain language the speaker pointed out the responsibility resting upon the home and parents, for the training that will develop good and repress evil, and next upon the public school teacher. Where the latter is of right character and ideals there is no limit to the influence he or she may exert upon child life, and trustee boards do well to seek to preserve these contracts as long and as harmoniously as possible.

Aristocracy of World.

"An army of thirty million Sunday school scholars belts the globe in ninety to one hundred nations where Christianity is functioning; of these one million belong to the Protestant denominations of Canada, and nearly one-half million are connected with Methodism." "Because there are sixty thousand more members enrolled in the Sunday schools than on the church lists, it is a bigger force than the church force." "Because sin is the same, and Christ is the same, and the religious needs of the individual are the same, it is a vital necessity that Sunday school teachers seek to win each scholar to a personal experience of salvation." The aristocracy of the world, so far as heart qualities are concerned, is in the Sunday school army; the Lord skimmed the church and poured the cream into the Sunday school, therefore not fag ends of time and talents which disgrace God and His cause, but the best of oneself must be put into this work."

Imparting Ideals.

These were some of the pertinent statements made by Mr. Dean in developing his subject. Pointing out that men become like the objects they worship, he emphasized the value of the Bible school in imparting right ideals of God to young minds and thus becoming of supreme importance as a character-forming agency in perpetuating Christian civilization. Great expense and distress result when iniquitous national ideals prevail, so it makes a vast difference whether honesty, and moral purity in speech and conduct are taught or not. A flag in the Sunday school gives opportunity for teaching that it is the symbol of law and order; that the ballot is a sacred trust, and that patriotism is superior to party and that no candidate, offering himself for office, is entitled to support unless righteousness marks his private and public life. It will assist in teaching respect for the constitution, and with the Word of God behind it, will make plain the truth: "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

THE ALDERMANIC CONTEST.

The chief interest in the aldermanic election outside of the remote possibility that James Gates might wrest a seat away from one of the old members of the Council lay in the order in which the candidates would finish.

Ald. Malcom McIntyre won the honours, with Ald. E. M. Turner, who headed the polls two years ago, as a close second, Ald. Phelan third, Ald. Stocker fourth and R. N. Jones the last of the successful candidates.

The rejected aspirant never seriously threatened to displace any of the rest of the field, although he succeeded in securing more votes than the third man in the mayoralty contest.

The five Aldermen chosen have all had experience in the Council and are familiar with the problems that are to be solved.

The Examiner wishes them and their colleagues every success in the work to which they have been assigned by the electors.

41 DEATHS A DAY.

As the conditions are equally as bad in Canada, the figures just published of the loss of life and property caused by fires in the United States should bring Canadians up with a round turn.

The statistics are for 1922, the last full reportable year, and show that there were 15,000 deaths and a property loss of $500,000,000.

Just think what that means.

In the first place, it means that an average of 41 persons were burned to death every twenty-four hours of 1922, while the property loss mounted up at the rate of $16 every second.

Every day an average of five school houses were burned, and an average of four warehouses, one hospital and five churches in the same period of time.

Those are appalling figures—and the most tragic feature of the situation is, as the report points out, that nine out of every ten of these fires could be prevented by the exercise of ordinary care.

The beginning of the New Year would be a fitting time for Peterborough people to take a survey of their own houses, study the fire hazards and eliminate them as far as possible, at the same time resolving to be careful personally in the handling of anything from which fire can be produced.

There is every need for such a policy in view of these startling statistics.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The electors could hardly fail to select five good members for the Board of Education out of the ten citizens who offered themselves as candidates for the five vacancies.

They have chosen three old members of the board, Dr. Neal, Mrs. W. R. Morris and E. B. Fowler, all of whom have rendered good service on behalf of the cause of education, and two new members in the persons of Dr. H. M. Yelland and Dr. J. J. Craig, two popular young professional men who should do good work on the board.

In making that selection some fine material had necessarily to be rejected. Ernest F. Reid, a young candidate before the electorate for the first time, was a close sixth, and two former members of the board, W. A. Richardson and J. T. Braund, were among the fallen.

The verdict in so far as the school building programme is concerned was a triumph for the combined Collegiate Institute and Technical School plan inasmuch as Dr. Neal, Mrs. Morris, Dr. Yelland and Dr. Craig were all announced as favouring that policy, Mr. Fowler being the only successful candidate who was opposed to the combination building.

In spite of the generally accepted theory that the majority of ratepayers are opposed to expenditure at the present time, it is noticeable that Dr. Wood and H. J. McCannan whose platform was that of economy were not elected.

A DISTRICT LOSS.

The whole district has suffered a loss in the death of Mr. Harry Webber of North Monaghan, one of the best known and most popular residents of this section of Ontario, and a leader in agriculture and in other fields as well.

Living on one of the finest farms in the district and yet only a short distance from the city limits, Mr. Webber was a connecting link between the urban and the rural viewpoint and a firm believer in closer relationships between city residents and farmers.

As Vice-President of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition he not only played a big part in putting it upon the plane it has now reached by the faith and energy and enthusiasm he put into his connection with the Exhibition, but he did more than that by acting as liaison officer between the city and rural directors, capable as he was of interpreting the viewpoint of each to the other.

A genial, large-hearted, cheerful personality, with the ability to make friends and "grapple them with hoops of steel," Mr. Webber filled a place in the public regard such as is rarely held by any citizen.

His host of friends in Peterborough and throughout the district feel that the whole community is the poorer in the passing of this many-sided citizen, of whom it may be said:

"His life was gentle, and the elements
So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, This was a man!"

THE MAYORALTY RESULT.

Yesterday's sweeping victory in the mayoralty contest in which Mr. J. J. Turner triumphed by a plurality of over 1,400 over Dr. Holloway and a majority of nearly 900 over the combined votes of Dr. Holloway and ex-ayor Taylor, unmistakably indicates that the electors of Peterborough have faith in Mr J. J. Turner to furnish a business administration of the city's affairs.

There was no uncertain note in the verdict. The Mayor-elect had a plurality in almost every poll, and in the majority of subdivisions had more votes than his two opponents combined.

All sections of the city gave him support, and the huge majority piled up in his favour is an unmistakable mandate to Mr. Turner to initiate new enterprise and vision in the handling of Peterborough's business.

To assist him in that task he will have the services of a seasoned Council inasmuch as the five Aldermen elected yesterday have all served around the board, as has the Mayor-elect, so that no learning of the ropes will be necessary, and Peterborough's 1924 Council is ready to settle down to business at once.

The new Mayor has been given a remarkable testimonial of the confidence of the people in his integrity of purpose and business ability, and he should regard that testimonial as an incentive to maximum endeavour on behalf of Peterborough.

There is reason to believe that Mr. Turner will so regard it, and that he will throw into the administration of the city's business the same energy and ability and driving power that have distinguished his connection with the successful industry of which he is the head.

The need of a business government was the big issue in the campaign, as the Examiner pointed out before the election.

Attempts to make the police controversy the vital factor in the fight failed, for the majority of the electors were weary of this long drawn-out argument, and realized that the final decision would have to come, in any case, from the Legislature.

The police question was ignored therefore by most of the voters, and the decision was made on the basis of which of the three candidates could be counted upon to supply the most virile and effective leadership.

The answer of the electors to that test was a tribute to the successful candidate, who in a three-cornered fight succeeded in securing over sixty per cent. of the total vote, a remarkable showing.

LABOR AND OFFICE.

If a Labor Government comes into office in Great Britain it would be unfortunate should the ministers refuse to accept salaries. They would have to depend absolutely upon a Labor fund and be necessarily the servants of a Labor caucus. No doubt for generations Great Britain had class government and the doors of Parliament were closed to those who had neither wealth nor aristocratic connections. A real step in democracy was taken when an indemnity was provided for members of the House of Commons. To abolish the sessional indemnity or the salaries of ministers would be a step backward, would tend toward the subordination of Parliament to outside influences, and would in the long run reinvest wealth with some of its old privileges. For a Labor Government will not last forever and it is possible to levy an excessive tribute upon the labor unions.

In the old days many of the beneficiaries of privilege were concerned for the masses of the people. If they clung to their privileges they were anxious for the welfare of tenants and dependents. They denied every principle of democracy in government and yet recognized a degree of responsibility to all elements of people. The system could not last, but from generation to generation its evils and pretensions were mitigated and always among the old aristocrats there were those who made war upon the conditions by which their order profited.

Curiously enough many of the most inveterate opponents of social and industrial reform have been among the middle class manufacturers or among illiberal leaders in the professions. Aristocracy must expect hard fortune in the modern world, but perhaps there are other classes which have a greater arrogance and a less robust patriotism. In the long, hard struggle upward British labor has never fought alone, and if it is to govern England and maintain an historic empire, it cannot be the mere organ of class nor can it afford to re-establish a new era of privilege. It must feel its responsibility to all elements of the British people and remember that a policy of destruction will bring only loss, discredit and defeat.

The London Times takes the true attitude towards the Labor Party in the position in which it finds itself in Parliament. It is too weak to govern without the co-operation of either the Liberal or the Conservative Party. It is not to be expected that either of these parties will be content to lose itself in the Labor organization. Sooner or later, and probably sooner, if Mr. Ramsay Macdonald takes office, his Government will be defeated in the House of Commons. If he demands a dissolution, can it be wisely reused? There is no prospect that Parliament would have greater consideration for a Government under Mr. Asquith and his Liberal associates. That in turn would be beaten on division and an appeal to the people would be demanded. Could a dissolution be granted to a weaker minority than that which Mr. Ramsay Macdonald commands?

It is vital that the Throne should not be involved in a conflict with Labor and vital that the "old parties" should not seem to profit by any extreme or doubtful interpretation of constitutional usage. Labor as a body has been loyal to the Throne and obedient to the Constitution. One may be certain that the King will show no distrust of its leaders or consent to be driven into any position which would imply want of sympathy or good-will. Regard for the "under dog" is inbred in the British people and nothing would be of greater advantage to the Labor Party in the immediate situation in Great Britain than a dubious combination of parties or interests to cheat its leaders out of any right or privilege which its leaders may claim in agreement with constitutional and political practice. —Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Don't forget to write "1924."

Some unsuccessful candidates may agree with Goethe that "he who serves the public is a poor animal; he worries himself to death and no one thanks him for it."

It was a turn-over for Turner.

The aldermanic result was a case of either "Gates ajar for Jimmy" or "A jar for Jimmy Gates," as you prefer.

Evidently Peterborough electors do not believe in long terms for Mayors.

Two years ago Taylor defeated Turner by 33 votes; yesterday the verdict was reversed and Turner had a majority of 1,915.

Tommy Church is the latest example of the old saying, "They can't come back."

COBOURG AND DISTRICT

COBOURG, Dec. 31 (Special).—The Fifth Annual Poultry Show, which closed here last night, was the best yet held by the Northumberland and Durham Poulty and Pet Stock Association. There were over one thousand entries and nearly every class was filled with beautiful birds. There were a number of Cobourg exhibitors who showed very fine birds especially in the Wyandotte and Red Cap classes, while a new breed shown by Mr. John Cauley, of Cobourg, the Jersey Black Giants, attracted considerable attention. The display of pheasants, wild fowl and pet stock was exceptionally good.

Some of the well-known out-of-town exhibitors were: T. E. Burt, Port Hope; Wm. D. Watson, Port Whitby; H. L. Foster, Bowmanville; Edward McKinney and Adanac Poultry Farm, Grafton; Grace & Sons, Port Hope; Frank Bottrell, Sidney Little, Bowmanville; A. L. Tubb, Oshawa; Harry Meeking, Port Hope; James Noke, Bowmanville; Lorne Hutchison, Warkworth; Dr. Algea, Colborne; Chris. Sherry, Port Hope; W. J. Jamieson, Colborne; Heard Bros., Whitby; F. W. L. Tamblyn, Orono; W. J. Abernethy, Campbellford; James Campbell, Port Granby; F. N. Bouskill, Port Hope; Victor Jeffrey, Bowmanville; R. H. Delling, Bowmanville; J. H. Caldback, J. A. Casterton, W. J. Munroe, Grafton; R. M. Patterson, Agincourt; Thompson & King, Harold Hugh, Port Hope; Lewis B. Stinson, Trenton; James Cozle, Warkworth; W. H. Govier, Belleville; Dr. Rundle, Brighton; M. Davey, Roseneath.

Poultry men state the exhibit of Brown and White Leghorns, Barred and White Rocks, Red Caps, Rhode Island Reds and Wyandottes was exceptionally good.

The special prizes offered for racing pigeons brought many exhibitors from a distance. There were four classes of these birds, ranging from some that had flown hundreds of miles to others that had not made a flight at all.

The exhibit of bantams, game and ornamental birds, was heavy and these were also some fine turkeys and geese shown. The display of wild fowl was good.

Mr. Ben Wright, Toronto, judged pigeons, and Mr. L. G. Jarvis, of Burlington, fowl.

The show is a distinct credit to the enterprise of the poultrymen of Northumberland and Durham counties.

The Late Wm. A. Whitehair

The funeral took place here this afternoon of a well-known citizen, Mr. Wm. H. Whitehair, whose death occurred after a long illness. He was a carpenter and was engaged for some years here with well-known firms of contractors. Mr. Whitehair was a member of the I. O. O. F. He is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Bell, of this town, but leaves no family. A brother, Walter, resides in Toronto.

Weight Gaining Contest

An interesting contest was arranged for in connection with the work of the Child Welfare Association here, by Miss Alford, the community nurse. It was a weight-gaining contest. This was held in the junior grades in the schools. While the names and weight of all who participated were not made public sufficient have been submitted to show that good may be accomplished by wise supervision of a child's food and proper attention to diet. The use of milk for young children is strongly emphasized, as it is stated that the child who drinks plenty of milk is never undernourished. In the Cobourg Public School, the first prize in the afternoon kindergarten for gain in weight, went to Abie Pottenick, 7¾ pounds, and she received a silver napkin ring.

Other awards were: Kindergarten, morning—Meada Maidman, 5½ pounds, silver napkin ring.

Primer—Madeline Goodrich, 4½ pounds, box of crayons.

First Reader—George Thompson, 5 pounds, pencil box.

First Reader—Cyril Rapley, 5 pounds, box of crayons.

In the poster competition for better health, poster awards were made as follows:

Senior II.—Wm. Groome, box of paints.

Big Christmas Business

The Christmas business at the Cobourg post-office is believed to have been heavier than ever before. This was especially true of the parcels. A redeeming feature, however, was that the public was considerate of mail clerks and carriers and mailed their parcels earlier than in former years and thus avoided such a huge congestion as is usual the day before Christmas and on Christmas Day. This permitted the staff to clear everything up more satisfactorily on Christmas forenoon also.

HAVELOCK WILL HAVE ELECTION

Nomination Meeting Resulted in a Good Slate—The Candidates Gave Addresses.

HAVELOCK, Jan. 2.—A nomination meeting was held in the Town Hall on Monday night 7 o'clock. Four were nominated for Reeve, namely, Thomas Curtis, Harry Joyce, Richard Sanderson and Alex. Mathinson.

Seven were nominated for Councillors, as follows: Messrs. Roy Campney, W. B. Ritchie, Jas. Scott, Jas. Kitchen, Joe Johnston, Alfred Spencer and Charles Green.

Mr. Edward Fennell was elected by acclamation to the School Board for the term of one year.

Those nominated for School Trustees were: Robert Anderson, J. H. Moore, C. H. Brewster, W. A. McMaster, F. Hooper, Alex. Plunkett, T. G. Hagerman and D. A. Forde.

Messrs. Wm. Mathinson, Wm. Martin and Wm. Rose were nominated for the Hydro Commission.

As the present Reeve could not attend the meeting, those nominated for Reeve spoke for quite a length of time on the merits of themselves and the faults of their opponents.

The chairman, Mr. T. P. Lancaster, clerk of the village of Havelock, read the financial statement. He also spoke on the recent delegation to the Government in Toronto in regard to the Trent River road being made into a Provincial highway as the road was turned over to the Government during the Hearst regime and was never recorded. However, the delegates received a very satisfactory hearing and were promised that the original agreement should be carried out. He also recommended to the Government that they use trap rock on the road, which is procured from the Ontario Rock Co., which is situated about three miles east of the village. If they do this it will mean both a boom to Havelock and also to the Township of Belmont and Methuen.

The members of the old Council then spoke and also the aspirants for the new Council.

Mr. H. W. Roche, as treasurer of the School Board, read the financial statement and gave an outline of the work done on the school in the past summer. A new science room and new stairway were constructed.

Mr. Ed. Fennell thanked those who nominated him, and gave a short address on the betterment of education in Havelock.

The School Trustees who were nominated were all absent except Messrs. D. A. Forde and C. H. Brewster, who gave short addresses.

Messrs. Wm. Mathinson and Wm. Martin spoke briefly on the Hydro Commission work.

Belmont Nominations.

In Belmont Township Reeve Frank Breckenridge and Councillors N. Whitney, W. B. Saunders, Ernest Spencer, and George Vansickle, and Clerk Grant Dafoe all went in by acclamation.

HOLLOWAY

Turner who in turn was ousted from first position by Alderman McIntyre.

Only One Close Contest.

The Board of Education contest provided the only thrill of the election when Craig and Reid ran neck and neck for fifth place. Up until the last poll was heard from there was a chance that Reid would make up the 21 he needed to tie and possibly draw ahead, but poll 37, the last return to come in, showed a vote of 37 each, leaving the fifth place to Dr. Craig. J. T. Braund and W. A. Richardson, who replaced J. W. Worth and J. Wearing towards the end of this year, were defeated, as were H. J. McCannan and Dr. E. Wood. Dr. Wood qualified for the contest with only a few second to spare, and yesterday was given the lowest vote.

Triumphal Procession.

When the last poll had been heard from and victory by a huge majority assured, J. J. Turner was hoisted shoulder high at his headquarters and carried in triumph up George street by his supporters. At The Examiner bulletin where a large crowd had gathered to read the results, the Mayor-elect made a short speech in which he thanked his supporters and those who had helped him in bringing in the big vote. "I appreciate to the full," he said, "the result of this day and the work that has been put forth to elect me chief magistrate of Peterboro. The men who have been elected require your sympathy and support, and it will be my prayer to be guided in the affairs of the city that we may make this 1924 one of the most successful years in the history of the city."

Fifty Per Cent. Vote.

Out of a possible vote of upwards of 10,000 there were between 4,000 and 5,000 ballots completed, and scrutineers and returning officers said a great many women exercised their newly gained rightly in municipal elections.

At the city hall the result was eyed with general satisfaction. The Board room was crowded with contestants and others interested in the outcome of the ballot battle, and the common impression gained from the decisive vote was "the people know what they want."

LIFE LESSONS FROM TOY CAR

Rev. S. W. Dean's Objective Illustrations of Address to Millbrook Methodist Sunday School.

MILLBROOK, January 2. — The annual distribution of awards for regular attendance and Scripture verses memorised during the year, took place in the Methodist Sunday School on the anniversary occasion last Sunday, the church being well filled with members of the Home Department and others, in addition to the school itself.

The superintendent, Mr. W. R. Fallis, was in charge and Rev. S. W. Dean gave a brief talk, of especial interest to the younger scholars, on "How to have a Happy New Year." Mr. Dean used a toy automobile as an object lesson, calling it a "Little Teacher," some points brought out by questioning the children being: A car is self-acting, and God made boys and girls with the power of thinking, acting, and deciding, too. "A bad thing won't come out unless you put a bad thing in."

Discussion of proper equipment brought the reply that a good headlight is needed to travel safely, and the Word of God is a fint headlight for human autos to travel by. A strong bumper is good humor, and a reliable steering-wheel means self-control. "He that ruleth his spirit is mightier than he that taketh a city." The reason for keeping the radiator well filled brought lesson of coolness under stress, and chains that in slippery places and dangerous times help is needed.

The rules of the road, such "watch the speed limit," means in life, "Do not try to run by unfair means," and "Keep on the right side" brings the lesson of unselfishness, "heping, when you meet them, lame dogs over stiles." The drirer makes all the difference, and there are only two to choose from, Christ or Satan. The frmer means a safe time and a safe journey, and wise folk give Him the control.

Attendance Perfect.

Nine scholars had been present every Sunday of the year, and to these the school gives a Bible or a hymn book, valued at $1.50. In case a pupil has already received either of these ,they may make choice of some other award. In Miss M. E. Hetherington's class Miss Ethel Forsyth, Mrs. A. J. Brown, and Mr. T. Luxon were present every Sunday. In the Maple Leaf class, Mrs. I. Hatherly, teacher, Wilma Fallis. In Mrs. J. Hatherly's class, Rita Guthrie. In the Senior Trail Rangers' Class Bruce Freelove. In the Junior Trail Rangers' class, Aubrey Todd. In Mrs. I. M. Nattrass' class, Wiliam Skitch. In Ewart Tucker's class, Harry Freelove.

Memorised Verses.

One hundred and fifty verses must be recited from memory before a pupil is eligible for a prize, and eight were given on Sunday. In the Golden Rule class, Mrs. C. W. The year's record was: Total attendance 6,439, average per Sunday 122, total number of verses recited 4,292, average 88; total offerings, $234.77 average $4.44.

An appropriate book is given each member of the Primary Department each year, and the more than fifty little ones were made happy with this remembrance before the session closed with the benediction by Rev. Mr. Dean.

PARLIAMENT TO OPEN FEBRUARY

Opening Later This Year —Illness of Fielding One Reason.

OTTAWA, Jan. 2. — (Canadian Press.)—The third session of Canadas' fourteenth Parliament probably will open on February 21, and an official announcement to that effect may be expected in a few days.

Hope has been entertained in government circles that the opening would be earlier, and in this month, but two or three circumstances have stood in the way. One is the illness of Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance.

Another reason for the later opening is the desire to be better prepared than was the case last year, when little legislative grist was ready for the mill when the initial debate closed. Still another factor was the Imperial Conference in London, which necessitated the absence of the Prime Minister and two of his colleagues late in the year.

GREETINGS FROM BRITISH THRONE.

Their Majesties Return Goodwill Expressed By Governor - General For Canadian People.

OTTAWA, Jan. 2.—(Canadian Press).—New Year's greetings have been exchanged between His Excellency the Governor-General, on behalf of the Government, and people of Canada, and His Majesty King George. Yesterday Lord Byng cabled to His Majesty as follows:

"At the opening of the new year the Government and people of Canada desire me to convey to Your Majesty and to Her Majesty, the Queen, their sincere greetings together with every good wish for the continued happiness of Your Majesties, and for the peace and prosperity of the British peoples in all parts of the Empire."

"It is a great pleasure to the Queen and myself at the opening of a new year to receive the greetings of the Government and people of Canada. We sincerely thank them and you for the expression of these sentiments of affection and good-will, and we fervently pray that Canada may enjoy every prosperity and happiness in the coming year."

Stolen Touring Car Recovered in River.

CHATHAM, Ont., Jan. 2.—(Canadian Press)—The large touring car owned by R. J. McGrath, of this city, which was stolen from the market late Saturday night, was recovered from the Thames River at the foot of Bear Line, Dover township, about a mile from the city limits. A pair of ladies gloves was found floating on the water, but probing failed to disclose any bodies. It is thought unlikely that anyone was in the machine when it plunged over the ten foot bank. The door opposite the driver's seat was open, the lights turned off, and the car was out of gear when found.

WESTWOOD NAMES TWO FOR REEVE

John Scott and J. D. O'Keefe Named and Seven in Field for Council.

WESTWOOD, Jan. 2.—The nomination which was held in the Town Hall on Monday afternoon, was largely attended by the ratepayers of the township. Mr. J. J. Breckenridge occupied the chair.

The following were the nominees: For Reeve, Jno. Scott and J. D. O'Keefe. For Councillors: Adam Humphries, Charles Would, Lewis Sevis, Ben Cardwell, Jno. Gooley, James E. Brown and T. J. Lynch.

The Reeve and each of the Councillors as well as those newly nominated were called on and each gave a short address.

The old council, as usual, came in for some criticism.

Each of the eight candidates seem confident of success and it is expected that the Council for 1924 will earn their seats.

Personals.

How to Stop Sour Stomach

Chronic With Many People—Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Bring Quick Comfort—Sweeten and Stop Acid, Sour Risings and Such Dyspeptic Distress.

When the fact is considered that even careful people, those who follow diet rules, get attacks of indigestion, no argument is needed to recommend the best means of relief. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are used by lawyers, doctors, teachers, by business men, high livers, society women, industrial workers, clerks, and the worst abused stomachs in the world, those of a host of travelers.

For thirty years people have learned that they may eat what they like or what is set before them, and no matter what the condition of the stomach, if due to dyspepsia, these wonderful tablets stop gassiness and sour risings, they give the stomach the alkaline effect which overcomes acidity and thus they either avoid distress after eating or else they quickly relieve it. Be fortified. Get a 60-cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store and arm yourself against indigestion.

ARMED CONFLICT IN THE BALKANS

Strained Relations Between Greece and Rumania.

ATHENS, Jan. 2. — (United Press). — Rumors of impending armed conflicts in the Balkans were renewed to-day.

It is learned that 7,000 members of the Bulgar Comitadjis were concentrated in the Bulgarian districts of Radomir, Custandil and Fetritiz, threatening an invasion of Greeco-Serbian Macedonia.

The report added that the excitement here was caused by the strained relations between Greece and Roumania, following the expulsion of the Greek King and Queen.

The Gonatas Government resigned to-day, as did Colonel Plastiras, head of the Military Directorate, which has virtually controlled the Greek affairs for some time.

DOOMED MEN WELCOME DEATH BY MEANS OF A LETHAL EXECUTION

End of Terror of Suspense in Death House Waiting for Legislation to Prescribe Means of Death.

Now, constitutionality of the death decreed for them has just been upheld by the United States Supreme Court.

Glad End Is Near

So it will be only a little while before Thomas Russel, Hughie Sing and Gee Jon are led into the hermetically-sealed chamber of concrete with its big window standing so forbiddingly in the prison yard.

Inside they will be trussed to a chair, while through a pipe, unseen death will creep upon them.

Six witnesses permitted by law, will watch through the glass.

Death will come silently.

It will come quickly.

And for that the condemned men are glad.

Months of terror waiting for the end has shot their hair with white.

Soon the agony of suspense will be over.

For they know definitely now how they are to die and when.

With oriental stoicism Hughie Sing and Gee Joh sigh relief.

Death by whatever means all agree is bad enough.

"But to wait for it and know not the hour or by what means society has planned to rid itself of us is cause for stark terror," Hughie, the high school lad, who mixed his education with tong vengeance, says.

In death the trio greet the New Year.

Created Public Clamor

During the interim the country was clamoring against their doom, the three aged with horror wondering how Nevada would kill them should the gas chamber be denied its prey.

Today in the prison preparations are being made to set the lethal machinery in motion.

Three wires are being affixed to the valve which will loose the deadly vapor into the little concrete chamber.

At a given signal when the day of death comes the wires will be pulled simultaneously.

But only one will open the controlling jet.

This will prevent anyone from knowing who turned on the gas.

Nevada amended its law governing capital punishment, adopting lethal execution instead of hanging, at suggestions from state legislators who had seen service in France and witnessed effects of poison gas on the battle front.

The new way, it was urged, would be more humane and mark an advance over old methods.

But despite assurances from scientists that death would be almost immediate upon the doomed man entering the lethal chamber, a deluge of protests flooded in from all parts of the country.

Might Prolong Suffering

Chief objection to the killings lay in wording of the law which did not specify the mode or kind of gas to be used.

On this basis objectors argued that the condemned men might be kept alive for weeks under excruciating torture.

Prison authorities, however, declare that the right kind of gas will be used and that no unusual suffering will be inflicted.

To all of which Hughie Sing and Gee Jon are most apathetic.

Likewise is Thomas Russel, whose haste with a gun killed an Indian squaw, and brought about his present plight.

Their long wait is over.

They are to be rewarded with death.

And they are happy.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Clive Roberts Earton

MISSEZ SPRAT CALLS

"How d' do! I've come to call," she beamed.

Missez Sprat crossed the street from her house to the Twins' house, puffing like anything from hurrying so fast, so she could be the first to tell the gossip to her new neighbors.

To be sure she was so fat it didn't take much to make her puff, but anyway she had hurried extra fast, and as she climbed up on the front porch of the card-board Christmas-tree house, she sounded like a popcorn roadster or an electric washer or something like that.

"Mercy alive!" cried Nancy, when the flimsy house gave a great shake as Missez Sprat's weight descended on it. "We're going to fall down, Nick. An automobile must have bumped into us."

But at that minute the door-bell rang, and as the house didn't fall in, the Twins knew they had a visitor.

Nancy hung her cooking apron up on a hook, and Nick pulled his tie straight, and answered the door.

"How d'do! I've come to call," she beamed.

"Do come in, then," said Nick, making one of his famous bows. But he straightened instantly with alarm, as Missez Sprat stepped inside. For the house groaned and shook and acted as though the Roman Empire had fallen on it, and a few more things besides.

But Missez Sprat wasn't alarmed. She kept on beaming and smiling and acted as though shaking houses that acted like earth-quakes were the most every-day things in the world. And no doubt they were—with her.

So the Twins got over their alarm and remembering their manners, made the good lady quite welcome.

"I just said to myself, sez I," remarked Missez Sprat, "that I for one was going to see that those poor lambs were properly treated in Mother Goose Land. Particularly when Mother Goose is away! Or I should say Daddy Gander Land. I suppose, but I never can get used to it. After all, when Daddy Gander really does run the place, his wife being off gadding most of the time, I suppose he has a right to call it anything he pleases."

Nancy was just about to reply, but horror of horrors! At that very minute Missez Sprat stopped talking and decided to sit down (not that she hadn't been pressed to do so before) and didn't she decide on the rickety red plush sofa without any hind legs, that was leaning up against the stove.

Before anybody could stop her, crash, bang! Down came Missez Sprat, red plush sofa and all, right smack down onto the floor! And this time the house acted as though the Roman Empire and Babylon and Troy and all the other places that ever fell, had landed right on top of it.

"My, my! We're awfully sorry!" cried the Twins, each taking an arm to help the poor lady up. "Did you get hurt?"

"No, not a bit, and don't worry!" laughed Missez Sprat. "Now that I'm here, I may as well stay. I can make my call on the floor as well as any place, I guess."

The Twins were relieved that she took it so good naturedly.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

Some years ago the real emphasis of pure breed, health conditions and hygienic living was confined largely to cattle and stock. Of course, this was more prominent in western states where many large ranches were situated. The improvement was marked.

Now, people are coming to believe more and more that it is more important to give the same intelligent, scientific care and attention to growing children that they have been compelled by law to give their cattle. Isn't it rather strange that no law has yet been passed which insures healthy parentage to the children?

Health boards in both states and counties, physicians in charge of government tests and institutes, home associations and clubs of prominent women have put their shoulders to the back of this great health program for better babies and robust, healthy children. In one county in Montana the campaign against defective teeth has resulted in reducing the number of such teeth in children from 13 to 31 per cent during the past two years. This indicates how many stomach ulcers and diseased kidneys this one county has prevented through pus and infection from abscessed and diseased teeth.

Mouth breathing, with its attendant evils of throat disease, lung trouble and often loss of hearing, has by proper operations and widespread warnings been reduced over 50 per cent.

Perhaps the best showing of all was the campaign just closed, in Carlon County, which banished every disease spot that could be located. At a health program, over 40 miles from a railroad, where 60 children were examined after one year of treatment to show the per cent of improvement, every parent was present, some of them driving 40 miles.

Get your local board interested in local health conditions. Try and round up the destroying germs and bacteria that rob our children of robust health.

THE FAMILY HERALD'S OFFER

Many of our readers who have known and read the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal for thirty, forty and even fifty years still marvel at the constantly increasing excellence of that remarkable farm and family journal. As each year succeeded another it seemed that as far as was humanly possible the point of perfection had been reached, but inevitably this astonishingly progressive party would launch some new feature and make improvements here and there that would add immeasurably to its attractiveness and value. And so, for the coming season all who wisely subscribe to the old reliable Family Herald and Weekly Star may depend upon receiving even greater value than in the past, with many pleasant surprises thrown in. One of the nice surprises this year is a most beautiful picture of a remarkably lovely woman, entitled "The Wonderful Heroine," which will be given free to each new subscriber and to each present subscriber who renews in time for another year. Truly this is value heaped up, pressed down and running over.

The remarkable life of the beautiful and heroic woman who is the subject of the painting has been published in booklet form, and our readers may obtain a copy free by sending a post card to the Family Herald and Weekly Star, Montreal.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

Rub on Good Old Musterole

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once.

Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, it does the work without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief. 40c and 75c, at all druggists.

MIDNIGHT SERVICE AT ST. JOHN'S

A number of people took advantage of the midnight service in St. John's on New Year's eve which commenced at 11.30 and continued till 12.15 a.m. The Litany was said and a short address given by the Vicar. Mrs. McKee Bingham sang very beautifully "Ring Out Wild Bells" by Gounod, immediately after the midnight hour.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Do not use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can not possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

A chafing dish supper is a delightfully informal way to entertain a small group of friends. More than six or eight persons should not be served from one dish. If a larger party is wanted use two dishes, one at each end of the table.

Everything should be prepared to cook and all ingredients assembled for the greatest convenience of the cook. When the various dishes containing the raw materials are emptied they should be removed from the table.

The menu should be light and secondary to the chafing dish concoction. A salad may or may not be served, as the hostess sees fit. Sandwiches that are acceptable with the dish prepared are often used in place of reheated rolls. The dessert might be some Christmas fruit cake and a simple Spanish or Bavarian cream.

Chicken a la King is always a chafing dish standby as is Welsh rarebit. These dishes are expensive, especially the chicken, and rather difficult to make.

Shrimp wiggle, rinctum ditty, bunny hug and chilaly are attractive simple dishes that the most inexperienced cook can prepare on a chafing dish.

Shrimp Wiggle

Two cups shrimps, 1 small can peas, 1½ cups milk, 3 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon minced parsley.

The shrimps should be cleaned and in a bowl. The peas removed from the can, rinsed in cold running water, drained and placed in a bowl. The other ingredients should be measured and arranged in dishes around the chafing dish for the cook.

Melt butter in "blazer" over the flame. Stir in flour and slowly add milk. Season with salt and pepper, add shrimps and peas and cook, stirring constantly until thick and smooth. Put hot water in the water pan, place over blaze and put the blazer over hot water to keep mixture hot while serving. Serve on toast or crisp crackers.

Rinctum Ditty

Two and one-half cups tomatoes, 1 cup grated cheese, 1 teaspoon salt, tiny pinch mustard, 1 green pepper, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 eggs, 1 cup mushrooms, 1 teaspoon grated onion, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 teaspoon celery pepper.

The pepper should be blanched and minced. Melt butter, add tomatoes, cheese, pepper and mushrooms, stirring constantly. Season. When very hot but not bubbling stir in eggs well beaten. Cook until eggs are creamy, stirring lightly with a fork. Serve on toast.

Bunny Hug

Two cups grated or finely cut cheese, 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup strained tomatoes, 1-8 teaspoon soda, ½ cup milk, salt, mustard, pepper, hot buttered brown bread toast spread with deviled ham.

Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk. When thick add tomatoes mixed with soda. Add cheese and when cheese is melted add eggs slightly beaten. Put over hot water and serve on the prepared toast.

"Angels on Horseback"

Blanch and parboil the sweetbreads and cut in small pieces about the size of an oyster. Roll each piece in a strip of bacon and fasten with the toothpicks. Broil in the blazer over the blaze. Turn to make the bacon an even brown all over. Serve with sandwiches.

COLORED
English Bath Towels
79c Pair

Here is a Towel that will fairly drink up water. The reason is quite simple. Take particular note of the extra large size and deep, heavy nap, and all will be quite clear. They measure, when opened out, 20 by 44 inches; Fawn, Grey and Cream striped patterns; and Towels have fringed ends. 79c a pair is lower than anything former in Towels of such quality.

STREET FLOOR AND BARGAIN ANNEX.

English and Canadian Flannelettes
19c Yard

Coloured Striped Flannelettes from English and Canadian mills. The width is 27 inches, and the quality will surprise you. It is quite heavy for a price so moderate. In the Bargain Annex only, and keep it in your mind that we have but Six Hundred Yards. That means Shop Early.

Women's Penman and Mercury Hose
69c Pair

When one hears of a Sale of Cashmere Hose at this season of the year, they respond quickly. Now we have a line to sell at only 69c a pair, and of course the response will be exceedingly greater than in the Sales that have gone before. And these have reinforced heels and toes, no seams, and are of perfect dye. About half the lot are All-Wool, in sizes 8½, 9, 9½, and 10.

STREET FLOOR AND BARGAIN ANNEX.

Cressman's "Ideal" Sport Wool
23c Skein

Outside the ground is covered with snow, while inside mother, or perhaps grandmother, is sitting by the fireside knitting. Of course, she is using Cressman's Ideal Sport Wool. It is everyone's favourite. Not only because it is the best there is and the range of colors complete, but because the price is low, and lower than some makes much inferior.

INDIAN SUNDAY SCHOOL CONCERT

Good Programme Under Direction of School Teacher.

OSHKIGMONG, Jan. 2. — The annual Christmas concert of the Indian Sunday school was given in the hall here on Christmas night.

A most attractive programme was rendered by the members of the Sunday school, under the able management of Miss Edna Harris, school teacher. The hall was crowded, every available seat being taken, and a large number standing. All of the children and many of the older people received gifts from the Beautifully trimmed and well-laden Christmas tree. A treat was provided by the teacher, either candies, apples or oranges. The children demonstrated the efficient training received from their teacher in the manner the programme was rendered. Mr. Hawley of Peterborough, who acted as chairman, showed his ability by keeping the audience in good humor. The programme was as follows:

Chairman's address.
Opening chorus, Jingle Bells.

COON HUNTERS IN WILDS OF MONAGHAN

NORTH MONAGHAN, Jan. 2.—Hunting in North Monaghan, has been quite a popular sport during the holiday season.

One man, who caught four raccoons on Saturday, remarked that there were plenty in this district if one only knew where to find them.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the bottle. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you 16 ounces of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for $2.50.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

The year's best book by America's best woman writer
"BLACK OXEN"
by GERTRUDE ATHERTON

Published by arrangement with Associated First National Pictures, Inc. Watch for the screen version produced by Frank Lloyd with Corinne Griffith as Countess Zattiany.

(Copyright, 1923, by Gertrude Atherton.)

Her real age? Could he ever forget it? Should he not always see the old face under the new mask, as the X-Rays revealed man's hideous interior under its merciful covering of flesh? But he knew that one of the most beneficient gifts bestowed upon mankind is the talent for forgetting. Particularly when one object has been displaced by another. Reiteration dulls the memory. He might say to himself every hour in the day that she was sixty not thirty and the phrase would soon become as meaningless as absent-minded replies to remarks about the weather.

"He wondered if he would ever sleep again."

And he doubted if any man could look at Mary Zattiany for three consecutive minutes and recall that she had ever been old, or imagine that she could ever be old again. However prone man may be to dream, he is, unless one of the visionaries, dominated by the present. What he wants he wants now and he wants what he sees, not what may be lurking in the future. That is the secret of the early and imprudent marriage—the urge of the race. And if a man is not deterred by mere financial considerations, still less is he troubled by visions of what his inamorata will look like thirty years hence or what she might have looked like had disease prematurely withered her. He sees what he sees and if he is satisfied at all he is as completely satisfied as a man may be.

He made no doubt that Mary Zattiany would have, if she chose, as many suitors among men of his own age as among her former contemporaries. They would discuss the phenomenon furiously, joke about it, try to imagine her as she had been, back water, return out of curiosity, hesitate, speculate—and then forget it.

No one would forget it sooner than himself. He had no doubt whatever that when he went to her house tomorrow afternoon he would remember as long as she kept him waiting and no longer. So that was that.

Did he want children? They charmed him—sometimes—but he had never been conscious of any desire for a brood of his own. He knew that many men felt an even profounder need of offspring than women. Man's ego is more strident, the desire to perpetuate itself more insistent, his foresight is more extended. Moreover, however subconsciously, his sense of duty to the race is stronger. . . . But he doubted if any man would weigh the repetition of his ego against his ego's demand to mate with a woman like Mary Zattiany. He certainly would not. That was final.

What was it she demanded in love, that she had sought so ardently and ever missed? Could he give it to her? Was she merely glamored once more, caught up again in the delusions of youth, with her revivified brain and re-awakened senses, and this time only because the man was of a type novel in her cognizance of men? Useless to plead the urge of the race in her case. . . . Nevertheless, many women, denied the power of reproduction, fell as mistakenly in love as the most fertile of their sisters. But hardly a woman of Mary Zattiany's exhaustive experience! She certainly should know her own mind. Her instincts by this time must be compounded of technical knowledge, hot the groping inherited flashes playing about the shallow soil of youth. . . . If her instincts had centered on him there must be some deeper meaning than passion or even intellectual homology. After all, their conversations, if vital, had been few in number.

Perhaps she had found, with her mind's trained antennea, some one of those hidden layers of personality which she alone could reveal to himself. What was it? She wanted far more than love-making and mental correspondence. What was it? He wished he knew. Tenderness? He could give her that in full measure. Sentiment? He was no sentimentalist, but he believed that he possessed the finer quality. Fidelity? That was not worth consideration. Appreciation of the deepest and best in her, sympathetic understanding of all her mistakes and of all that she had suffered? She knew the answer as well as he did. The ability to meet her in many moods, never to weary her with monotony? He was a man of many moods himself. What had saved him from early matrimony was a certain monotony in women, the cleverest of them.

"He examined the full-length picture of her painted shortly before her marriage."

But there must be something beyond some subtle, spiritual demand, developed throughout nearly twice as many years as he had dwelt on earth; born not only of an aspiring soul and terrible disenchantments, but of a wisdom that only years of deep and living experience, no mere intelligence, however brilliant, could hope to assemble. He was thirty-four. There was no possible question that at fifty-eight, if he lived sanely, and his intellectual faculties had progressed unimpaired, he would look back upon thirty-four as the nonage of life—when the future was a misty abyss of wisdom whose brink he had barely trod. She herself was an abyss of wisdom. How in God's name could he ever cross it? Her body might be young again, but never her mind. Never her mind! And then he had a flash of insight. Perhaps he alone could rejuvenate that mind.

Certainly he could make her forget. Men and women would be aged at thirty, but for this beneficent gift of forgetting. He could make the present vivid enough. . . .

Miss Allen's TESTED RECIPES No. 60

An Author's Corn Bread

(Channing Pollock, author of "The Fool," whose movie rights alone recently brought $100,000, has given us permission to use this recipe, reprinted from the Stag Cook Book)

3 cupfuls cornmeal
4 heaping teaspoonfuls baking powder
2 eggs well beaten
1 teaspoonful salt

SCREEN ACTRESSES IN SHOOTING FRAY

Mable Normand and Companion Were in Club Man's Bungalow When He Was Shot by Chauffeur.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2 (Canadian Press).—Courtland S. Dines, 35 oil operator, and Denver, Clubman was shot in the breast at his bungalow last night, according to the police by Joe Kelly, alias H. A. Greer, chauffeur for Miss Mabel Normand, screen actress, whose 25 calibre pistol is said to have been used in the shooting. Surgeons early to-day said Dines would recover.

Kelly admitted shooting Dines.

Miss Normand and Miss Edna Purviance, another screen actress, who is said to be engaged to Dines, were spending the afternoon and evening of a chilly New Year's day in the Denver man's apartment here, when Kelly appeared and insisted that Miss Normand go home with him. An argument is said to have arisen and Miss Normand at first refused to leave. Then she changed her mind, and went toward the door, but Dines is said to have grabbed a bottle, and the trouble started. According to Kelly's story to the police he feared that Dines was going to smash him over the head with the bottle so "he just shot him." Both Miss Normand and Miss Purviance were greatly distressed over the shooting.

Would Not Die

Both were held for questioning after an affectionate scene in the hospital where Miss Purviance proclaimed her love for Dines and implored him not to die. He assured her that he would not.

"I'm not going to play with her any more. Look at the notoriety I'm going to get out of this" Miss Normand told him.

The two women were afterwards released by the police, Miss Purviance declined to discuss the reports that she was engaged to Dines. Miss Normand insisted they were true and Dines flatly denied them. The story of Dines, who is said to have been in his bathrobe when Kelly entered, was to the effect that Chauffeur fired without provocation and Miss Purviance said Dines made no move toward the chauffeur.

BURGLARS VISIT YOUNG'S POINT

Robert A. Charleton's Store Operated On by Thieves — Object Was Money.

Burglars who entered Robert A. Charleton's general store in Young's Point while 1923 was merging into 1924 succeeded in making their getaway with a lady's ring and brooch and $1 in coppers. Provincial Constable R. F. Davis is following up a clue and expects to clear up the case speedily.

Between 11.30 p.m. on Monday and 7.30 a.m. on Tuesday the thieves entered the store by the front door, which they opened with a skeleton key. They found the door of the safe unlocked, and in a search for money, which was obviously their object, they scattered papers and books on the floor. The only objects of value in the safe were a lady's ring and a brooch, which they took. The till contained $1 in coppers, which were also taken. Cigars and cigarettes are missing from a show-case, but up to this morning Mr. Charleton had not completed his inventory of the missing articles.

Constable Davis was called to the scene of the burglary, and is investigating.

NEW LOW RECORD.

MONTREAL, Jan. 2.—(Special).—A new low record for arrests was set on New Year's Day.

KING'S DAUGHTER'S DANCE

The annual at Home of the King's Daughters, held in the G. W. V. A. Hall on Monday evening, December 31st, was a very successful event, attended by nearly three hundred people. The ladies in charge of the decorating committee achieved a very pretty interior effect in cool Christmas fashion. Christmas trees and greens banked the windows, the orchestra stand and made a pretty corner alcove. The door at the north end of the hall was curtained with streamers of dark blue crepe paper, decorated with silver stars and tiny electric Japanese lanterns. Frosted white paper and white simulated snow balls garnished the trees, and an original idea was the long, bearded vari-colored icicles of fringthat covered the electric light globes. On the stroke of midnight, the New Year, in the form of little Mary Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Evans, was ushered in, driving a tiny automobile, followed by the Old Year, portrayed by Dr. N. H. Sutton, in appropriate costume. Excellent music for dancing was furnished by Roy Nickron's five-piece orchestra.

Patronesses for the dance were: Mrs. J. W. Fraser, Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mrs. F. D. Kerr, Mrs. G. R. Langley, Mrs. G. A. Macdonald, Mrs. A. W. Turner.

RADIO NEWS

In order that persons operating Radio Receiving Sets without a license may not plead ignorance of the law, the Department of Marine and Fisheries desires to issue a warning that the period of grace allowed to obtain such licenses without invoking the penalty provided, is about to lapse.

It should be noted that a license is required irrespective of the type of aerial system you are using, whether it be outside aerial, plug, or loop. Licenses can be obtained at the Post Office and from Mr. Sherwood at Canadian National Telegraph Office.

Explanation of the Radio Licensing System

At the present time, the Radio Branch, Department of Marine and Fisheries, has an inspection staff of 38 permanent and part time inspectors at different points throughout the Dominion. The function of these inspectors is to check the activities of the thousands of licensed transmitting stations in Canada and to see that they do not get off their wave-length and interfere with broadcasting.

Inspectors investigate all complaints of interference and, where preventable, take the necessary step to eliminate same closing down the offending station, if necessary.

No Canadian ships or stations are licensed to work on the 450 metre wave-length during broadcast hours and Canadian Inspectors keep a continual check on Canadian stations to see that they strictly adhere to the wave-length they are licensed to use viz. 600 metres.

It is difficult for anyone non-conversant with the code to know the origin of interference. Transformer leakage and electrical discharges will cause interference sometimes attributed to amateur stations.

It is the intention of the Department to make every effort to clear the broadcasting band from all unnecessary interference. This necessitates a comparatively large Inspection Staff and it is essential that the receiving stations assist in maintaining this service for their protection by paying their license fee.

If you have a complaint in regard to interference write or telephone to Radio Inspector H. F. N. Sherwood, 110 Lock St., 'Phone 1518W.

While discussing broadcasting there is one point which is frequently overlooked. Each night you listen in you receive high quality concerts from here, there and everywhere, with no expense to yourself. The artists practically all give their services voluntarily and do not even have the reward and satisfaction of hearing you applaud. The next time you are in the Post Office, purchase a dollar's worth of stamped post cards and keep them alongside your receiving set, then whenever you hear a number or a program which pleases you, address a postcard to the station and send a few words of commendation. You have no idea how much the messages are appreciated by the artists, and so long as they feel their work is appreciated, they will continue to amuse and entertain us.

Cobourg and District

COBOURG, Jan. 1.—The case of Dr. Watson vs The Town of Cobourg, which was partially heard by Judge Ward on Friday, will come up again on January 18. Dr. Watson is asking the town for $100 damages for injuries received when he fell on the sidewalk, under construction at the time, on Queen street last September. Mr. T. F. Hall, K.C., represented Dr. Watson in this action and Mr. F. M. Field, K.C., town solicitor, appeared for the Corporation of Cobourg. The case is attracting considerable attention as Dr. Watson is a member of the 1923 Town Council.

The Church Services

At the church services Sunday New Year messages were delivered by a number of local pastors and portions of the Christmas music were repeated, to the enjoyment of the congregations who turned out to worship in the last Sunday of the old year in large numbers.

At St. Andrew's church, Rev. W. A. Bremner pastor spoke on "Some Ideals for 1924." At the Baptist church, Rev. J. N. Norton spoke in the morning on "1924 Weal or Woe," and in the evening on "Read God's Calendar."

Rev. R. F. Stillman, at the Methodist church, Rev. Canon F. J. Sawers, at St. Peter's, and Rev. James W. Pedley, at the Congregational church, delivered sermons appropriate in lessons learned during the closing year and ideals for the new.

Coldsprings School Entertainment

Among the happy events of the Yuletide season were the Christmas entertainments held by the public schools. At Coldsprings children and parents were entertained at a turkey supper and Christmas tree arranged by the popular teacher of the school, Miss Sweetman, of Smithfield. A splendid supper was served at 6 p.m. and afterwards all kinds, almost, of popular games were indulged in. Every child received a suitable gift and the evening was very much enjoyed.

Entertainment at Camborne

A very enjoyable entertainment, consisting of dialogues, singing, recitations, drills, etc., was given at Camborne on Friday evening by the Mission bands from Coldsprings and Camborne. Rev. F. J. Horwood, pastor, ably presided and the house was crowded. Mrs. (Rev.) Horwood was in charge of the programme and its success speaks volumes for her painstaking work. The proceeds of the evening, which amounted to about $30.00, will be devoted to Missions.

Presentation to Recent Benedict

On Thursday afternoon the employees of the Cobourg Felt Company presented Mr. James Hutton, whose marriage took place recently with a leather upholstered rocking chair, mantel clock with chimes and a jardiniere. The presentation was made by Mr. George Walker on behalf of the employees and Mr. Hutton made appropriate reply.

Wanted on Fraud Charge

Chief John C. Ruse has sent out circulars among the police of Ontario, asking them to be on the lookout for a man named Charles Fife, who is wanted here, it is stated, on a charge of obtaining goods under false pretences. Fife is stated to have been in this town during the summer, but to have left his home here sometime ago. It is further stated that he had expectations of receiving a large legacy through the death of some relative, which apparently has not yet materialized.

Marriage at Newcastle

A pretty Yuletide wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lake, Newcastle, when their eldest daughter, Phoebe, was married to Norman Harold, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Skinner, Tyrone. Rev. E. R. James, rector of St. George's church, Newcastle, conducted the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was attended by her cousin, Miss Minnie Webber, of Bowmanville. The bride was made the recipient of a miscellaneous shower by neighbors and friends, previous to her marriage.

POULTRY SHOW OPENED TODAY IN ARMOURIES

Many Classes and Good Quality Promise Best Exhibition on Record--One Bird Produced Average of 294 Eggs a Year

INTERESTS EVERYONE

All the barnyard gossip of the various sections of the country and district was being retailed in high-pitched 'fowl' language at the Armouries to-day, among the feathered citizens of the little colony that will have its home there until Friday night of this week. The lordlings of the flock were growing accustomed to their new steel cage homes, and the industrious biddies, in several instances, had already contributed a share to the dinner table of the caretaker of the big building, who goes about collecting largess from the busy hens.

Early this afternoon, everything was practically in readiness for the big Poultry Show which opens tonight, and, from all indications, will be one of the best in the long list of Peterborough's successful fowl exhibitions. Every class is well represented, many of the prize winners at the Royal Poultry Show in Toronto this year are on view, and there is a special showing of registered layers, in the pen of birds exhibited by G. Wood, in which each bird has produced an average of 294 eggs a year, there is a new variety, never exhibited in Peterborough before, of Rhode Island Whites, and the largest entry of water fowl in the history of the show. Outside exhibitors are Van Allen of Stirling, Hutchinson of Warkworth, Patterson of Agincourt, Bottrell and Nokes of Bowmanville, and the local men are well represented, including T. Darrah, H. Lush, G. Buller and S. Oke. Mr. George Paxman, superintendent, has arrangements well in hand for a show which is well worth while visiting. C. Hubbs of East City, has a special showing of T. Barron's English Leghorns, there is a display by the Dominion Experimental Farms, which includes an egg-grading section, and a booth containing samples of poultry supplies and feeds of all sorts, conducted by R. Denne.

In four long parrallel lines of steel cages, and in a row at the far end are the birds. The ducks total the largest showing ever made here, and include the white Indian Runners, Pekins and English Aylesburys, the mottled French Rouen, and the black Cayugas.

There are cages of stiff geese, the big Emdens, Toulouse, Africans and Chinese, with their bulbous noses, flanked by turkeys, in the white of the Holland birds, and the gorgeous markings of the bronze specimens.

There is a large showing of White Leghorns, and quantities of Rhode Island Reds. The snappy-looking Ancona, a bird which is becoming increasingly popular, is well represented, there are English Dorkings and Orphingtons, in hues of buff, black and white, and Cornish game birds.

This is the first year that a distinction has been made in the Brown Leghorns. The light brown birds, which are harder to breed than the dark colored fowl, are shown in separate cages. A dozen specimens of Wild Ducks have several cages all to themselves, companioned by the polite odd - looking variety, which never say a word when handled, preferring to endure the ordeal in dignified silence.

There is a good class of the much-trimmed Brahmas, with their decorated ankles, in light and dark shades Cochins and Langshans, the latter including some superb black birds, beautiful laced Silver Wyandottes, and the pencilled partridge variety of the same family, the Columbia Wyandotte, resembling the Brahma, with the absence of the fussy leg-feathers, Brahma hens with their Persian embroidery markings, and the game Pitt birds, fiery-looking specimens, their combs and wattles "dubbed," their spurs ready for the scissors, heir are some wonderfully-marked hackles in the Wyandotte cages, and the little deceptive, extremely solid Cornish birds are present in good variety.

It is anticipated that the judging by Mr. Warrington of Cornwall, will be entirely completed by To-morrow night, and the officials in charge are looking forward to an extremely successful show for this year, with a record attendance. It is well worth anyone's while, whether a fancier of birds or not, to visit such an exhibition. Every cage in the hundreds on view contains a well-bred specimen of the fowl family, made ready for the show, and exhibiting almost as much interest in events as the visitors. Every entry has been chosen for pre-eminence in some line, and the variety and numbers make a splendid showing for Peterboro and Vicinity. To gain a idea of what can be done in the breeding of fowl of every sort it is only necessary to visit the Armories during the three days of the show, and see some of the fine birds on view there.

Hot Coffee and refreshments are being served at the entrance by Mrs. R. Bugg, who has some good home-made cooking on sale.

SAAR VALLEY IS IMPROVED

But Conditions Still Cause Anxiety—Scarcity of Raw Materials a Factor.

GENEVA, Jan. 2 (Associated Press).—Satisfactory from some points of view, the economic and social situation of the Saar Valley territory causes anxiety from others, according to a report received by the League of Nations from the governing commission of the district. The Saar Valley, which extends along the Franco-German frontier, was handed over to the League for control during a period of years after which the inhabitants by a plebiscite will decide their future political status.

The commission reports that the territory is gradually recovering from the effects of the miners' strike and that there is a large increase in the gross yield from the mines. However, the territory as a whole has not regained its prosperity, the situation being aggravated by continual difficulties in transport to the east, by the scarcity of certain raw materials and by the rise in the cost of living which began in August. Since June the French franc has been the only legal currency in the district, replacing the German mark. The effort of the governing commission to prevent exploitation of the currency reform at first succeeded, but in August and September a somewhat alarming increase in the cost of living set in, the main causes being the rarity of credits, difficulties in obtaining supplies, the enormous rise of prices in Germany, and the ever-widening use of the gold unit for the establishment of prices. However, prices are now lower than in Germany. The commission has adopted measures to deal with the agitation tendency in labor circles.

Compilation of results of a census taken last year shows that the total Saar population is 713,105. The surface of the territory is 188,069 square kilometers.

The commissioners express belief that they will be able to cope with the problem of the cost of living and eventually succeed in balancing the budget.

NEGLECT AT DEATH MAN MILLION KNEW

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2 (Associated Press).—At one time or another millions undoubtedly knew Pierre Gasnier. For years he was a "strong man" for one of the largest circuses.

But 15 or 20 years ago he retired from the sawdust tours to settle in San Francisco. Here thousands of a new generation came to know him. He made his living by giving physical culture demonstrations and selling his "system" on a down town street corner. At this stand he never missed a day. He called himself "the strongest man in the world." Usually he had a little knot of passers-by viewing his muscles and listening to his friendly badinage.

Gasnier's little peddler's automobile became a landmark as familiar to San Franciscans as Twin Peaks or the Ferry Building. He was assisted in his demonstrations by a Chinese servant, his companion for many years.

One day recently the traffic policeman sensed something wrong with the topography of the street. He saw that Pierre Gasnier and his tiny car were missing. The policeman told headquarters. Headquarters investigated and learned that Gasnier had died in the isolated shack he called home.

The authorities waited for relatives and friends to come forward with arrangements for the funeral. But it seemed there were no relatives, at least none could be found, and no one else was interested.

So, with the faithful Chinese the only mourner, a modest funeral was provided by the municipality.

There was an outlay of nearly $6,000,000,000 for building construction in 1923.

The Copper and Brass research association estimates the outlay in 1924 will run close to $5,000,000,000. Some other authorities claim this year will be as large as 1923. Normal building construction means large consumption of steel, copper, brass, cement, lumber, etc.

CHICAGO BASKETBALL TEAM SMOOTH MACHINE

Gave Fast Exhibition in Defeating Local Y.M.C.A. Intermediates By 37-13—Team Work Was Spectacular Feature.

The Association College team of Chicago, walked off the floor of the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium winners over the local Intermediates by 37 points to 13 in the best and fastest exhibition of basketball ever played in Peterborough.

The Chicago team are made up of boys who have tossed a basketball every day since they could toddle around. In the States, they take to basketball as the Canadian youth does to hockey. Besides, the Association College gives special training for basketball. The game is in fact studied play by play and this was certainly evident in the team's play. Every time a man got the ball he knew where to throw it and there was always a man there to receive it. The ball was never held but was always in motion from man to man moving with lightning rapidity. They were a great bunch of checkers and never lost sight of their man. It was an experience to watch the team in action every player moving in position for each different condition and play like a well trained rugby squad.

Taking it 'all in all' the locals have nothing to be downhearted about losing by such a score to a team that were only defeated in the last thirty seconds and that by one point 28 to 27 by one of the fastest teams in Canada, the West End "Y" of Toronto. On the other hand they deserve credit and they showed by the play that Peterborough will certainly have a good Intermediate basket ball team this season. Langford, a new comer, and Alec. Elliott, relieved by Hardill, teamed up to make up a fast forward nine. While "Spot" Stuart went on many a "wild rampage", Russel Pogue was the locals star and started a lot of the plays that ended in points. He showed that he has solved many of the "Yankee" methods of play and broke up many a combination. DeGraw seldom let his man away. Darling and McLeish came on to add their pep when the y were needed. With a little more practice Peterborough should have a team that will take some beating.

None of the Chicago team showed up much above the high standard set by the team. Scott netted five baskets while he was on the floor dropping them in from all positions. Tom Pogue, was in every play and showed that he has learned a lot and improved since he crossed the border. Tom was always good now he is a whirlwind. During the second half the visitors sent on a whole new team, showing that they are of the same calibre.

The Chicago quintette had most of the play during the first of the game bewildering the locals by the speed and combination. But as the game progressed and the Petes became more used to their methods, play tightened and they began taking a hand in the game. At the end of the first half the score stood 19 to 2 for Chicago. In the second half the locals rung in clever while the College boys hung up eighteen.

The game was clean throughout Summary:

Curtain Raiser

The Senior "Y" proving too strong for the De Laval girls won 17 to 6 in their game which served as curtain-raiser to the main game.

The game was played under the revised Girl's Rules. The teams were evenly matched in all respects but in their shooting in this respect the "Y" team had a decided superiority. Gertrude Gimblett starred for the winners dropping in eight baskets for a total of sixteen points.

The De Laval had a snappy combination and worked the ball down the floor nicely. They were repeatedly stopped only by the sterling work of the "Y" guards. Miss G. Kirn rung in all her teams baskets.

The game was a revelation to the most of the crowd showing clearly the extent to which girl's basketball has improved over other years, even at this the teams playing the game were not at their full strength.

PARIS, France, Jan. 1.— (Canadian Press Cable.)—France defeated Scotland by 12 points to ten in the international rugby football game played here this afternoon. The score was first given out as 14 to 10, but owing to disagreement on the part of the touch judges the referee after the match declared that the second try scored by France had not been converted, thus deducting two points from the score.

The match, which was played in dull wheather, was witnessed by fifteen thousand people and following heavy rain the ground of the Pershing Stadium, where it was staged, was very muddy.

MISKE TAKES FINAL COUNT

Acute Bright's Disease Closes Heavyweight's Career—Dempsey Alone Knocked Him Out.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 2.—Billy Miske, St. Paul heavyweight pugilist, died yesterday at a hospital after a week's illness from an acute attack of Bright's Disease. He was 29 years old.

Although Miske had suffered from a chronic condition of the disease for four years he did not become seriously ill until recently. He spent Christmas with his family in St. Paul, but collapsed the next day and was brought to a hospital here. Saturday he became unconscious and remained so until his death.

Miske's ring career was full of action. He had engaged in 114 ring battles and had been knocked out only once. His illness had twice forced him to retire.

He began his career in 1913, engaging in a number of fights at Hudson, Wis., when Mike Collins, Minneapolis promoter, had the arena there. Among his opponents were Jack Dempsey, Tommy Gibbons, Fred Fulton, Battling Levinsky, Kid Norfolk, Billk Papke, Bill Brennan, Jack Dillon, Harry Greb, Gus Christie ,Bob Moha, Gunboat Smith, Jim Flynn, Willie Meehan, Mike O'Dowd, Bob Roper and others.

Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, was the only man to put the St. Paul heavyweight down for the count. Dempsey turned the trick in three rounds at Benton Harbor in July, 1920. In 1918 Miske fought a ten-round draw with Dempsey in St. Paul, and later lost a newspaper decision to the champion in six rounds at Philadelphia.

Miske and Tommy Gibbons met five times, the former winning on a foul in New York, in October, 1922, and the latter taking three decisions. One bout in Minneapolis resulted in a draw.

Early in 1920 Miske was informed by his physicians that he had Bright's disease and must retire from the ring. At the time Miske had just gone through bankruptcy after losing his entire savings—$45,000—in the automobile business.

"If I am going to die, it might as well happen in the ring as in bed," the St. Paul fighter replied. "Tell me what to do and I will beat the disease."

A diet was prescribed and six months later he was boxing aagin, making enough to fill the family exchequer .His last fight was at Omaha two months ago when he knocked out Bill Brennan in four rounds. Punishment absorbed in the ring in the past three years is believed to have done much to aggravate his ailment.

Miske was always popular with fistic followers because of his courage and aggressiveness in the ring. A widow and three children survive.

Molla Mallory Will Enter As Norwegian.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, ofrmer United States national women's champion, has announced that she wil compete in the Olympic games as a member of the Norwegian team if she is not allowed to play for the United States.

Mrs. Mallory is the second person to announce intention of adopting foreign colors as a result of being ruled ineligible to represent the United States. Willie Ritola, distance runner, last week announced he would run in the Olympic games as a representative of Finland.

Collegian Makes Good Use of Big Hands

CHARLES BICKING

Back 15 years ago the New York club of the American League had a southpaw pitcher by the name of Harry Abels who could grab a ball in his left hand and completely envelop it. Abels was a pitching curiosity. Large hands are supposed to be a decided asset to a pitcher since it enables him to get a much better grip on the ball. A majority of the star pitchers in the majors have big hands. It failed to work in Abel's case, however, as his stay in the majors was of short duration. He had plenty of stuff, but lacked control.

For years "Horse" Haggerty, star center of the New York Celtics, has been one of the curiosities of the basketball sport because of the way he can manipulate a basketball. A big pair of hands makes it possible for him to do all kinds of peculiar stunts with the ball to the embarrassment of the opposition.

BOWLING

EXAMINER LEAGUE.

In the Examiner Intershop League, the Directors forfeited three games to the Operators, failing to show up to play the last game in the first half. The Operators rolled off the three games to keep in the running for the high average prize, which is given to the bowler with the best average for the season. Harry Lacheur was high with 542 for his three games, and also got the high single for the evening and also for the league rolling 289. Taylor rolled 410 and Zeihr 421 for their three games.

SCHEDULES DO NOT START TILL NEXT WEEK.

The schedules for the five and ten pin leagues which appeared in Monday's edition should have read next week instead of this week. The first games in both leagues start Monday, January 7.

RING CROWNS SHIFTED WITH UNUSUAL SPEED

FOR tumultuous upheavals and rapidly changing championships the boxing season of the past year has known no equal. Four or five years back it was a rarity for more than one or two champions to drop by the wayside of decrepitude in the course of a season's milling.

This year no fewer than five championships of consequence changed hands, not considering the tin-plated phoneys invented by the New York Boxing Commission.

One of the new champions failed to hold on to his honors long enough to show them off properly before the home folks. That added another unique touch of the year's developments. Usually your champions play the game safely for a year or so, doing the no-decision circuit. This one was different.

Two really great fighters passed into oblivion. Johnny Kilbane, who won the featherweight title from Abe Attell and held it longer than any fighter in the history of the sport, went down to an inglorious knockout at the hands of Eugene Criqui of France.

It marked the first knockout scored by an invading boxer over an American champion in many years. Kilbane was but a faint, shadowy ghost of his former self and toppled over the first time Criqui hit him with a solid punch.

Criqui, in turn, was beaten by Johnny Dundee a short time afterward, and left for his homeland an ex-champion. Dundee richly deserved his honors as featherweight champion. He had been hot on Kilbane's trail for years.

Jimmy Wilde Passes.

The other great fighter to pass into the shadows was Jimmy Wilde, English flyweight. Wilde came to America and was beaten by Pancho Villa, the Filipino, who thus became the world's flyweight champion. Wilde, in his day, was a magnificent little fighter a master workman in the ring, a splendid hitter and as game as a pebble.

Battling Siki, celebrated cork-puller from Senegal, did not hold on to his worlds light heavyweight laurels very long. Siki went over to Dublin to battle Mike McTigue, a second-rate American fighter, and was beaten in 20 rounds of grotesque fighting. Siki came to America later in the year and was a mark for Kid Norfolk in his first fight on this side of the water. A willingness to swing at all times, and a heart of oak, were his only assets as a fighter.

Johnny Wilson of Boston finally decided to defend his middleweight title and was trimmed by Harry Greb of Pittsburg. Greb later defended the title successfully against Bryan Downey, Clevelander, who had previously scored an unallowed knockout over Wilson.

Five Title Losers.

Thus, the five fighters who lost their titles last year were Wilde, Kilbane, Criqui, Wilson and Siki. Champions who held the titles throughout the year were Joe Lynch, bantamweight; Benny Leonard, lightweight; Mickey Walker, welterweight, and Jack Dempsey, heavyweight.

We suppose just to keep the record straight, it should be mentioned that Gene Tunney successfully defended his title against Harry Greb as light heavyweight champion of America. And some reference should be made to the fact that Frankie Genaro of New York is accepted as the American flyweight champion, having beaten Vilia in a decision fight.

Leonard and Dempsey were the only successful champions who engaged in notable combats. Leonard scored a glorious triumph over Lew Tendler, his nearest rival, and Dempsey whipped Tommy Gibbons on points and Senor Firpo by a knockout, the details of both bouts, we imagine, being still fresh in the readers' memory.

ANOTHER SIKI LOSES

WINNIPEG, Jan. 1. — Reginald Siki, famous black wrestler, from Abyssinia, fell a prey to the skill and strength of Jack Taylor, Canadian wrestling champion in two straight falls after a match lasting about an hour, here this afternoon The negro grappler was fast and tricky and extended the local champion to the limit Taylor took the first fall in 35 minutes and 16 seconds with a head and body hold and won an exciting second fall in 25 minutes with a combination leg and arm hold

LAKEFIELD SPORTS AWAIT ICE ADVENT

Skating and Curling Fans Are Anxious—Clementi Lodge Installed Officers.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 2. — Rink Manager Morin is untiring in his efforts to put the rink in proper shape for skating and it is due to the lack of co-operation of the weather man that there has been no skating in the Christmas holidays. At present there is a good foundation and a few days of real Canadian winter weather would put the rink in first class shape. The company have made several improvements this season and it is not boasting to say that Lakefield's rink ranks second to none among Ontario villages and towns.

Curlers Anxious.

The curlers have been an anxious band of men during the past few weeks as it appeared as if the roarin' game might be among the missing pastimes of 1924. The mild weather, so good for the consumer of fuel, is death on curling and hockey. However the past few days of 1923 showed a low temperature and the spirits of the curlers rose correspondingly. Last season was a record season as the curling continued steadily till Easter, April 1 and for the next week at intervals. On April 14th the last stone was shot down and the rink re-echoed to the hoarse command of "sweep." This broke all previous records for curling in Lakefield.

Hockey Prospects.

The cold weather which appears to have come to stay is a reminder that the hockey season is now beginning. Ice and weather permitting Lakefield will play two games at home in the first three weeks of the new year in the Intermediate O.H.A., one with Peterboro on January 11th and one with Lindsay on January 18th.

The Lakefield and District League will doubtless be re-organized very soon in order to arrange a schedule of games which may restore to Lakefield the Casement hockey cup at present held by Warsaw.

The annual installation of officers of Clementi Lodge No. 313 A.F. & A.M. for the year of 1924 was held on Thursday evening last in the lodge room. NAVY TEAM'S TRIP TO THE COAST RESULTS IN TIE

PASADENA, Calif., Jan. 1.— The middies of Annapolis and the University of Washington played a 14-to-14 tie this afternoon during the annual East-West football game held in connection with the Tournament of Roses.

The game was one of the most brilliant intersectional contests in recent years. It was the Navy's tricky defence pitted against straight football, backed by Washington's weight and it came out a brilliant deadlock. A crowd of 48,000 persons saw the game

Griffith May Once More Try Managing

Who will manage the Washington Nationals in 1924.

As yet no one has been appointed to succeed Donie Bush, who, despite the fact that he finished fourth, was fired.

Failure to name a manager at the Chicago meeting of the major leagues has caused the gossips to spread the rumor that Clarke Griffith will once again don the managerial toga .

Griffith, now president and part owner of the Washington club, was for years a major league manager of note. When he was elevated to the presidency of the club, he decided to retire from the active end of the playing game.

The managerical germ, however, remained in his system, for Clyde Milan, who managed the club in 1922 and Donie Bush, who lead the team last season, say the policy of the club was largely dictated by Griffith

It is said that Frank Chance, who was once seriously considered as Bush's successor, refused to consider the proposition because he did not believe he would be given entire control, the only basis on which he would accept the management.

CLARKE GRIFFITH.

Failure to land several desirable candidates that Griffith had under consideration, is said to have caused him to seriously consider the advisability of again taking up the reins.

EXTRA HOLE PLAY MARKED BATTLES FOR GOLF TITLES

By JOE WILLIAMS.

THE American golf season of 1923 was marked by a closeness of play and bitterness of contest unexampled in the history of the sport. Three of the four major championships required extra holes to determine the ultimate victors, and at least one of the important sectional tournaments demanded additional playing moments.

Another unusual touch was the feat of one major champion repeating his victory of the previous year. In golf nowadays the defending champion rarely ever repeats. Gene Sarazen, stocky Italian professional, contributed a bright page to the annals of the game when he came home in front in the professionals' match play tournament at Pelham Bay, defeating Walter Hagen in the finals at the second extra hole.

Sarazen started the year with two major titles, the open, which he won at Skokie, and the match play, which he won at Oakmont. He was unable to duplicate his triumph in the open but he made a gallant fight and scored a notable win in the match play.

Jones Won Open.

The open went to Bobby Jones, celebrated Atlanta amateur, who won at Inwood after finishing in a tie with Bobby Cruikshank, mite of a Scotch professional. In the 18-hole play-off the following day, a play-off that kept the immense gallery in frenzied suspense from opening tee shot to final putt, Jones won.

It was the southerner's first victory in a national tournament. The year before he had finished in a tie with John Black of California for second place, in the open, one breathless stroke back of Sarazen. Admirers of Jones felt that his victory in the open would serve to carry him along to a victory in the national amateur later in the season at Flossmoor but they were doomed to disappointment.

This event went to Max Marston of Philadelphia, a dark horse in the pre-tournament calculations. Marston proved a courageous fighter rather than a golfer of blinding brilliancy and achieved a deserved triumph, winning from Jesse Sweetster, defending champion, in a finals match that went to the thirty-eighth green.

You will note the two professional events, won by Sarazen and Jones, demanded overtime effort, as did the amateur. The women's event, however, was decided without extended effort. It produced a new champion in Edith Cummings of Chicago, and marked the temporary overthrow of Glenna Collett, who had been a sensation the year before.

Edith Cummings.

Miss Cummings drew Alexa Stirling, thrice holder of the title in the finals and handed her a trimming after being 2 down at lunch time. The new women's champion and her brother, Dexter, intercollegiate champion, form the strongest brother and sister team in America, a team rivaled only by the Wethereds of England.

The most spectacular match developed in a sectional tournament was the meeting between Chick Evans and Jesse Sweetster in the finals of the western amateur. Evans won at the thirty-eighth hole, thereby reversing a victory Sweetster had scored over him in the national finals at Brooklin a year ago.

Other notable winners of the year were Miriam Burns, women's western, Jock Hutchison, western open, Eddie Held, Trans-Mississippi, Richard Walsh, public parks, Ira Couch, national junior and Perry Adair, southern.

YOUNG STRIBLING WON.

NEWARK, N.J., Jan. 2.—(Canadian Press)—Young Stribling, Georgia schoolboy boxer, decisively outpointed Dave Rosenburg of Brooklyn, in a slashing 12-round match before a holiday crowd of 7,000 this afternoon in the First Regiment Armory here, newspaper critics agreed.

Stribling displayed superiod speed, strength and hitting power from start to finish. The southerner weighed 160 1-2 and Rosenburg 160 1-3.

The bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her father, wearing a dainty wedding dress of rose and mauve shot taffeta, with hat to match, and carrying a boquet of oprelia roses with maiden hair fern. Mrs. Fred Godfrey, of Toronto, a cousin of the bride, was matron-of-honor, and wore a becoming dress of navy canton crepe. The groom was supported by Mr. Orval Kidd, of Fraserville. The church, still bright with its beautifully arranged Christmas decorations, was well filled with friends whose personal interest was shown by their attendance.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home, fourteen guests sitting down to the dainty wedding breakfast. Mr. and Mrs. Dawson left on the noon train, by C.P.R. from Cavanville, for Ogdensburg, N.Y., where they will be guests of the bride's sister, Mrs. W. Conliffe. NOT MUCH WORK BEING OFFERED Lumber Camps Are Taking on a Few Men—Not Many Idle.

Since before Christmas things have been rather slack at the local labor bureau, but things are expected to pick up soon. During the last week there were 23 new applicants and 19 placements, which shows a steady decrease in placements during the last six weeks. There are few men accepting work on the farms and the wages range from $15 to $20 per month. One farmer offered $1 per day which is considered a very high wage at this time of the year on account of the slack time on the farm.

The lumber camps are taking on a few men from $40 to $50 per month. These men are all experienced. It is expected that work in the bush will pick up a great deal as soon as there is enough snow for hauling logs.

Most of the factories are stock-taking at the present time and very few men are being taken on.

BEGINS FIFTH YEAR AS REEVE

J. C. Strickland Deals With Village and County Affairs in Acknowledging Re-election.

LAKEFIELD, January 2.— After the municipal nominations closed on Monday night, the usual custom of having speeches from the candidates was followed.

T. W. B. Marling, the village clerk, occupied the chair.

Reeve J. C. Strickland was the first speaker. Reeve Strickland, who has been re-elected by acclamation, begins his fifth term of office, and has a creditable record as Reeve. Mr. Strickland assured his supporters of his intention to carry on as heretofore with the best interests of the village always before him. He has seen a good deal of the country, and has seen no village which is better than Lakefield, and feels that it is the duty of the ratepayers to boost and not to knock the village. It is boosting which makes for progress. In the four years of the speaker's administration Lakefield's financial position has been much improved, the current debt being reduced by half. Regarding Hydro, it is one of the greatest of village assets, and has not cost the village anything, as it is self-supporting. The debentures as they come due are paid off by the Hydro out of the Hydro funds. It is the duty of every ratepayer to boost Hydro, which is one of the best assets of the Province of Ontario.

Regarding the new bridge for Lakefield, Mr. Strickland is strongly in favour of a cement bridge as being the cheapest and best in the long run. An iron bridge, while not as expensive to construct, is a heavy item of expense in its yearly upkeep, while a well constructed cement bridge is permanent and requires no yearly repairs or painting.

Mr. E. A. Tanner.

Mr. Tanner was the next speaker, and in declining to stand for Reeve he thanked his nominators, and announced that he would stand for Councillor. Mr. Tasner was elected in February last to fill the vacancy on the Council which was made by the appointment of Mr. Marling as village clerk, and took his place at the March meeting. He was elected as chairman of the Street and Sidewalk Committee, and feels assured that he kept the roads in as good condition as he found them, with a decreased expenditure. Culverts were built and improvements made on Concession Street and Queen Street. The financial position of the village is improved during the past year, and the speaker hopes for a greater improvement in 1924. Referring to Hydro, Mr. Tanner appeared to be rather sceptical of its advantage and the value of the system as a municipal asset.

Mr. Walter Madill thanked his nominators, and announced his intention of being a candidate for the Council.

"Kentucky" Member.

Mr. N. A. Moore, who has been a Councillor for the past two years, efficiently representing "Kentucky" (west side of the river) announced his intention of standing, and his confidence in the financial position of the village which is getting better all the time.

Mr. Moore was chairman of the Property Committee.

Mr. Leonard, as chairman of the Charity Committee, reports little activity in that special line. He also will allow his name to stand.

Mr. E. R. Tate, a member of the Hydro-Electric Commission, expressed his keen satisfaction at being called on to make a statement regarding the local Hydro Commission which has lately been rather severely knocked.

May See Books.

A complaint has been made that no statement is issued by the Commission. The system of book-keeping, which is rather intricate, is the system endorsed by the Hydro-Electric Board of Ontario, and which enables them to work out the cost of each separate item of expense. Mr. Tate gave a very concise statement of the local Commission up to 30th November, 1923, which made clear to all present the amount of revenue and expense of the system, and which showed a gratifying result. The Hydro is a joint stock company in which the consumers are shareholders and the books of the local Commission may be seen at any time at the speaker's office by any ratepayer. Regarding the complaint that more money was borrowed than was actually used, the speaker feels assured that the heads of the Hydro who had made the estimates formed the idea of the local Commission having a balance for emergencies. Abalance for such contingencies as ice storms, which are disastrous to electric wiring, or severe electrical storms, is necessary. Regarding complaints anent the proper registering of meters, the meters can be tested any time on the fairest possible terms. A reduction in rates will be put in force on 1st January.

MISS MARGERY WILSON WAS INDISPOSED HERE

Had a Touch of Ptomaine Poisoning—A Bouquet From Miss Peterboro—Interview With Actress.

"After you have been in it for awhile, and have played with the big ones, there is little but the money side of it that attracts one," was the way Miss Margery Wilson dismissed in a few words a career that many a "movie struck" young girl would probably regard as the height of happiness. "I would like to do one or more pictures and then stop. I want time for rest and travel and education," declared Miss Wilson, who appeared in Peterboro in person at the Grand Opera House in connection with the filming of "Insinuation," a picture written, produced and directed by herself, in which she also appears.

"A touch of ptomaine poisoning" was the way the young lady described an indisposition that forced her to spend most of her time in Peterboro, between performances, lying down in her room at the hotel. Food poisoning contracted during her Christmas holiday down in Vermont, or when coming through to Peterboro on the train, was the reason given for her enforced rest.

Miss Wilson is pretty; the thin slender vital type, with pointed features, lovely white teeth, brilliant dark eyes and dark brown, curly hair. She talks animatedly, even when ill, and has an atmosphere of refinement. A cluster of deep pink rose buds from an unknown "Miss Peterboro" elicited her admiration, and she talked enthusiastically about the merits of "Mah Jong," the Chinese game, a beautiful ivory set of which had been sent her for Christmas. Louis Hemon's "Maria de Chandelaine," the appealing French-Canadian story, lay on her dressing-table.

"No woman can be lovely or graceful in a short skirt," said Miss Wilson, who considers this year's styles as being more attractive than those of many a season past. Her own clothes, some of which were visible in a half-opened wardrobe, were dainty in the extreme. A dark fur coat, with big, snuggly collar; a gold brocade with slippers and stockings to match, a henna crepe with rose point collar and cuffs, an embroidered crepe with bouffant hips and dark fur trimming at neck and hem, an orchid dressing gown and the flare of a length of cerise velvet, peeped out above a pile of pale pink lingerie. "Clothes," declared Miss Wilson, "do not bother me at all. I never think of them unless I have some particular use for them in my work." Queried regarding the use of a certain type of clothes in pictures, she said that the director usually orders those gowns for his players that will fit into the mood of the picture as he sees it. The director, according to her, has many a role to play. He must project to the mind of his actors the impression that he wishes to convey in the picture. Whereas an actor, as Miss Wilson remarked, makes an impression on his audience within the two or three hours required to complete the production he appears in, a movie actor must work out in weeks or months the same idea. Day after day, he adds to the story as it nears completion. "That is part of the director's work, too," was the answer to the question as to how the actor or actress assumes the character and feeling that was dropped a day or so before, to go on with the picture in the same frame of mind.

Miss Wilson, who has been working in pictures for the past seven years, had a long stage experience prior to going into the silent drama work. She considers that the mental attitude formed by the stage work is an excellent help in movie production, where the mechanics, however, are entirely different, and thinks that an ex-actor or actress does much better on the screen than the novice, who is ignorant of the traditions and atmosphere of the world of make believe.

The film, "Insinuation," although the first complete production by Miss Wilson, was not her first contribution to the art of the screen. When working with D. W. Griffiths, she said, a day rarely passed that the actors were not called together to work out some idea that had come to them, "we were practically always rehearsing." The picture "Insinuation" took about six weeks to complete.

DETROIT CAFES HAD WET STUFF FOR NEW YEARS

DETROIT, Jan. 2. — Sick from synthetic liquor, disillusioned and weary, the last of Detroit's band of celebrators crept home at 6 a.m today with a few paper caps, pasteboard horns and tin whistels in payment for the estimated $1,500,000 they dropped to cafe, hotel and road house proprietors as tribute to the New Year. It is believed 100,000 took part in the cabaret festivities.

The arrival of 1024 say a carnival of drunkenness in downtown establishments that equalled or surpassed even the largely wet days, scornful disregard of the Volstead Act by both proprietors and patrons and a conspicuous absence of police and dry agents. No more liquor flowed than other years, perhaps, but the stuff that Detroit poured into glasses from 11 p. m. on was deadlier and more devastating in its effect than anything ever taken here before.

When the church bells announced the arrival of the New Year jazz-mad crowds were jamming every inch of the dance floors ribald cries dance hats and false noses, young and profanity sounded above the music, top balloons floated everywhere, men and women cavorted about their tables, grotesque in girls, many of high school age, disported at their tables with maudlin hilarity, passed about bottles and then lurched over in their seats stupefied by drink.

Drink Everywhere.

It was drink, drink, drink, everywhere. One of two establishments posted rules forbidding it, but the rules were ignored and the waiters did not care to offend. Bottles bearing whisky labels, prescription stickers and some moonshine, sat openly on the tables. No one bothered no one cared. Everyone had a good time.

No public entertainment place that boasted any degree of exclusinveness was above criticism They differed only in the degree of drinking they tolerated. It was noticed that in the humbler establishments where there was little or no cover charge the disturbance was comparatively slight.

Celebrators in evening dress began thronging the downtown streets at 10 p. m. They disappeared quickly most of them having reservations. Shortly before midnight appeared the last minute celebrators, motoring vainly from one establishment to another seeking tables space, begging with frend waiters and managers, pleading, offering them bribes, but in every case the answer was a curt: "sorry we're sold out."

You think that my questions are trifling, dear? Let me ask another one:

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

COPPERFIELD FILM SOURCE OF DELIGHT.

Charles Dickens' Great Romance Gives Immense Satisfaction.

Not in many moons has any audience left a theatre in such a happy frame of mind as that which saw the picturization of Charles Dicken's famous Novel, "David Copperfield," at the Royal last night. The story is too well-known to need any repetition of its theme in these columns, yet all the characters that the great author made impressionable in the romance of young Copperfield were given full play upon the screen.

Once more we met old friends, such as Mr. Micawber, who was "always waiting for something to turn up," and which did turn up in a manner that last night's audience will not forget for a long time. 'David Copperfield" as a picture has been well done. It is not cheap nor tawdry but well sustained.

The acting company comes up to all expectations, the work of several of the principals deserving special mention for the consummate skill in which they were portrayed. Duddy Martin was bully as the boy David while Gorm Smidd covered himself with glory as David grown up. The amiable character of Mr. Micawber was capitally portrayed by Frederik Jensen.

The woman displayed talent, Karen Winter as Agnes and Karina Bell as Dora playing the respective sweethearts of David Copperfield pleasingly. Karen Caspersen was up to expectations as Peggitty, David's nurse. Other roles were also capably enacted.

The patrons of the Royal will find a delightful evening's entertainment in "David Copperfield." It closes its local engagement To-Night.

BIG SPORTING MELODRAMA "THE KNOCKOUT" AT ROYAL THURS.-FRI.-SAT.

An interesting all-British photoplay, "The knock-Out," is coming to the Royal Theatre. With Rex Davis in the leading parts, supported by Tom Reynolds, some exceptionally fine acting might be expected—and the public wil not be disappointed for, in this respect, as in all details the film is worthy of the highest praise.

The story tells of Billy Berks, a Cockney coster-vendor of garden produce to the proletariat—who discovers and develops latent boxing ability. Deserting his barrow for the Ring, he sets out to become English champion boxer. Backed by a Peer, he goes ahead rapidly. Billy gets married to his "donah" but, pursued by his patron's sister, Lady Clare, he finds matrimony a troubled sea.

Then he becomes a racehorse owner and despite the evil machinations of a rival owner, wins on of the highest prizes of the Turf. Badly "stung" by Billy's success, this rival, Ballinger, draws him into a final boxing match.

The unscrupulous Ballinger determines to win by foul means if fair means will not serve his purpose and acording, has Billy kidnapped. On the night of the fight Billy is rescued and, after a thrilling motor ride, makes his bow and beats his opponent despite the hardships he has endured. Then—,but we must leave the film itself to reveal the astonishing climax to this excellent story.

Rex Davis, who takes the lead in "The Knock-Out," shortly coming to the Royal Theater, is one of England's brightest film stars. A fine boxer and all-round athlete, he has appeared in several outstanding sporting pictures with great success.

AT THE GRAND.

Probably the funniest bill that the Rex Stock Company has ever offered its patrons is the farce comedy, "Over Night," which will be presented for the last time at the Grand tonight. Capacity audiences saw this production yesterday and there has not been any more hearty laughter heard in the local theatre for many a moon. "Over Night" is a scream from curtain to curtain, a series of most laughable mix-ups in which two honeymoon couples and a lot of other people are involved. Rex has the part of Richard Kettle, a "nut" type which he offers in a Harold Lloyd mak-up and he is at his best in the amusing complications of this most entertaining comedy. Zana Vaughn is the bride who gets away with the wrong husband on her honeymoon and she does excellent work in the role. Herbert Lewis and Ethel Van Orden are the other pair of honeymooners and both give a capitol interpretation of their parts. Billy Yule scores as a very funy hotel clerk.. Billy Seymour is excellent as Al Rivers. Hazel Williams provides many a laugh as the woman with a memory system all her own and Fred Dampier has the novel part as Mr. Cleveland. Billy Yule's speciality in which he gives a couple of recitations and a Harry Lauder imitation in splendid style is a feature. "Over Night" will rank as one of the best of the Rex offerings.

THE ORIGINALS IN "RAPID FIRE."

The Originals' new revue, "Rapid Fire," which comes to the Grand Opera House next Friday and Saturday evenings, with Saturday matinee, is an entirely new show, containing an elaborate programme of everything from light opera to jazz. There are something like twenty-five splendid musical numbers, including the following: "Knocked 'Em in the Old Kent Road" and "The Stoker," sung by Red Newman; "Digging in the Valley of the Kings," by Bertram Langley; "Hidden Treasure" and "My Dear Old Mother's Song Book," sung by Tom Young; "Dirty Work" by Charlie McLean and Red Newman; "Carmina," sung by Gene Pearson; "Monty of the Mounties" and "When Catherine Ruled," sung by Jock Holland and the chorus; "Temple Bells," "Kashmiri Song" and a selection of Scottish numbers by the quartette with Bertram Langley, Tom Young, Bill Tennent and Jerry Brayford; "You'd Never Know the Old Place Now," by Jimmie Goode; "Rapid Fire" and the revised "Dumbell Rag," by the entire company, and a number of other gems.

Leonard Young, Ivor Ayre, Alan Murray, Bertram Langley, Charlie McLean, Fred. Fenwick and Jack McLaren have all contributed to the musical end of the production remarkable material. In a special setting called "Songs of Long Ago, each member of the company appears from a large book frame and sings the chorus of a well-known, old-fashioned song. This particular musical offerings the Originals have done, which includes the following favorites: "In the Good Old Summer Time," by Jerry Brayford; "The Banks of the Wabash," by Alex. Murray; "The Man Who Broke the Bank," by Red Newman; "In the Gloaming," by Bill Tennent; "Ta-ra-ra-ra-boom-de-ay," by Jock Holland; "Comrades," by Bertram Langley; Cake Walk, by Jimmie Goode and Charlie McLean; "Last Rose of Summer," by Gene Pearson; "Annie Rooney," by Bob Anderson; and "Come Listen to the Band," by Fred. Fewick.

AT THE CAPITOL.

The producers of "St. Elmo," the famous novel by Augusta Evans-Wilson that has thrilled the youth of many bygone generations, as well as those of to-day, have departed in a few ways from the story in their dramatization for the screen of the love tale of Edna Earle and the immortal posour, St. Elmo Murray, but they have achieved, principally through the art of the star, John Gilbert, an extremely interesting picture. Memories of the thrilling book over which countless youths and maidens have pored with bated breath are in the scenes where St. Elmo exercises his right to a terribly broken heart and a misogynist's viewpoint. He is probably more fascinating, as in the book, when he is tearing about, hurting people's feelings and creating a rumpus generally, than when he finally reforms and preaches peaceably from the evangelical pulpit.

John Gilbert makes a magnificent St. Elmo. Bessie Love is slightly ineffective as the gentle Edna, but she makes a good foil for the imperious, black-haired hero. An oad incident in the story is the portrayal of Beelzebub entering the soul of the man who has been betrayed by his dearest friends and his withdrawal when St. Elmo kneels in repentance.

The Capitol is showing this picture for the last time this evening, along with a Mermaid comedy and its usual run of interesting short-reelers. The comedy, "Uncle Sam," deals with the adventures of an old gentleman who proclaims himself dead, and watches the reading of his last will and testament from the safe vantage point of a large oil painting of himself.
